Russia Refuses To Recognize British Contraband Rules; Launches Protest

Note Declares List Violates International Law and Says Soviet Will Claim Compensation

Moscow, Oct. 25 (AP) — Soviet Russia tonight refused to recognize validity of Britain's contraband regulations and informed the London government that she reserved the right to claim compensation for any losses incurred in enforcement of them.

In a note handed to British Ambassador Sir William Seeds by assistant commissar of foreign affairs Vladimir Potemkin, the Soviet government declared it considered the British contraband list a violation of the principles of international law.

The Russian note, replying to British notification of the contraband list and the establishment of contraband control ports, said:

"By including in its lists of contraband such articles and goods as fuel, paper, cotton, fodder for agricultural animals, footwear, clothing and materials for their manufacture and even all foodstuffs — bread, meat, butter, sugar and other foodstuffs—the British government in fact proclaims contraband basic articles of mass consumption and creates the possibility of unlimited arbitrariness in classing all articles of popular consumption as war contraband.

"This inevitably leads to profound disorganization of the supply of the peaceful civil population with necessities, gravely endangers the health and lives of the peaceful population and portends innumerable calamities for the masses of people."

"It is known that universally recognized principles of international law do not permit air bombardment of peaceful population of women, children and aged people.

"On the same grounds, the Soviet government deems it not permissible to deprive a peaceful population of foodstuffs, fuel and clothing and thus subject children, women and aged people and invalids to every hardship and to starvation by proclaiming goods of popular consumption as war contraband.

Questions Validity

"Proceeding from the above, the Soviet government declares that it does not agree to the note of the British government of Sept. 6 and refuses to recognize any validity of this note.

"The government of the U. S. S. R. similarly declares that it does not agree to the British note of Sept. 11 and that it does not recognize any validity that this note informs of unilateral institution by the British government of a system of control of merchant ships of neutral countries in ports specially designated for this purpose by the British government.

"The Soviet regards as wholly unfounded and arbitrary the demand for obligatory calling of these ships at the above ports, reinforced in addition, by a threat of forcible bringing of ships into these ports.

"Such measures violate the elementary principles of the freedom of merchant shipping. Nor do they conform to the international declaration of Feb. 26, 1909 and the decision of the Hague tribunal of

Nazi Military Leaders Confer with Hitler on Next Moves in the War

Goering Newspaper Says Bombs May Soon Shower on England; French Leave German Soil

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP) — Military leaders met at the chancellery today and observers wondered whether the conference was concerned with Germany's avowed "fight to the finish" against Britain and France.

More than twenty generals and staff officers attended the meeting which lasted several hours. Foreign circles said Adolf Hitler participated in at least part of the conference.

The German press with one voice echoed Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's fight speech at Danzig last night with such assertions as "there will be no stopping now."

May Bomb Britain

The National Zeitung of Essen, close to Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, intimated once again that bombs may shower on the British Isles as Nazi patience over Britain's "inability to understand" apparently neared an end.

"The moment has come when the war desired by England must rain down upon the British Isle itself," National Zeitung said.

"The patience of a people has limits. In their boundless indignation the German people to a man now turn against the British war inciters in order, by a fight which hereafter will be relentless, to create the necessary guarantees for their security from such irresponsible machination."

Responsible officials said virtually all French troops now had left German soil.

French Company Retreats

A high command communique stated a French company was driven across the border yesterday.

Military authorities declined to comment on British claims that reconnoitering planes flew over Berlin, Hamburg and Magdeburg last night.

Nazis regarded as favorable the reaction in neutral countries, especially Italy, to von Ribbentrop's address expressing German determination to fight on.

"This leads to the belief," said an article entitled "fight!" in Boersen-Zeitung, "that not only the meaning and full implication of von Ribbentrop's statement are understood but that the full measure of Britain's war guilt is recognized."

Lafe Williams Dies In Electric Chair

Columbus, O., Oct. 25 (AP)—Lafe Williams, convicted slayer of a sixty-five-year old Butler county farmer, died in the electric chair at Ohio penitentiary tonight.

Williams entered the death cell smiling. "It is better to go this way than if I had been on the outside," he declared. "I am fully prepared now, and I am going to the right place."

The electrocution of Williams emptied death row at Ohio penitentiary for the first time in twenty-three years.

Williams was convicted of the bludgeon slaying of his employer, Henry Graham, July 30, 1938.

Ohio Divided over Bigelow's Plan To Retire at Age 60

Feverish Campaign Being Waged in All Sections of the State

Cleveland, Oct. 25 (AP)—Ohio tonight was in the midst of its most feverish "issue campaign" since prohibition.

In halls and homes speakers denounced and extolled a plan which would guarantee a monthly income of $40 to $50 to every retired wage earner over 60.

Newspapers, street car cards, the radio, house-to-house canvassers laden with pamphlets carried their messages to the people, who will vote Nov. 7 whether to write the guarantee into Ohio's constitution.

Wallace Asserts Country Needs FDR For Another Term

San Francisco, Oct. 25 (AP)—Secretary Wallace told reporters today the European war made the desirability of a third term for President Roosevelt more evident than ever.

"Since the outbreak of the war in Europe," the agriculture secretary said, "it has become apparent that the country needs the talents and training of Mr. Roosevelt not only in meeting problems of the country that arise out of the situation abroad, but in handling domestic problems."

He paused, then weighing each word, continued:

"Mr. Roosevelt's background seems to equip him with exceptional qualifications as a helmsman to steer the country through both foreign and domestic troubles to a safe harbor."

To another question—whether it was his belief President Roosevelt would keep the United States out of war, Wallace answered: "It is to be assumed that the president will continue his efforts to keep this country out of war."

The third term statement aroused much discussion here as there had been some suggestion that Wallace might be considering becoming a candidate himself.

Neutrality Bill Amendments Fail To Win Support Of U. S. Senators

Only a Handful Favor Changes Asked by Johnson and Others; Fight Sure in House

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Oct. 25 (AP)—Big Senate majorities bowled over one neutrality bill amendment after another today, disclosing a firm disposition on the part of the administration to stick to the bill as it now is and submit it to the House in that form.

In rapid fire fashion, the Senate rejected:

An amendment by Senator Johnson (D-Colo) to abolish presidential discretion in making the provisions of the act effective when wars break out in other lands. The proposal was beaten 61 to 26.

Another Johnson amendment to eliminate the bill's provision that Congress as well as the president may make a determination that state of war exists abroad, and invoke the neutrality law. The vote was 75 to 14.

Amendments Quickly Killed

These amendments were quickly disposed of, but the Senate then ran into prolonged debate on a proposal by Senator La Follette (Prog-Wis) that exports to belligerents and neutrals alike be limited to normal, peace-time quotas. He said this should be done to prevent "a distortion of American economy, a post war deflatoon and the exhaustion of natural resources." This proposal was beaten 61 to 22.

The day's proceedings brought the Senate very close to a vote on the one big issue of the long debate, the repeal of the present embargo on arms shipments to belligerent nations. Other amendments remained to be disposed of beforehand, but a decision on the embargo question was expected by tomorrow with a final vote on the bill probably soon thereafter.

Opponents Look To House

Opponents of repeal, having given up all hopes of winning in the Senate, were counting on the House to keep the embargo intact. But in this expectation, House leaders said they were doomed to disappointment. Managers of the bill there claimed a comfortable, though not large majority for repeal, and obviously were disturbed by the claims of the Senate oppositionists.

Senator Bankhead told his press conference that the neutrality measure would not receive "attention" in the House until Monday.

Winnie Ruth Judd, Slayer of Two Women, Escapes from Insane Ward

"Blonde Tigress" Fixes Bed To Look as Though She Was Asleep and Vanishes from Phoenix

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 25 (AP)—Trunk murderess Winnie Ruth Judd, who engineered a clever ruse to flee the Arizona state hospital, left with Gov. Bob Jones tonight a promise to surrender after she sees her husband.

She added the condition, however, "that you promise me Dr. Saxe (Dr. Louis J. Saxe, hospital superintendent) will be forced to leave me alone."

The golden-haired, 34-year-old slayer of two youthful nurses explained in a letter to the governor that she planned the escape only to see her parents here and her husband, Dr. William C. Judd, patient in a Los Angeles veterans hospital.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 25 (AP)—Attendants at the Arizona State hospital for the insane turned down the sheets of Winnie Ruth Judd's bed today—and found only boxes, bottles and cakes of soap. The trunk slayer of two women had escaped.

The blond, 34-year-old slayer, under sentence to be hanged if she ever recovers her sanity, stayed away from a dance for inmates last night to pile up the boxes and bottles to simulate a body in the bed.

"It was almost perfect," said Y. C. White, executive secretary to Governor Bob Jones.

Apparently Mrs. Judd escaped about 9:30 last night but her disappearance was not discovered until shortly before 11 a. m. today.

Visits Her Parents

She paid her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. H. J. McKinnell, a hurried, fifteen-minute visit, then vanished into the night. Her father is ill and bedfast.

Behind her she left a letter addressed to Governor Jones. Mrs. McKinnell who delivered it to the governor's office, said the latter advised the governor Mrs. Judd would return to the hospital "when they quit persecuting me."

Mrs. McKinnell added the letter also advised the governor Mrs. Judd would telephone him regarding her proposal to return. Jones had received no word from her late today however.

Placed Bodies in Trunks

The Judd trunk murder cases provided a sensation eight years ago. Mrs. Judd's companions, Agnes Ann Lerol and Hedvig Samuelson, were slain in a fit of jealously, in a Phoenix apartment Oct. 16, 1931.

Quebec's Election Won By the Liberal Party

Union Nationale Government of Province Badly Defeated by Party Headed by King

Quebec, Oct. 25 (Canadian Press)—The Union Nationale government of the province of Quebec, fighting for provincial autonomy, was defeated in a war-time election today by the Liberals, the party of the Dominion government at Ottawa.

Results of balloting for eighty-six seats in the provincial legislature stood as follows on the basis of early returns.

Premier Called Election

Quebec Premier Maurice Duplessis had called the election for support in his contention that war expenditures of the dominion government were being made at the expense of relief and other problems in his province.

His supporters said the Union Nationale administration was Quebec's only safeguard against conscription.

The election result was a victory for the party of Canadian Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King, under whose leadership Canada went to war at the side of Great Britain.

MacKenzie King has three ministers in his cabinet from Quebec, each of whom had announced he would resign from the dominion government if the party should be defeated in the Quebec provincial balloting.

Former Premier Adelard Godbout, provincial head of the Liberals, returns to power as a result of the election.

Premier Elected

Premier Duplessis himself was elected but at least five of his cabinet ministers were defeated. They were William Tremblay, minister of labor, Henri Auger, minister of colonization, Bona Dussault, minister of agriculture, Anatole Carignan, minister of roads, and T. J. Coonan, minister without portfolio.

Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal, returning to provincial politics, was elected as an Independent in Montreal-St. Mary division in a race against four other candidates.

Nazi Crew Free, Washington Told In Dispatch from Russ Government

No Details Received by State Department; Hull Expects To Secure Early Release of Ship

Washington, Oct. 25. (AP)—Ambassador Laurence L. Steinhardt reported to the state department tonight that the foreign office at Moscow had assured him the American officers and crew of the City of Flint were safe aboard the vessel at Murmansk.

The state department made public Steinhardt's report that the crew was safe immediately upon its receipt here and indicated further details were expected within a short time.

The status of the crew had been the principal concern of authorities since the City of Flint was seized by a German raider.

German Crew Released

The remainder of Steinhardt's bare report that the American crew was safe, however, dealt with information that the German prize crew had been released from internment and gave no further details on the Americans.

The ambassador relayed a Tass (Soviet news agency) dispatch from Murmask as follows:

"The vessel is remaining at Murmansk pending definite establishment of the nature of her cargo. Ambassador Steinhardt immediately telephoned an official of the foreign office and was informed that it was that official's understanding that the German prize crew had been released from internment but were not being put back on board the City of Flint."

Steinhardt quoted the dispatch as saying the City of Flint had put into Murmansk because her machinery had been damaged.

At the same time, Secretary Hull told reporters that the government would follow the case through to its logical conclusion from the standpoint of international law and American rights. He did not amplify this statement, saying he preferred to wait until all the facts were ascertained.

Officials previously had made clear that the United States expected to get the vessel back. The freighter, which is owned by the maritime commission and operated by the United States Lines under charter, was seized by a German raider and sent into Kola Bay, Northern Russia, with a German prize crew aboard.

Hull Wants Facts

Secretary Hull asserted that what he wanted to hear most right now was news about the crew of forty-one or forty-two men.

He added that this government was relying on the Russian government to give full information and was not sending a representative

Goes To Live with Her Parents, Leaving Him in Their Home

Hollywood, Oct. 25 (AP)—Al Jolson, noted "mammy" singer of screen and stage, said today he and Ruby Keeler had separated and she had consulted lawyers with divorce in view.

Jolson appeared broken hearted as he told of their separation after he had taken her to a prize fight Tuesday night.

"I hope everything will work out all right," he said he told her as he left her at the home of her parents. "I hope you'll come back right away."

"Maybe," she replied.

He said he talked with her again today but learned she already had conferred with lawyers.

Jolson said that since the separation he had offered her $400 a week for life, with a lump settlement of $50,000 if she married again, and a $100,000 trust fund for their adopted child. She rejected this as insufficient, he said, on advice of lawyers.

He described their differences as "family troubles, not important enough in my opinion to bring a divorce."

Miss Keeler and Jolson were introduced by Texas Guinan, the late nightclub hostess, and married a year later, Sept. 21, 1928. The singer honeymooned in Europe with his 19-year-old bride.

WANTS A DIVORCE

Ruby Keeler

Jolson, star of one of the first talking pictures, has continued in demand for radio and film work. Miss Keeler, once a top rank screen actress, has not appeared recently in pictures.

Until Miss Keeler fully makes up her mind, Jolson said, he will continue to occupy their Encino home, near Hollywood. She will live with her parents.

Rail Association Is Charged with Conspiracy against Motor Carriers

236 Member Railroad Companies also Accused by Government

Washington, Oct. 25. (AP)—Charging that the Association of American railroads had conspired to prevent cooperation between railroads and motor carriers, the Justice Department filed a civil action today against the association and 236 member railroad companies.

The action was instituted in Federal District court for the District of Columbia.

The complaint alleged that the railroads had "refused to establish through rates, joint rates and fares, and joint billing arrangements with motor carriers in order to eliminate competition." This policy, the department said was laid down in a resolution adopted by the association on June 25, 1937.

J. J. Pelley, president of the association, said in a statement that he welcomed the suit "in order that it may be once and for all authoritatively determined to what extent the railroads are permitted to declare sound policies' consistent with public interest."

Pelley added that the A.A.A. resolution amounted to "no more than advice to its members, representing the consensus as to what constitutes a sound policy."

Announcing the suit, Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general in charge of anti-trust prosecutinons, said that through handling arrangements were "indispensable factors" in developing and operating a transportation system and that without them the nation's railway system "would fall apart in a day."

500 Government Employes Named As Members of League for Peace

Dies Committee Stirs Up Storm of Controversy in the House

Washington, Oct. 25 (AP)—The Dies Committee stirred up a storm of controversy today by making public what it described as a "membership and mailing list" of the American League for Peace and Democracy which included the names of some 500 government employes. The committee previously had branded the league a "Communist front organization."

The storm broke in the committee room, on the floor of the House of Representatives and in the offices of federal agencies where those named are employed.

Rep. Dempsey (D-N Mex), a committee member who was absent when the names were announced, protested that the committee's action was "most damnable" and "most unAmerican."

Rep. Coffee (D-Wash) precipated a rough and tumble debate in the House by shouting:

Precipitates Debate

"I call on the House and the Roosevelt administration to repudiate this unwarranted intrusion of American rights which violates the principles of American democracy."

And from the offices of the federal employes named, some of whom hold high positions in the administration, came a steady stream of statements. Some denied they were members of the league, others said they had been but were no longer active, and still others said they merely were on the league's mailing list. Some said emphatically they were not Communists.

Harry C. Lambertson, chairman of the Washington branch, said the

Note Declares List Violates International Law and Says Soviet Will Claim Compensation

Moscow, Oct. 25 (AP) — Soviet Russia tonight refused to recognize validity of Britain's contraband regulations and informed the London government that she reserved the right to claim compensation for any losses incurred in enforcement of them.

In a note handed to British Ambassador Sir William Seeds by assistant commissar of foreign affairs Vladimir Potemkin, the Soviet government declared it considered the British contraband list a violation of the principles of international law.

The Russian note, replying to British notification of the contraband list and the establishment of contraband control ports, said:

"By including in its lists of contraband such articles and goods as fuel, paper, cotton, fodder for agricultural animals, footwear, clothing and materials for their manufacture and even all foodstuffs — bread, meat, butter, sugar and other foodstuffs—the British government in fact proclaims contraband basic articles of mass consumption and creates the possibility of unlimited arbitrariness in classing all articles of popular consumption as war contraband.

"This inevitably leads to profound disorganization of the supply of the peaceful civil population with necessaries, gravely endangers the health and lives of the peaceful population and portends innumerable calamities for the masses of people."

"It is known that universally recognized principles of international law do not permit air bombardment of peaceful population of women, children and aged people.

"On the same grounds, the Soviet government deems it not permissible to deprive a peaceful population of foodstuffs, fuel and clothing and thus subject children, women and aged people and invalids to every hardship and to starvation by proclaiming goods of popular consumption as war contraband.

Questions Validity

"Proceeding from the above, the Soviet government declares that it does not agree to the note of the British government of Sept. 6 and refuses to recognize any validity of this note.

"The government of the U. S. S. R. similarly declares that it does not agree to the British note of Sept. 11 and that it does not recognize any validity that this note informs of unilateral institution by the British government of a system of control of merchant ships of neutral countries in ports specially designated for this purpose by the British government.

Nazi Military Leaders Confer with Hitler on Next Moves in the War

Goering Newspaper Says Bombs May Soon Shower on England; French Leave German Soil

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP) — Military leaders met at the chancellery today and observers wondered whether the conference was concerned with Germany's avowed "fight to the finish" against Britain and France.

More than twenty generals and staff officers attended the meeting, which lasted several hours. Foreign circles said Adolf Hitler participated in at least part of the conference.

The German press with one voice echoed Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's fight speech at Danzig last night with such assertions as "there will be no stopping now."

May Bomb Britain

The National Zeitung of Essen, close to Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, intimated once again that bombs may shower on the British Isles as Nazi patience over Britain's "inability to understand" apparently neared an end.

"The moment has come when the war desired by England must rain down upon the British Isle itself," National Zeitung said.

"The patience of a people has limits. In their boundless indignation the German people to a man now turn against the British war inciters in order, by a fight which hereafter will be relentless, to create the necessary guarantees for their security from such irresponsible machination."

Responsible officials said virtually all French troops now had left German soil.

French Company Retreats

A high command communique stated a French company was driven across the border yesterday.

Military authorities declined to comment on British claims that reconnoitering planes flew over Berlin, Hamburg and Magdeburg last night.

Nazis regarded as favorable the reaction in neutral countries, especially Italy, to von Ribbentrop's address expressing German determination to fight on.

"This leads to the belief," said an article entitled "fight!" in Boersen-Zeitung, "that not only the meaning and full implication of von Ribbentrop's statement are understood but that the full measure of Britain's war guilt is recognized."

Wallace Asserts Country Needs FDR For Another Term

San Francisco, Oct. 25 (AP)—Secretary Wallace told reporters today the European war made the desirability of a third term for President Roosevelt more evident than ever.

"Since the outbreak of the war in Europe," the agriculture secretary said, "it has become apparent that the country needs the talents and training of Mr. Roosevelt not only in meeting problems of the country that arise out of the situation abroad, but in handling domestic problems."

He paused, then weighing each word, continued:

"Mr. Roosevelt's background seems to equip him with exceptional qualifications as a helmsman to steer the country through both foreign and domestic troubles to a safe harbor."

To another question—whether it was his belief President Roosevelt would keep the United States out of war, Wallace answered: "It is to be assumed that the president will continue his efforts to keep this country out of war."

The third term statement aroused much discussion here as there had been some suggestion that Wallace might be considering becoming a candidate himself.

Nazi Crew Free, Washington Told In Dispatch from Russ Government

No Details Received by State Department; Hull Expects To Secure Early Release of Ship

Washington, Oct. 25. (AP)—Ambassador Laurence L. Steinhardt reported to the state department tonight that the foreign office at Moscow had assured him the American officers and crew of the City of Flint were safe aboard the vessel at Murmansk.

The state department made public Steinhardt's report that the crew was safe immediately upon its receipt here and indicated further details were expected within a short time.

The status of the crew had been the principal concern of authorities since the City of Flint was seized by a German raider.

German Crew Released

The remainder of Steinhardt's bare report that the American crew was safe, however, dealt with information that the German prize crew had been released from internment and gave no further details on the Americans.

The ambassador relayed a Tass (Soviet news agency) dispatch from Murmask as follows:

"The vessel is remaining at Murmansk pending definite establishment of the nature of her cargo. Ambassador Steinhardt immediately telephoned an official of the foreign office and was informed that it was that official's understanding that the German prize crew had been released from internment but were not being put back on board the City of Flint."

Steinhardt quoted the dispatch as saying the City of Flint had put into Murmansk because her machinery had been damaged.

At the same time, Secretary Hull told reporters that the government would follow the case through to its logical conclusion from the standpoint of international law and American rights. He did not amplify this statement, saying he preferred to wait until all the facts were ascertained.

Officials previously had made clear that the United States expected to get the vessel back. The freighter, which is owned by the maritime commission and operated by the United States Lines under charter, was seized by a German raider and sent into Kola Bay, Northern Russia, with a German prize crew aboard.

Hull Wants Facts

Secretary Hull asserted that what he wanted to hear most right now was news about the crew of forty-one or forty-two men.

He added that this government was relying on the Russian government to give full information and was not sending a representative

Union Nationale Government of Province Badly Defeated by Party Headed by King

Quebec, Oct. 25 (Canadian Press)—The Union Nationale government of the province of Quebec, fighting for provincial autonomy, was defeated in a war-time election today by the Liberals, the party of the Dominion government at Ottawa.

Results of balloting for eighty-six seats in the provincial legislature stood as follows on the basis of early returns.

Premier Called Election

Quebec Premier Maurice Duplessis had called the election for support in his contention that war expenditures of the dominion government were being made at the expense of relief and other problems in his province.

His supporters said the Union Nationale administration was Quebec's only safeguard against conscription.

The election result was a victory for the party of Canadian Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King, under whose leadership Canada went to war at the side of Great Britain.

MacKenzie King has three ministers in his cabinet from Quebec, each of whom had announced he would resign from the dominion government if the party should be defeated in the Quebec provincial balloting.

Former Premier Adelard Godbout, provincial head of the Liberals, returns to power as a result of the election.

Premier Elected

Premier Duplessis himself was elected but at least five of his cabinet ministers were defeated. They were William Tremblay, minister of labor, Henri Auger, minister of colonization, Bona Dussault, minister of agriculture, Anatole Carignan, minister of roads, and T. J. Coonan, minister without portfolio.

Mayor Camillien Houde of Montreal, returning to provincial politics, was elected as an Independent in Montreal-St. Mary division in a race against four other candidates.

Ruby Keeler Consults Lawyers About a Divorce from Al Jolson

Goes To Live with Her Parents, Leaving Him in Their Home

Hollywood, Oct. 25 (AP)—Al Jolson, noted "mammy" singer of screen and stage, said today he and Ruby Keeler had separated and she had consulted lawyers with divorce in view.

Jolson appeared broken hearted as he told of their separation after he had taken her to a prize fight Tuesday night.

"I hope everything will work out all right," he said he told her as he left her at the home of her parents. "I hope you'll come back right away."

"Maybe," she replied.

He said he talked with her again today but learned she already had conferred with lawyers.

Jolson said that since the separation he had offered her $400 a week for life, with a lump settlement of $50,000 if she married again, and a $100,000 trust fund for their adopted child. She rejected this as insufficient, he said, on advice of lawyers.

He described their differences as "family troubles, not important enough in my opinion to bring a divorce."

Miss Keeler and Jolson were introduced by Texas Guinan, the late nightclub hostess, and married a year later, Sept. 21, 1928. The singer honeymooned in Europe with his 19-year-old bride.

Ruby Keeler

Jolson, star of one of the first talking pictures, has continued in demand for radio and film work. Miss Keeler, once a top rank screen actress, has not appeared recently in pictures.

Until Miss Keeler fully makes up her mind, Jolson said, he will continue to occupy their Encino home, near Hollywood. She will live with her parents.

500 Government Employes Named As Members of League for Peace

Dies Committee Stirs Up Storm of Controversy in the House

Washington, Oct. 25 (AP)—The Dies Committee stirred up a storm of controversy today by making public what it described as a "membership and mailing list" of the American League for Peace and Democracy which included the names of some 500 government employes. The committee previously had branded the league a "Communist front organization."

The storm broke in the committee room, on the floor of the House of Representatives and in the offices of federal agencies where those named are employed.

Rep. Dempsey (D-N Mex), a committee member who was absent when the names were announced, protested that the committee's action was "most damnable" and "most unAmerican."

Rep. Coffee (D-Wash) precipated a rough and tumble debate in the House by shouting:

Precipitates Debate

"I call on the House and the Roosevelt administration to repudiate this unwarranted intrusion of American rights which violates the principles of American democracy."

And from the offices of the federal employes named, some of whom hold high positions in the administration, came a steady stream of statements. Some denied they were members of the league, others said they had been but were no longer active, and still others said they merely were on the league's mailing list. Some said emphatically they were not Communists.

Harry C. Lambertson, chairman of the Washington branch, said the

Britain Combing Seas for German Raiders, U-Boats

Sinking of Four More British Ships Spurs Search by Warships

POCKET BATTLESHIPS ARE BELIEVED ACTIVE

Deutschland and Emden II Reported Helping Nazi Submarines

By EDWIN STOUT

London, Oct. 25 (AP) — British naval forces, cast for a leading role in the near-at-hand winter campaign, hunted the seas tonight for elusive German submarines and surface raiders combining in new attacks on the nation's vital shipping.

In a heavy blow off Spain, German raiders were credited with sinking four merchant craft yesterday, strengthening the belief that Nazi submarines raiding the sea lanes had been augmented by the pocket battleships Deutschland and the Emden II, namesake of the famed World War "phantom cruiser."

45 Ships Destroyed

These sinkings, in which Britain lost 17,671 tons of ships in a single day, bringing her losses thus far to forty-five ships also gave rise to speculation that an entire convoy had been attacked.

The news of these losses reached British readers at about the same time the air ministry announced Royal Air Force scouting expeditions had succeeded in reaching Berlin, Hamburg and Magdeburg in night flights. Magdeburg is the site of a branch of the Krupp Munitions Works, 200 miles from the German coast.

The full extent of the day's shipping losses was not passed for publication until today when a cryptic admiralty statement said that three of the victims, the 4,413-ton Tafna, the 3,528-ton Ledbury and the 2,474-ton Menin Ridge had been "fired upon."

Ship Sunk by U-Boat

The British press association said the fourth ship, the 7,256-ton Clan Chisolm, was sunk "presumably by a U-boat while on a homeward voyage to Britain."

All were sunk in the same vicinity —about eighty miles west of the straits of Gibraltar. Eighty-nine persons were reported dead or missing.

London newspapers, mindful of the heavy losses inflicted on British shipping in the World War by German surface raiders, asked the question: have these warships, far more potent than submarines, slipped into Atlantic shipping lanes?

May Have Captured Flint

"Did the Deutschland capture the City of Flint?" one newspaper asked in commenting on the seizure of the United States vessel taken into the Russian port of Murmansk by a German prize crew.

News agency reports headed "British steamer (Stonegate) sunk by pocket battleship" were passed for publication.

(Reports from Oslo, Norway, yesterday said the 5,044-ton freighter Stonegate had been sunk in mid-Atlantic by the Deutschland. Her crew and the crew of another sunken British ship — thirty-eight men in all — were rescued by the United States vessel City of Flint and landed at Tromsoe, Norway, before the City of Flint was taken on to Murmansk.)

An admiralty spokesman said merely that the British navy had not "sighted" the Deutschland.

SAME PICTURE--BUT IT HAS TWO INTERPRETATIONS

Neutrality Bill

even if the Senate should conclude action on the bill tomorrow.

There were growing indications that the measure would be sent to a joint Senate-House conference committee to work out an acceptable compromise.

Influential Democrats indicated this would be done under a special rule which, while permitting a measure of House debate—possibly eight or ten hours—would not allow any amendments to be offered from the floor.

Johnson Amendments Failed

The first Johnson amendment voted down by the Senate was intended to make the application of the neutrality act automatic upon the outbreak of a war anywhere. It would have done so by striking out a provision permitting the president to invoke the act, if in his judgment such action was "necessary to promote the security or preserve the peace of the United States or to protect the lives of the citizens of the United States

Waterfront Busy As Large Ships Take on Cargoes

Much Activity Noted among Merchantmen and Freighters

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—Stevedors are hustling and trucks are bustling along New York's waterfront, and big merchantmen and little freighters glide in and out of the churning bay.

Vivid activity of New York's busy harbor contrasts with the picture of European ports. There, docks are enveloped in a sense of furtiveness. Activity is guarded. Lights burn low. Whistles don't shriek with the high lilt of more peaceful days.

Photographers roaming the North River docks today could take all the pictures they wanted. No rifled soldiers stood there. And the oaths of the muscled dock hands were as lusty and their banter as gay as ever.

New Freighter Loads

So the cameramen took pictures of the S. S. Morgacgull, bright in her new colors, taking on her 7,800-ton burden for her maiden voyage to South America.

The Mormacgull, new 8,875-ton freighter of the Moore-McCormack lines, which launched her August 8th, was poised for a journey to Santos and Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Rio de Janeiro and Rio Do Sul.

The camera recorded her loading —steel being loaded into her holds and oil drums rolling up her ramps. There were sewing machines and tractors, lead bars and oil, cement and steel wire. Then came drums of formaldehyde, coils of rope, tiers of tires, bundles of welding rods and long girders of construction steel.

Scanmail Sails Tonight

Over at the American-Scantic line the Scanmail, freighter and passenger ship, was steaming for its midnight shove off to Copenhagen, and ports in Norway and Sweden.

Up her ramps rolled a four-ton road scraper and hogheads of tobacco. Oil and petroleum products went into her holds by the barrels. Tractors were lowered. There were tires, rope and construction steel for far away corners of northern Europe.

Tomorrow there will be more ships a-sailing, and the day after that, some more.

Russian Seizure Of Bessarabia Is Believed Likely

Little Resistance Looked for from King Carol's Government

BY ROBERT B. PARKER, JR.

Budapest, Oct. 25 (AP)—Diplomats familiar with the Balkans tonight expressed the opinion that should Soviet Russia see fit to extend her influence by moving into the Rumanian province of Bessarabia she would be met with little or no resistance from King Carol's government.

These sources, who said they expected Russian action in the near future if she does intend to push her influence into southeastern Europe, advance the belief that Rumania probably would be compelled to fight alone if she should insist upon defending Bessarabia with arms.

In such event, they said, Hungary probably would be forced to move immediately into Transylvania, which she lost to Rumania after the World war, as a "self-defense" measure to secure the Carpathian mountains as a barrier against any further Communist expansion into Central Europe.

Intentions Unknown

Clear indications of Russian intentions against Bessarabia have been lacking so far, however. Rumania has received official assurances that Moscow has no demands on that former Soviet territory.

But despite these assurances new tension has been reported in Rumania and King Carol's envoys to Bulgaria and Turkey have been summoned home for consultation.

Political circles have reported from Rumania that "important developments are imminent in the Balkans."

Rumania officials have maintained stoutly that their country would fight even without allies if necessary, to maintain her territorial integrity, but these diplomats pointed out that:

1. Turkey, aligned with Rumania in the Balkan entente, was exempted from fighting Russia under her new mutual assistance pact with Britain and France.

2. The western powers already have closed their eyes to the Soviet march into Poland. Would they do likewise in event of a similar action in Rumania?

3. Italy and Yugoslavia are authoritatively reported here to be backing Hungary, should she advance to the Carpathians in Rumania—occupying the former Hungarian province of Transylvania in the meantime—to hold that natural barrier against Communism.

Might Resist Communism

(Dispatches from Rome today said informed Fascists were of the opinion Italy, having fought to resist Communism in Spain, would resist any Communist penetration into southeastern Europe where she regards her interests as paramount. However, they did not go so far as to say assurances of military aid already had been given to Hungary.)

Informed quarters here expressed the belief Britain and France would hesitate to declare war on Hungary, Yugoslavia and Italy.

And without Turkey's help, diplomats said, it virtually would be impossible for the western powers to fulfill their guarantees of independence to Rumania.

business agent for a carpenters union. He is directing Bigelow's campaign in northern Ohio's industrial counties.

In an office across public square is James L. E. Jappe, secretary of the 1936 Republican national convention committee. He heads a unit of the Ohio emergency committee. This was set up by a group of business and professional organizations in an effort to defeat the plan.

Says Jappe:

"I understand that a prominent state Democratic leader made a survey in forty-seven Democratic counties and that the report brought back to him was that the Bigelow plan would carry in those counties. (Ohio has eighty-eight counties.)

Cost 310 Millions Yearly

"Most people thought it was a pension plan which reduced the age limit from 65 to 60, and did not understand that it would cost 310 millions a year—nearly twice the present state budget—that it would wreck the educational system of Ohio, that it would wreck state, county and municipal government, double taxes, drive industry out of the state and bring a reign of chaos."

Williams, stripped to his vest and sitting at a desk squeezed into a space by a wash basin declared:

"The Bigelow plan has exposed those who are for the people and those who really are not. We expect our biggest support from the true wealth producers, the working class.

"We intend to ask the LaFollette committee to investigate the Ohio destruction committee, regarding its finances and gross misstatements, when this campaign is over."

Present Pensions $30

On basis of need, Ohio now has maximum pensions of $30 monthly to persons sixty-five or older. The average is $23 monthly to 117,000 persons.

Bigelow would lower the age limit to 60, and guarantee an income of $50 to single persons, $80 to couples. Some estimates of the number of eligibles affected range from 372,000 to 690,000.

Bigelow declares his plan will cost not more than $56,000,000 a year. To finance it, he proposes a state income tax equal to one fourth the present federal tax—Ohio now has no income tax—and a two per cent levy on "all land, the value of which exceeds the rate of $20,000 an acre."

90 Divisions of German Soldiers On Western Front

Patrols Active in Testing French Main Lines

By TAYLOR HENRY

Paris, Oct. 25 (AP) —Reinforced German patrols were reported testing French main lines at the extreme northern tip of the Western front tonight in a series of feeler attacks. Heavy concentrations of troops were noted elsewhere.

A French communique said a Nazi thrust against French positions near Apach had been repulsed.

German and French patrols were active along the entire northern flank from the Luxembourg border to the Rhine where the French are guarding against a sudden German offensive.

90 Divisions in Line

French advices received by the high command said the Germans had massed at least ninety divisions on this flank along a 100-mile front. This places approximately a million and a half men in the area.

The ninety divisions included troops actually in the Seigfried line and those holding advance frontier positions. The troop concentrations were considered extraordinarily large unless the Germans are planning an attack.

One military observer said the German force could be lined up shoulder-to-shoulder three-deep all along the 100-mile flank.

Premier Daladier had a long conference late today with General Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander-in-chief of the Allied forces.

Reports of new German troop concentrations behind the Siegfried line led military observers to the belief the Germans might be planning an attack in force despite bad weather along the front.

Chief of Staff on Front

Advices from Berlin by way of Switzerland said Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, German chief-of-staff was making a detailed inspection of the German lines near Saarbruecken.

French military observers expressed the belief that if the Germans have decided to launch an offensive all preparations have been made, and the French command were said to have considered the possibility of a German attack seriously enough to rush fortification lines along the frontier.

The French apparently are determined to rest on defensive tactics, trusting to a winter-long —blockade to crack Germany.

The general staff communique this morning said that "on the whole the night has been quiet" and noted "patrol and artillery activity to the west of the Saar."

Rail Association

Rail-Truck Impetus Looms

"It is not unreasonable to expect," Arnold continued, "that great impetus will be given to the establishment of coordinated rail-truck service, and that the practical experimentation in this field will develop more efficient and economical transportation channels, thus facilitating the movement of interstate commerce."

Pelley contended that under present law a railroad may not operate into the territory of another railroad without permission of the interstate commerce commission, adding that if railrods and trucks "establish joint through rates under which the territory of one railroad is invaded by another the intent of the law would be defeated."

"The only purpose of the resolution was to conform the practices of the railroads to the spirit of the law, and avoid wasteful duplication of transportation facilities and services," he declared.

More Business Needed To Bring in More Taxes, U. S. Expert Asserts

New York, Oct. 25. (AP)—A Roosevelt administration fiscal officer, John W. Hanes, said today that "no matter how heavily we tax" there was no reasonable possibility of bringing up federal income to meet federal spending except through "more business."

Improved business, he declared in a speech at the ninth annual New York Herald Tribune forum on current problems, would mean "more national people's income, and I am convinced that this is the only logical way to improve our financial situation if we are to maintain our present economic system."

The country, he said, had developed "a ten-billion dollar appetite with a five-billion dollar (tax) pocketbook."

Hanes, who is under-secretary of the treasury, took the assumption that outgo would remain at the present level, remarked that in the 1939 fiscal year federal expenditures exceed what was taken in by about $3,600,000,000, and went on:

Must Get More To Tax More

"No matter how heavily we tax we cannot raise three or four (additional) billion dollars from present sources unless we get more on which to levy.

"x x x We now have the most powerful tax system in our history. If we could put substantially all our present unemployed back to work, the accompanying increase in national income would go far toward solving the problem.

"x x x All of us in government and private life must put our emphasis on adding to the national income."

He said that even if "all of a widely discussed group of amendments were enacted" the personal income tax revenues would be increased by less than $250,000,000, and that to produce as much as one billion more, at the present people's income level, would "require a brutal increase" in rates.

High Rate, Small Net

As to the corporation income tax, he remarked that even if it were doubled—"and if for the purposes of argument no diminution resulted in tax base or revenues elsewhere"—the resultant increase would be only 1¼ billion.

Similarly, he said, "an enormous rise in rates" in the estate and gift taxes would bring in not more than $400,000,000. Then he summed up:

"Thus, outside the sales or excise taxes, we cannot hope to raise more than about 2½ billions, even with rates more drastic than have ever been seriously contemplated. To bring in that much at present national income levels would require really shocking tax increases and would, I believe, defeat the object sought."

directly to Murmansk, near where the ship is supposed to be.

The secretary remarked that the seizure would not have occurred if the neutrality bill under discussion in the Senate were on the statute books. The bill would keep American ships out of danger areas.

Hull defined the government's policy toward shipping under neutrality as a desire to preserve the maximum of legitimate shipping on the seven seas with the minimum of danger to those in this country and those who are carrying on the shipping.

20 Ships Stopped

Questioned on the situation of American shipping generally since the start of the war, Hull said he believed about twenty American ships had been stopped, searched or asked to come into port to be searched by various belligerents.

American shippers, he said, were sufficiently well satisfied with the way they were getting on with the belligerents, and the state department had not been called upon to write any notes to the belligerents on their behalf. The department's only efforts have been, he said, to facilitate examination of the ships so that they could proceed.

Hull said no cargo of an American ship had been seized other than that of the City of Flint. Some cargo was reported taken from American ships in British ports but this was said to have been purchased from the owners.

Germans Want Cargo Of City of Flint

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP)—Germany and the United States attempted today to unravel the circumstances surrounding the Nazi seizure of the American freighter City of Flint which Germans said carried a contraband cargo for England.

An authorized German source said the captured freighter had a "good cargo" and that the Germans were asking Soviet Russia to let them have it back from Murmansk, Soviet port, where the ship was taken by a German prize crew.

(The Russian government announced the release of the German prize crew from internment, but made no mention of the fate of the American crew of forty-two.)

Delicate Question of Law

Germany also sought to establish with Russia what should be done with the ship, recognizing that delicate questions of international law were raised by its seizure and detainment in a neutral port.

American Charge D'Affairs Alexander Kirk visited Baron Ernst von Weizsaecker, secretary of state in the German foreign office, and was told that Germany was discussing the question with Russia. This was the first acknowledgement that Germany officially knew of the ship's seizure.

German quarters informally said the ship was taken because of contraband aboard. She was taken to Tromsoe, these quarters said, because she was "not seaworthy." For a similar reason, it was indicated, she was then taken to Murmansk, where the prize crew was "detained."

Among the questions arising were:

Five Questions Asked

First—Where is the American crew?

Second—Are the German "unseaworthy" claim and the allegation the ship carried contraband valid?

Third—If the ship was not seaworthy, why was it taken from Norway to Russia?

Fourth—Will Russia hold the Germans for the duration of the war?

Fifth—Can Russia legally release the ship to the Germans because of the German contention her papers were not in order and the fact that she entered the Russian harbor flying the swastika flag?

The "unseaworthiness" of the City of Flint, German quarters said, was caused by the American crew's concealment of maps essential for navigation. Hence, they said, the ship could not proceed safely through the war areas of the North and Baltic seas.

Republican Group Hears Third Term Proposal Attacked

Asked To Start Move To Bring 1940 Campaign to Baltimore

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP)—Maryland's Republican women heard a blast at a third term for President Roosevelt today and an appeal that they start a campaign to get the 1940 national Republican convention for Baltimore.

Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, a sister of the late vice-president Charles Curtis and president of the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia, told the Maryland convention that third-term talk had been based on the argument that because of the war "we should not change leadership, that we should get behind the president and have unity."

"The president may be laboring under the delusion that war abroad will take care of his troubles here," Mrs. Gann said.

"But then he is apparently under the impression that changing the date of Thanksgiving will take care of the Christmas shopping problem, for he told the country that the extension of shopping days between the new Thanksgiving and Christmas would be an aid to business.

"What we need, however, is not more days in which to shop, but something to do our shopping with."

"The present administration has proved unequal to meeting the domestic situation in times of peace abroad," she continued. "What makes us think that it can meet the same problems now that they are complicated by a European war?"

Paul Robertson, chairman of the G. O. P. City Committee, urged the Republican women's convention to start a campaign to bring the Republican national convention here.

"Andrew Jackson, Woodrow Wilson and Abraham Lincoln were all nominated for the presidency in our city and were all winners," Robertson recalled in a telegram to the convention.

"The Republican party should again turn its face to the east. The support of the eastern states is indispensible to our cause in 1940."

Russia Refuses

"Simultaneously, the Soviet government cannot fail to declare that merchant ships of the U. S. S. R. are state property and for this reason alone should not be subjected to any measures of compulsion applied to privately owned merchant ships.

"On the strength of the above, the government of the U. S. S. R. reserves its right to claim from the British government of compensation for losses to organizations, institutions or citizens of the U. S. S. R. by the above mentioned measures of the British government and actions of British authorities."

London Calls Russian Objection 'Fantastic'

London, Oct. 26 (Thursday) (AP)—The British Press Association quoted an unnamed London authority on international law today as saying Soviet Russia's objection to the British contraband list was "fantastic."

"The old time distinction of contraband as such articles as rifles and ammunition has gone by the board," he was quoted. "Any government can declare that anything of use to the enemy is contraband."

He said the complaint apparently was based on the declaration of London drafted at an international conference in 1909 and added "the declaration of London was never ratified by any country and it went west in the first week of the great war. Therefore its provisions have never had any validity whatever."

Italy Active in Move To Complete A Balkan Entente

Events Indicate Axis Partners Are Still Working Together

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

A hint from the Balkans that Nazi Germany's original axis partner, Fascist Italy, is far from inactive in Europe's present diplomatic maneuvering directs attention to present Rome-Berlin relations.

It came almost simultaneously with fresh declaration by Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Nazi foreign minister, that Germany, Italy, Russia and Japan were still reposing tranquilly, for in a bed, and that their political policies had been shaped by coinciding national interests in a war "force" on Hitler by "Britain and her henchmen in Paris."

Rome Seeks Entente

In contrast, Budapest reported that Rome was moving behind the scenes to form an Italian-Balkan Entente aimed at halting any Soviet advance or the spread of Communism into Southeastern Europe. It pictured Italy as having given "assurances" of armed aid to Hungary if it were needed to stem a sweep of Soviet influence or power from Russian occupied Poland.

There was no immediate denial from Rome where there has been a strange silence since Premier Mussolini appealed to the Franco-British allies some weeks ago to accept the Hitler peace formula and end the war. That cast fresh doubt on the reality of Von Ribbentrop's picture of a politically united Germany, Italy, Russia and Japan.

Friction Within Axis

There seems small doubt that internal friction is wearing the Berlin-Rome axis thin since Germany was driven to a rapprochement with Soviet Russia to prevent a possible two-front war against her. Two of Hitler's bed fellows, Mussolini and Stalin, are at least making diplomatic faces at each other over his shoulder. And the Berlin-Tokyo off-shoot of the one-time German-Italian anti-Comintern partnership is obviously cracking under the strain of the circumstance of which Von Ribbentrop boasted, namely that Soviet Russia had "recently joined the ranks of the states friendly toward Germany."

Whatever the final reaction of Italy or Japan to the Soviet Nazi accord, a test of the real quality of Russian "neutrality" in the war seems at hand. It is bound to come to issue when the fate of the American Steamer City of Flint, seized by Germany and held in Russian custody, is decided.

Berlin May Not Protest

A request from Washington for Russian surrender of the vessel is impending. Berlin states that conversations between Germany and Russia on the incident are in progress. And to some Washington eyes there was more than a hint in the Von Ribbentrop speech that Berlin would not offer more than normal protest, if even that, if Moscow found it expedient to comply promptly with that foreshadowed American request.

The Nazi foreign minister went to great lengths to reiterate that Hitler had no designs inimical to French interests. He also pictured France as dragged into the war by British intrigue.

Von Ribbentrop also trained his guns on American public opinion. Germany had "no interests" on the American continent which could lead to "any difference" between Berlin and Washington, he said.

"On the contrary, Germany is precisely the country that among all others has faithfully observed and respected the Monroe Doctrine," he said.

Britain Combing Seas for German Raiders, U-Boats

POCKET BATTLESHIPS ARE BELIEVED ACTIVE

Deutschland and Emden II Reported Helping Nazi Submarines

By EDWIN STOUT

London, Oct. 25 (AP) — British naval forces, cast for a leading role in the near-at-hand winter campaign, hunted the seas tonight for elusive German submarines and surface raiders combining in new attacks on the nation's vital shipping.

In a heavy blow off Spain, German raiders were credited with sinking four merchant craft yesterday, strengthening the belief that Nazi submarines raiding the sea lanes had been augmented by the pocket battleships Deutschland and the Emden II, namesake of the famed World War "phantom cruiser."

45 Ships Destroyed

These sinkings, in which Britain lost 17,671 tons of ships in a single day, bringing her losses thus far to forty-five ships also gave rise to speculation that an entire convoy had been attacked.

The news of these losses reached British readers at about the same time the air ministry announced Royal Air Force scouting expeditions had succeeded in reaching Berlin, Hamburg and Magdeburg in night flights. Magdeburg is the site of a branch of the Krupp Munitions Works, 200 miles from the German coast.

The full extent of the day's shipping losses was not passed for publication until today when a cryptic admiralty statement said that three of the victims, the 4,413-ton Tafna, the 3,528-ton Ledbury and the 2,474-ton Menin Ridge had been "fired upon."

Ship Sunk by U-Boat

The British press association said the fourth ship, the 7,256-ton Clan Chisolm, was sunk "presumably by a U-boat while on a homeward voyage to Britain."

All were sunk in the same vicinity —about eighty miles west of the straits of Gibraltar. Eighty-nine persons were reported dead or missing.

London newspapers, mindful of the heavy losses inflicted on British shipping in the World War by German surface raiders, asked the question: have these warships, far more potent than submarines, slipped into Atlantic shipping lanes?

May Have Captured Flint

"Did the Deutschland capture the City of Flint?" one newspaper asked in commenting on the seizure of the United States vessel taken into the Russian port of Murmansk by a German prize crew.

News agency reports headed "British steamer (Stonegate) sunk by pocket battleship" were passed for publication.

(Reports from Oslo, Norway, yesterday said the 5,044-ton freighter Stonegate had been sunk in mid-Atlantic by the Deutschland. Her crew and the crew of another sunken British ship — thirty-eight men in all — were rescued by the United States vessel City of Flint and landed at Tromsoe, Norway, before the City of Flint was taken on to Murmansk.)

An admiralty spokesman said merely that the British navy had not "sighted" the Deutschland.

SAME PICTURE--BUT IT HAS TWO INTERPRETATIONS

90 Divisions of German Soldiers On Western Front

By TAYLOR HENRY

Paris, Oct. 25 (AP) —Reinforced German patrols were reported testing French main lines at the extreme northern tip of the Western front tonight in a series of feeler attacks. Heavy concentrations of troops were noted elsewhere.

A French communique said a Nazi thrust against French positions near Apach had been repulsed.

German and French patrols were active along the entire northern flank from the Luxembourg border to the Rhine where the French are guarding against a sudden German offensive.

90 Divisions in Line

French advices received by the high command said the Germans had massed at least ninety divisions on this flank along a 100-mile front. This places approximately a million and a half men in the area.

The ninety divisions included troops actually in the Seigfried line and those holding advance frontier positions. The troop concentrations were considered extraordinarily large unless the Germans are planning an attack.

One military observer said the German force could be lined up shoulder-to-shoulder three-deep all along the 100-mile flank.

Premier Daladier had a long conference late today with General Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander-in-chief of the Allied forces.

Chief of Staff on Front

Advices from Berlin by way of Switzerland said Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, German chief-of-staff was making a detailed inspection of the German lines near Saarbruecken.

French military observers expressed the belief that if the Germans have decided to launch an offensive all preparations have been made, and the French command were said to have considered the possibility of a German attack seriously enough to rush fortification lines along the frontier.

The French apparently are determined to rest on defensive tactics, trusting to a winter-long —blockade to crack Germany.

The general staff communique this morning said that "on the whole the night has been quiet" and noted "patrol and artillery activity to the west of the Saar."

Italy Active in Move To Complete A Balkan Entente

Events Indicate Axis Partners Are Still Working Together

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

A hint from the Balkans that Nazi Germany's original axis partner, Fascist Italy, is far from inactive in Europe's present diplomatic maneuvering directs attention to present Rome-Berlin relations.

It came almost simultaneously with fresh declaration by Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Nazi foreign minister, that Germany, Italy, Russia and Japan were still reposing tranquilly, for in a bed, and that their political policies had been shaped by coinciding national interests in a war "force" on Hitler by "Britain and her henchmen in Paris."

Rome Seeks Entente

In contrast, Budapest reported that Rome was moving behind the scenes to form an Italian-Balkan Entente aimed at halting any Soviet advance or the spread of Communism into Southeastern Europe. It pictured Italy as having given "assurances" of armed aid to Hungary if it were needed to stem a sweep of Soviet influence or power from Russian occupied Poland.

There was no immediate denial from Rome where there has been a strange silence since Premier Mussolini appealed to the Franco-British allies some weeks ago to accept the Hitler peace formula and end the war. That cast fresh doubt on the reality of Von Ribbentrop's picture of a politically united Germany, Italy, Russia and Japan.

Friction Within Axis

There seems small doubt that internal friction is wearing the Berlin-Rome axis thin since Germany was driven to a rapprochement with Soviet Russia to prevent a possible two-front war against her. Two of Hitler's bed fellows, Mussolini and Stalin, are at least making diplomatic faces at each other over his shoulder. And the Berlin-Tokyo off-shoot of the one-time German-Italian anti-Comintern partnership is obviously cracking under the strain of the circumstance of which Von Ribbentrop boasted, namely that Soviet Russia had "recently joined the ranks of the states friendly toward Germany."

Whatever the final reaction of Italy or Japan to the Soviet Nazi accord, a test of the real quality of Russian "neutrality" in the war seems at hand. It is bound to come to issue when the fate of the American Steamer City of Flint, seized by Germany and held in Russian custody, is decided.

Berlin May Not Protest

A request from Washington for Russian surrender of the vessel is impending. Berlin states that conversations between Germany and Russia on the incident are in progress. And to some Washington eyes there was more than a hint in the Von Ribbentrop speech that Berlin would not offer more than normal protest, if even that, if Moscow found it expedient to comply promptly with that foreshadowed American request.

The Nazi foreign minister went to great lengths to reiterate that Hitler had no designs inimical to French interests. He also pictured France as dragged into the war by British intrigue.

Von Ribbentrop also trained his guns on American public opinion. Germany had "no interests" on the American continent which could lead to "any difference" between Berlin and Washington, he said.

"On the contrary, Germany is precisely the country that among all others has faithfully observed and respected the Monroe Doctrine," he said.

even if the Senate should conclude action on the bill tomorrow.

There were growing indications that the measure would be sent to a joint Senate-House conference committee to work out an acceptable compromise.

Influential Democrats indicated this would be done under a special rule which, while permitting a measure of House debate—possibly eight or ten hours—would not allow any amendments to be offered from the floor.

Johnson Amendments Failed

The first Johnson amendment voted down by the Senate was intended to make the application of the neutrality act automatic upon the outbreak of a war anywhere. It would have done so by striking out a provision permitting the president to invoke the act, if in his judgment such action was "necessary to promote the security or preserve the peace of the United States or to protect the lives of the citizens of the United States

Russian Seizure Of Bessarabia Is Believed Likely

BY ROBERT B. PARKER, JR.

Budapest, Oct. 25 (AP)—Diplomats familiar with the Balkans tonight expressed the opinion that should Soviet Russia see fit to extend her influence by moving into the Rumanian province of Bessarabia she would be met with little or no resistance from King Carol's government.

These sources, who said they expected Russian action in the near future if she does intend to push her influence into southeastern Europe, advance the belief that Rumania probably would be compelled to fight alone if she should insist upon defending Bessarabia with arms.

In such event, they said, Hungary probably would be forced to move immediately into Transylvania, which she lost to Rumania after the World war, as a "self-defense" measure to secure the Carpathian mountains as a barrier against any further Communist expansion into Central Europe.

Intentions Unknown

Clear indications of Russian intentions against Bessarabia have been lacking so far, however. Rumania has received official assurances that Moscow has no demands on that former Soviet territory.

But despite these assurances new tension has been reported in Rumania and King Carol's envoys to Bulgaria and Turkey have been summoned home for consultation.

Political circles have reported from Rumania that "important developments are imminent in the Balkans."

Rumania officials have maintained stoutly that their country would fight even without allies if necessary, to maintain her territorial integrity, but these diplomats pointed out that:

1. Turkey, aligned with Rumania in the Balkan entente, was exempted from fighting Russia under her new mutual assistance pact with Britain and France.

2. The western powers already have closed their eyes to the Soviet march into Poland. Would they do likewise in event of a similar action in Rumania?

3. Italy and Yugoslavia are authoritatively reported here to be backing Hungary, should she advance to the Carpathians in Rumania—occupying the former Hungarian province of Transylvania in the meantime—to hold that natural barrier against Communism.

Might Resist Communism

(Dispatches from Rome today said informed Fascists were of the opinion Italy, having fought to resist Communism in Spain, would resist any Communist penetration into southeastern Europe where she regards her interests as paramount. However, they did not go so far as to say assurances of military aid already had been given to Hungary.)

Informed quarters here expressed the belief Britain and France would hesitate to declare war on Hungary, Yugoslavia and Italy.

Ohio Divided

business agent for a carpenters union. He is directing Bigelow's campaign in northern Ohio's industrial counties.

In an office across public square is James L. E. Jappe, secretary of the 1936 Republican national convention committee. He heads a unit of the Ohio emergency committee. This was set up by a group of business and professional organizations in an effort to defeat the plan.

Says Jappe:

"I understand that a prominent state Democratic leader made a survey in forty-seven Democratic counties and that the report brought back to him was that the Bigelow plan would carry in those counties. (Ohio has eighty-eight counties.)

Cost 310 Millions Yearly

"Most people thought it was a pension plan which reduced the age limit from 65 to 60, and did not understand that it would cost 310 millions a year—nearly twice the present state budget—that it would wreck the educational system of Ohio, that it would wreck state, county and municipal government, double taxes, drive industry out of the state and bring a reign of chaos."

Williams, stripped to his vest and sitting at a desk squeezed into a space by a wash basin declared:

"The Bigelow plan has exposed those who are for the people and those who really are not. We expect our biggest support from the true wealth producers, the working class.

"We intend to ask the LaFollette committee to investigate the Ohio destruction committee, regarding its finances and gross misstatements, when this campaign is over."

Present Pensions $30

On basis of need, Ohio now has maximum pensions of $30 monthly to persons sixty-five or older. The average is $23 monthly to 117,000 persons.

Bigelow would lower the age limit to 60, and guarantee an income of $50 to single persons, $80 to couples. Some estimates of the number of eligibles affected range from 372,000 to 690,000.

Bigelow declares his plan will cost not more than $56,000,000 a year. To finance it, he proposes a state income tax equal to one fourth the present federal tax—Ohio now has no income tax—and a two per cent levy on "all land, the value of which exceeds the rate of $20,000 an acre."

Rail Association

Rail-Truck Impetus Looms

"It is not unreasonable to expect," Arnold continued, "that great impetus will be given to the establishment of coordinated rail-truck service, and that the practical experimentation in this field will develop more efficient and economical transportation channels, thus facilitating the movement of interstate commerce."

Pelley contended that under present law a railroad may not operate into the territory of another railroad without permission of the interstate commerce commission, adding that if railrods and trucks "establish joint through rates under which the territory of one railroad is invaded by another the intent of the law would be defeated."

"The only purpose of the resolution was to conform the practices of the railroads to the spirit of the law, and avoid wasteful duplication of transportation facilities and services," he declared.

Nazi Crew

directly to Murmansk, near where the ship is supposed to be.

The secretary remarked that the seizure would not have occurred if the neutrality bill under discussion in the Senate were on the statute books. The bill would keep American ships out of danger areas.

Hull defined the government's policy toward shipping under neutrality as a desire to preserve the maximum of legitimate shipping on the seven seas with the minimum of danger to those in this country and those who are carrying on the shipping.

20 Ships Stopped

Questioned on the situation of American shipping generally since the start of the war, Hull said he believed about twenty American ships had been stopped, searched or asked to come into port to be searched by various belligerents.

American shippers, he said, were sufficiently well satisfied with the way they were getting on with the belligerents, and the state department had not been called upon to write any notes to the belligerents on their behalf. The department's only efforts have been, he said, to facilitate examination of the ships so that they could proceed.

Hull said no cargo of an American ship had been seized other than that of the City of Flint. Some cargo was reported taken from American ships in British ports but this was said to have been purchased from the owners.

Germans Want Cargo Of City of Flint

By MELVIN K. WHITELEATHER

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP)—Germany and the United States attempted today to unravel the circumstances surrounding the Nazi seizure of the American freighter City of Flint which Germans said carried a contraband cargo for England.

An authorized German source said the captured freighter had a "good cargo" and that the Germans were asking Soviet Russia to let them have it back from Murmansk, Soviet port, where the ship was taken by a German prize crew.

(The Russian government announced the release of the German prize crew from internment, but made no mention of the fate of the American crew of forty-two.)

Delicate Question of Law

Germany also sought to establish with Russia what should be done with the ship, recognizing that delicate questions of international law were raised by its seizure and detainment in a neutral port.

American Charge D'Affairs Alexander Kirk visited Baron Ernst von Weizsaecker, secretary of state in the German foreign office, and was told that Germany was discussing the question with Russia. This was the first acknowledgement that Germany officially knew of the ship's seizure.

German quarters informally said the ship was taken because of contraband aboard. She was taken to Tromsoe, these quarters said, because she was "not seaworthy." For a similar reason, it was indicated, she was then taken to Murmansk, where the prize crew was "detained."

Among the questions arising were:

Five Questions Asked

First—Where is the American crew?

Second—Are the German "unseaworthy" claim and the allegation the ship carried contraband valid?

Third—If the ship was not seaworthy, why was it taken from Norway to Russia?

Fourth:—Will Russia hold the Germans for the duration of the war?

Fifth—Can Russia legally release the ship to the Germans because of the German contention her papers were not in order and the fact that she entered the Russian harbor flying the swastika flag?

The "unseaworthiness" of the City of Flint, German quarters said, was caused by the American crew's concealment of maps essential for navigation. Hence, they said, the ship could not proceed safely through the war areas of the North and Baltic seas.

Republican Group Hears Third Term Proposal Attacked

Asked To Start Move To Bring 1940 Campaign to Baltimore

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP)—Maryland's Republican women heard a blast at a third term for President Roosevelt today and an appeal that they start a campaign to get the 1940 national Republican convention for Baltimore.

Mrs. Dolly Curtis Gann, a sister of the late vice-president Charles Curtis and president of the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia, told the Maryland convention that third-term talk had been based on the argument that because of the war "we should not change leadership, that we should get behind the president and have unity."

"The president may be laboring under the delusion that war abroad will take care of his troubles here," Mrs. Gann said.

"But then he is apparently under the impression that changing the date of Thanksgiving will take care of the Christmas shopping problem, for he told the country that the extension of shopping days between the new Thanksgiving and Christmas would be an aid to business.

"What we need, however, is not more days in which to shop, but something to do our shopping with."

"The present administration has proved unequal to meeting the domestic situation in times of peace abroad," she continued. "What makes us think that it can meet the same problems now that they are complicated by a European war?"

Paul Robertson, chairman of the G. O. P. City Committee, urged the Republican women's convention to start a campaign to bring the Republican national convention here.

"Andrew Jackson, Woodrow Wilson and Abraham Lincoln were all nominated for the presidency in our city and were all winners," Robertson recalled in a telegram to the convention.

"The Republican party should again turn its face to the east. The support of the eastern states is indispensible to our cause in 1940."

Russia Refuses

"Simultaneously, the Soviet government cannot fail to declare that merchant ships of the U. S. S. R. are state property and for this reason alone should not be subjected to any measures of compulsion applied to privately owned merchant ships.

"On the strength of the above, the government of the U. S. S. R. reserves its right to claim from the British government of compensation for losses to organizations, institutions or citizens of the U. S. S. R. by the above mentioned measures of the British government and actions of British authorities."

London Calls Russian Objection 'Fantastic'

London, Oct. 26 (Thursday) (AP)—The British Press Association quoted an unnamed London authority on international law today as saying Soviet Russia's objection to the British contraband list was "fantastic."

"The old time distinction of contraband as such articles as rifles and ammunition has gone by the board," he was quoted. "Any government can declare that anything of use to the enemy is contraband."

He said the complaint apparently was based on the declaration of London drafted at an international conference in 1909 and added "the declaration of London was never ratified by any country and it went west in the first week of the great war. Therefore its provisions have never had any validity whatever."

Waterfront Busy As Large Ships Take on Cargoes

Much Activity Noted among Merchantmen and Freighters

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—Stevedors are hustling and trucks are bustling along New York's waterfront, and big merchantmen and little freighters glide in and out of the churning bay.

Vivid activity of New York's busy harbor contrasts with the picture of European ports. There, docks are enveloped in a sense of furtiveness. Activity is guarded. Lights burn low. Whistles don't shriek with the high lilt of more peaceful days.

Photographers roaming the North River docks today could take all the pictures they wanted. No rifled soldiers stood there. And the oaths of the muscled dock hands were as lusty and their banter as gay as ever.

New Freighter Loads

So the cameramen took pictures of the S. S. Morgacgull, bright in her new colors, taking on her 7,800-ton burden for her maiden voyage to South America.

The Mormacgull, new 8,875-ton freighter of the Moore-McCormack lines, which launched her August 8th, was poised for a journey to Santos and Buenos Aires, Montevideo, Rio de Janeiro and Rio Do Sul.

The camera recorded her loading —steel being loaded into her holds and oil drums rolling up her ramps. There were sewing machines and tractors, lead bars and oil, cement and steel wire. Then came drums of formaldehyde, coils of rope, tiers of tires, bundles of welding rods and long girders of construction steel.

Scanmail Sails Tonight

Over at the American-Scantic line the Scanmail, freighter and passenger ship, was steaming for its midnight shove off to Copenhagen, and ports in Norway and Sweden.

Up her ramps rolled a four-ton road scraper and hogheads of tobacco. Oil and petroleum products went into her holds by the barrels. Tractors were lowered. There were tires, rope and construction steel for far away corners of northern Europe.

Tomorrow there will be more ships a-sailing, and the day after that, some more.

More Business Needed To Bring in More Taxes, U. S. Expert Asserts

New York, Oct. 25. (AP)—A Roosevelt administration fiscal officer, John W. Hanes, said today that "no matter how heavily we tax" there was no reasonable possibility of bringing up federal income to meet federal spending except through "more business."

Improved business, he declared in a speech at the ninth annual New York Herald Tribune forum on current problems, would mean "more national people's income, and I am convinced that this is the only logical way to improve our financial situation if we are to maintain our present economic system."

The country, he said, had developed "a ten-billion dollar appetite with a five-billion dollar (tax) pocketbook."

Hanes, who is under-secretary of the treasury, took the assumption that outgo would remain at the present level, remarked that in the 1939 fiscal year federal expenditures exceed what was taken in by about $3,600,000,000, and went on:

Must Get More To Tax More

"No matter how heavily we tax we cannot raise three or four (additional) billion dollars from present sources unless we get more on which to levy.

"x x x We now have the most powerful tax system in our history. If we could put substantially all our present unemployed back to work, the accompanying increase in national income would go far toward solving the problem.

"x x x All of us in government and private life must put our emphasis on adding to the national income."

He said that even if "all of a widely discussed group of amendments were enacted" the personal income tax revenues would be increased by less than $250,000,000, and that to produce as much as one billion more, at the present people's income level, would "require a brutal increase" in rates.

High Rate, Small Net

As to the corporation income tax, he remarked that even if it were doubled—"and if for the purposes of argument no diminution resulted in tax base or revenues elsewhere"—the resultant increase would be only 1¼ billion.

Similarly, he said, "an enormous rise in rates" in the estate and gift taxes would bring in not more than $400,000,000. Then he summed up:

"Thus, outside the sales or excise taxes, we cannot hope to raise more than about 2½ billions, even with rates more drastic than have ever been seriously contemplated. To bring in that much at present national income levels would require really shocking tax increases and would, I believe, defeat the object sought."

Home Rule Measure Needed

SERIOUS ATTENTION is being given to a Home Rule bill by Governor O'Conor's legislative council, and by local groups throughout the state, including the Legislative committee of the local chamber of commerce.

The bill, which was introduced last March 14 in the House of Representatives, was read the first time and referred to the committee on Judiciary; and that committee passed it on for study by the legislative council.

The measure proposes inclusion of its objective in the state constitution. "From and after the General Session in the year 1943," it provides, "the General Assembly shall not enact any law which applies to only one county or the City of Baltimore other than a law which amends the charter of any county or the City of Baltimore At the general election in November, 1942, each county shall elect a charter board, which shall draw up a charter for said county. . . .

"The General Assembly shall, at its regular session in the year 1945, enact a charter for any county which shall not have adopted a charter at the general election in November, 1944. A charter enacted for any county by the General Assembly shall not remain in effect after such county shall adopt a charter. . . ."

The proposed amendment "shall, at the election to be held in November, 1940, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of the state for their adoption or rejection. . . ."

This may not be the best Home Rule bill that can be devised, but that the state is in need of something looking to its objective cannot be seriously questioned. The mass of local bills that clutter up the proceedings of the General Assembly every time it meets has no business there, and if local affairs can be looked after locally, instead of in the legislature by a single senator, which is usually the case, or at the most with the aid of a majority of the delegates from his county, the general legislative business of the state would be vastly promoted. Indeed, without such interfering handicap, it can be said that the study and care which could and should be given measures of general state application would undoubtedly result in better and more wholesome state laws.

A thoroughgoing study of a Home Rule measure, accordingly, should be productive of the desired result. The bill under study is apparently defective in not including provision for the enactment of local legislation after means therefor have been embraced by the charter boards in the charters they device. All the proposed amendment seems to do is to provide the boards. If they have no power to act, or if their acts are not authorized, any legislature could leave them stand as dummies. But that is a phase easily susceptible to amendment.

Newcomers, Secure Your Vote

THOSE who have taken up their residence in this city and county—or elsewhere in Maryland—within the last year or so should see to it now that their privilege of voting is secured. The advice applies also to those of a longer period of residence if they have not given the matter any attention.

The state laws require that all persons coming into the state to become citizens must file a declaration of their intention to become citizens of the state a year before the next election in order to have the privilege of voting.

The next election will be held in Maryland November 5, 1940. Consequently, in order to make these declarations effective, they must be filed on or before this November 4. There isn't much time left, so those who have neglected this duty should see to it at once. The rooner it is done the better.

By filing these declarations within the time stated, one will have the privilege of voting in the primary elections to be held next summer. Otherwise they are barred from those elections.

Young men and women who will arrive at the age of 21 years after assuming their residence in the state are not affected by the declaration of intentions law. Those above that age are.

Next year's campaign will be an interesting one. Many grave and important issues will come up for decision. Every citizen should by all means secure his privilege of taking part in the campaign and the election. Let the newcomers, accordingly, meet the requirement of the law and see that their names are properly filed. It is simple enough. One need only to go to the clerk's office in the court house and fill out a blank.

Breaks of the Game

THE FOOTBALL SEASON has now passed mid-season, and the college teams are supposed to be at their peak. Plays click, the bill is cleanly handled, the defense is on its toes, not easily to be fooled by trick reverses or passes, the players are drilled in the execution of their particular duties.

The best team, therefore, ought to win — and usually does. But is surprising how many games are determined by the breaks. Of course, part of the game is capitalizing on these breaks; but even so, without them the results might have been different, sometimes vastly different.

Take a look at the accounts of several of the major contests of last Saturday as written by various sports reporters:

Yale over Army, by Allison Danzig. "In one of the weirdest football games ever seen in the bowl . . ."

Princeton aover Columbia, by Robert F. Kelley. "In a game which started with the stabbing excitement of two touchdowns in the first five minutes. . . ."

Duquesne over Pitt, by the United Press. "A pair of sophomores who pounced on the break when they came led Duquesne to . . . . one of the greatest football upsets of the season. . . ."

N. Y. U. over Carnegie, by Arthur J. Daley. "In as wild and wooly a game as will tighten the heartstrings all season long. . . ."

These are all front page stories and by no means the end of the list of upsets, or victories which hung upon the thread of chance. It is fortunate that football holds such unpredictables, for if results could be calculated with mathematical certainty, the crowds in the stands would dwindle. They go in the hope of seeing the unexpected. Even loyalty to alma mater is secondary to the thrill that comes from some factor foreseen by neither side.

Let us be thankful that the statisticians who each Friday night try to dope the victors in the outstanding contests the following day do such a poor job of it. It's the breaks that make the game in football as in life.

The Sensible Reaction

AMERICAN CITIZENS should not be moved by any attempts to stir up excitement over the seizure of the steamship City of Flint by a German prize crew, which took it to Russia's Kola bay. They do not appear to have been so moved, however. Reports on the incident are still incomplete; but perhaps the most sensible reaction concerning it on the part of Americans is to question the advisability of the presence of the vessel laden as it was in dangerous waters.

The incident is just the kind the cash-and-carry legislation was designed to avoid, and if we are to have that to take the place of the provision expiring last May, and it seems we are to have it, the incident should serve to bring that to an early decision.

Possibly the German seizure can be shown as coming within the scope of international law. Great Britain is holding a number of American vessels suspected of carrying contraband and this action will probably come within that field of law. It is to be noted that the lists of goods carried by the steamship corresponded fairly closely with those of Britain and that the United States has not as yet taken exception to the definition of contraband made by either country. There is much quibbling as to the legal phase respecting the cargo of the City of Flint, and that will be threshed out in a prize court, where lawyers representing the United States will be on hand.

Such seizures are most likely to occur in wartime when ships attempt to engage in trade in the war zones.

Falling Leaves

THE THOUGHT of the leaves falling from the trees has always impressed imaginative people as a saddening one. Wrote Bryant the poet: "The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year." The dropping one by one of the mellowing and fading leaves, impresses such folks as comparable to the end of human life.

The tree drops its leaves, because it has no further use for them. But the tree still lives on. It absorbs into its fiber the nourishment it has received through leaves and roots. By and by it will spring forth again with new leaves.

And the leaves are not lost. They descend into earth, enrich the soil, and in due time will blossom forth into other leaves. There is nothing lost in this wonderful earth. Everything is utilized. So it will be with the human spirit. When it falls off the tree of life, it will enter into other forms of existence, and blossom forth more gloriously.

Why is it that when we go to football games it rains? And if we stay home the game story next day starts off with: "Under the smiling, blue October skies—"?

The Serious Business Of Shaving

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Men are odd creatures. One of the funniest things about the species is shaving. . . . When they are youngsters they can hardly wait for that day when they will begin to shave. Then they spend the rest of their days moaning about the tyranny of shaving. Nearly every man I know wishes he didn't have to shave but wouldn't dream of growing a beard. . . . Shavers are divided into two classes: Those that shave at night, just before going to bed and those who shave in the morning just before going to work. If they shave at night their faces don't look clean the next morning or all the next day and their wives object. If they shave in the morning they must get up fifteen minutes earlier and slug-a-beds don't like that.

Marshall Maslin

Some men use safety razors. Some use the old straight edge razor and are very proud of it. Those who use safety razors boast about how long they can use a blade. They buy fancy sharpeners or they strop the blades on the fleshy part of the palm. The straight-edgers are prouder fellows, however. They feel superior because they shave as grandfather did; grandfather, who had a case with seven razors in it and used a different one each day in the week.

Some shavers use a tube of shaving cream; others lather the brush around in a cup with a cake of soap in the bottom. When we were young we were ambitious to have our own cup on a shelf in a barber shop some day with our name on it in Old English letters; but somehow we never did get around to it. We shave at home and only three or four barbers have ever run over our face with a razor.

Some men make a great to-do about shaving; and monopolize the bathroom for half an hour. Others lather the face, give it a fast once-over and that's enough. We're in the second class (and look it). . . . Men frequently complain that they have a heavy beard but a tender skin; we have caught ourselves making that boast often.

Farmers used to shave only once a week. When city folk go camping they prove their freedom by growing a beard. Nearly every male tries to grow one at least once in his life. Old-time bartenders had handle-bar mustaches. Chinese bandits have long shoe-string mustaches. Professors and doctors used to have Van Dyke beards. British officers have close-cropped mustaches. The old Romans were smooth shaven; the roadside advertising man used to beg us to:

"Pity all the might Caesars,
They pulled each whisker out with tweezers."

Men spend much of their time laughing at women. If women weren't so kindhearted, they'd laugh at all the fuss men make about scraping the hair off their faces.

It is an age and a world in which calling anything "foolproof" seems to take a lot for granted.

The Human Side Of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

It seems to this observer that the imperatives of modern technological war are rewriting all the classics of military strategy, from the Prussian von Clausewitz on down to England's Liddell Hart and Major George Fielding Elliott. The two latter have revised their theories to cover modern weapons and have discarded the old smashing attack as too ruinous to be attempted. The net result of this seems to be a dead-center for any two forces anywhere nearly matched in mechanization, in land war, and leaves the issue to the sea and the sky.

Edwin C. Hill

The apparent stalemate at the West Wall would seem to support this view. There has been no von Clausewitz to embody in classical doctrine the ultimate effectiveness of airplanes and submarines. But any layman may see that in the quarter of a century between wars they have brought to a swift climax more destructive enterprise than the army of General von Clausewitz could have brought in a century, strategy for strategy. I have no idea that many noble old tomes, including von Lausewitz's "Vom Krieg", in the war colleges will gather dust in the decades to come.

New Terms of Survival

Consider the progress which has been made in communications, since the last world war. Radio was primitive then. A submarine hunting its prey in 1914, could get only a short-range view of the surrounding sea, even in bright weather; now the cooperating airplane gives a thousand-fold extension of the periscope eye. A scouting plane, high in the mists above the sea, can guide it unerringly to the kill. It can also guide it to its fuel base, or through a mine field, or warn it of the approach of attackers, with radio reception now perfect in the heavens above, the earth beneath and the waters under the earth. A dozen or two men, undersea and in the sky, might sink a huge battleship and take a thousand lives or more. As indeed has just occurred. It is the perfection of communications which has made new terms of survival for any maritime power.

In For Big Overhauling

Of course land war hasn't been written off because of the new and deadlier killing devices. Field strategy is as important as it ever was, but it is in for a tremendous overhauling. There is with a mechanized army little chance of a surprise attack. Currently there is a story from the Western Front of the tremendous uproar, audible for miles, as the Germans deploy their tanks and huge gun carriages, presumably readying an attack. These iron monsters can't move in the night without lights. The glare and the noise were quite as revealing to the French as if the Germans had used a sky-writer to advertise their plans. Reconnaissance planes can dash over the lines and back and keep both sides informed. There is little chance for a secret rabbit punch in a modern war. Communications, mobility and heightened killing power, all out in the open, have made the old military classics as old-fashioned as "Jane Austen".

Plane Menace Lessened

The late Arthur Brisbane used to insist that many of the revered military and naval authorities were just old stick-in-the-muds. The battleship, he vehemently argued, would be just a big, clumsy bomb target when air power really came through. The anti-aircraft gun had not then been developed to its present effectiveness. It is doubtless the only effective refutation, to cate, of Mr. Brisbane's contention.

It is too early in this war to check the argument. So far, it is indicated that the combination of anti-aircraft guns and defending planes may greatly lessen, if not nullify, the menace of the planes.

Drake sent the Spanish empire down with its Armada. The fate of the succeeding British empire may hinge on its defenses against bombing planes and submarines. And old General Karl von Clausewitz could never have glimpsed the "shape of things to come." Many a former plebe in a military college will recall that von Clausewitz was once as immutable as Blackstone—but the Wright Brothers and Simon Lake and few others changed all that. We still "see through a glass darkly."—Copyright, 1939, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THE BELL-WETHER OF "LIBERALISM"

Militarists in Japan Are Apparently In Much Disfavor among the People

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Of course Joseph C. Crew, Uncle Sam's ambassador to Japan, didn't make his extraordinarily undiplomatic speech in Tokio a few days ago without State Secretary Hull's approval — and that necessarily means President Roosevelt's back of it.

Joseph C. Grew

Parenthetically, if anybody missed reading reports of his talk, Grew told the Japs that America is "profoundly shocked" by their military men's disregard of Yankee rights, by their bombings, and by their general conduct on the eastern Asiatic mainland.

Ordinarily a foreign representative who expressed himself with such candor in the country he was assigned to, immediately would make himself "persona non grata" and his government would be asked to recall him.

But Grew evidently threw a scare into the Japanese. He was just back at his ambassadorial post from a visit in the United States, his hearers realized that he was speaking directly from Washington; also that he had chatted with plenty of his countrymen and was in up-to-date touch with sentiment on this side of the Pacific. Moreover, he spoke warningly; not threateningly. His whole tone was to the effect that we want to be friends with the Japs, but that their army, navy and aviation potentates are making it very difficult for us.

Jap Feelings Hurt

His listeners undoubtedly were hurt; yet Grew doesn't seem to have made them so much angry as pained.

Instead of making a sassy answer to the ambassador, Japanese Foreign Minister Nomura promptly announced that he'd "explain" to the former, in the hope of convincing him that Nippon is as anxious as we are to be friends, that we've misunderstood them if we think otherwise, and that in future they'll see that their military nabobs are more careful.

In short, Grew knows his Orient and did a classy job of oratory. He was forcible enough to attract lots of attention, but he steered clear of saying anything that it would have been impossible for the mikado to swallow without "loss of face"—the worst thing that can happen to anybody in the Far East.

Not only Premier Abe and Foreign Minister Nomura have taken his strong talk in excellent part, but the Jap press has voiced outright appreciation of it. The Tokio newspaper Nichi-Nichi even remarks that the islanders are under obligations to Grew for letting them know candidly just how his home folk feel about the Japanese militarists' methods in China.

Now there's something very queer about all this.

It isn't queer that Japan's diplomats are the last word in politeness. Their courtesy always has been perfectly exquisite. No informed person ever has found a particle of fault with the amiability of the country's civil officialdom's intentions.

The queer thing is that civil officialdom and press are so free now to admit, by implication, that maybe the nation's militarists' behavior has been open to just criticism.

Samurai a Hard Lot

The Japs' military setup is entirely independent of the rest of the government. It's dominated by the Samurai, a hereditary fighting class. The Samurai are anything but nice people to deal with. If a civil functionary from the premier on down, annoys them the Samurai's custom is to assassinate him in short order, and they can't be called to account for it, either.

How does it happen, then, that Foreign Minister Nomura and Nippon's newspapers have the nerve to take the attitude that they do take toward that speech by Ambassador Grew?

Washington inclines to the view that the militarists have fallen into such disfavor with the Jap masses that it's beginning to be safe to defy them.

It's the militarists who launched the campaign in China against the advice of many authorities in nonmilitary governmental departments. If the militarists had made a quick cleanup on the mainland doubtless they simply would have enhanced their prestige. But the war has strung out tremendously and Japan can't stand the economic strain of it. When Russia seemed to be pulling out of the situation it was surmised even here that the Chinese speedily would be finished. Instead, they won a notable victory right afterward, now the Russians show signs of starting in to help them again.

It wouldn't be much better to have Russia dominant in China than to have Japan dominant there but it might be the death knell of the Samurai. With that crowd eliminated the Japs should be much easier to get along with.

many peoples who have been drawn into the holocaust of war in Europe and Asia. The blessings of peace are something for which to be profoundly grateful. May the area widen in which production can be for convenience and comfort and the improvement of mankind, instead of for destruction.

Fraternities Challenged

From the Morgantown, W. Va., Post

The university has issued a report on the scholastic standing of fraternities and sororities for the second semester of the 1938-39 school year.

This report shows that the average of all men students in the university was 1.1638 while the average of all fraternities was 1,0402.

In contrast to this, the average of all sororities was 1.4435 compared to an average of 1.3601 for all women students.

Only four of the sixteen fraternities had an average higher than the average for all men students, whereas six of the nine sororities had a better average than the average for all women students.

This report indicates rather clearly that the sororities are doing a much better job than the fraternities, in promoting the scholastic welfare and accomplishments of their members and pledges.

What is true of the scholastic standing of fraternities is not true in all colleges and universities. Reports gathered by the Interfraternity Conference show that on many campuses the fraternities have been able to make consistently better scholastic records than the average for all students.

This is accomplished in many ways. What a fraternity's members do scholastically is largely determined by what the fraternity demands of its members. If it puts as much emphasis upon scholastic achievement as it does upon social finesse and extracurricular activities, it gets results.

The fraternities at the university are clearly faced with a responsibility to put more emphasis upon the school work of their members and to demand that fraternity men do at least as well as the average student.

Things Missing On Our Autos

From the Christian Science Monitor

New York is fortunate—indeed, all of America is—that there can be held in the metropolis on the Hudson such a display as is taking place there in the 1940 annual automobile show.

The good fortune is implicit in the fact that manufacturers do not have to cover their bright new models with field-gray armor plate in order to find a buyer. Instead, they can talk about styling and about safety in terms of brakes. The new sealed-beam headlights need not be hooded for blackouts. Fluid drive or overdrive transmissions, will master any roads that are likely to be encountered without requiring caterpillar treads on the wheels for battlefield terrain. Ride stabilizers will not be tested out on shell-holes, and salesmen can emphasize successfully the air-conditioning that warms the air inside the car without having to prove that the frame will mount enough machine guns or anti-tank guns to make a wide radius outside uninhabitable.

These are not items to boast about. Americans, as a race, are probably no more peace-loving than

Science Carries On

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

With a large part of the world engaged again in human slaughter, the gloomy thought suggests itself that about all we have accomplished through scientific advance is the ability to kill one another faster than ever before.

At such times it is particularly heartening to have fresh evidence of the truly constructive character of most of our scientific development. Two items in the day's news fall into this classification.

From New York comes announcement by the Chemical Foundation of the discovery of five new processes for making stainless steel impervious to all known corrosion.

From Pittsburgh comes word of the perfection of a safety glass that will bulge and bend before breaking, and will not shatter into sharp splinters.

The importance of these two discoveries is obvious. Back of them are years of patient work and large sums of money. The new safety glass, for example, is the product of the combined efforts of five companies, and was perfected at a cost estimated at $6,000,000.

Some day, we may learn to live to peace with one another, so that the fruits of scientific progress may be enjoyed to the full by all mankind.

Not Returning to International Law

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Washington, Oct. 25—Under the president's recent proclamation, a submarine of a nation at war can enter an American port unless pursued by an act of God. But a battleship, destroyer, cruiser or an armed merchantman can. The submarine is a recognized vessel of war, all naval powers have them for the same principal purpose. Ours are kept chiefly for use against warships. So are England's. For raiding commerce she has fast surface cruisers.

HUGH JOHNSON

Germany has these also. She can't use them because the British command the seas. So Germany uses subs against commerce. Like surface ships, subs have to refuel to operate far from base. As a practical result, this proclamation has an effect to deprive Germany of the use of her one commerce raiding weapon in wide areas while permitting England to use hers without any impairment by us.

Technical Neutrality

Technically this is neutrality that treats all subs alike—British and German. That is also true of selling arms. But, for the reason just stated, its effect is violently pro-British and anti-German. Since this is so, a question arises as to why we do it. The only authority for doing it was to defend the safety and the neutrality of the United States.

Were either threatened? The appearance of submarines was elaborately officially reported—on both our coasts and in the Caribbean. There was no confirmation. It was intimated but not stated that they were German submarines which—at least insofar as Alaskan waters are concerned—was absurd. A submarine scare can be like the sea-serpent hoax. There are very many things floating in the water that look like a periscope.

Submarines Different

It is argued that submarines are as different from surface warships as "pears and apples." They are—but that difference doesn't warrant this distinction. The only difference in that regard is that they can approach a port submerged and thus concealed. But it is a condition of this very proclamation that, even when they enter, they must approach on the surface.

All pretense that the repeal of the arms embargo is intended as a neutrality measure—to keep us out of war—has been dropped. It is now openly urged as a measure less than war but more than mere words, to help the English and hurt the Germans. So, quite obviously is this clever stunt. So was hooking up the German merchantmen "Bremen" to "search for guns" and permitting English merchant ships to sail into harbors with their guns in plain sight.

Have No Precedent

This column is not now criticizing these measures—except the cynical trickery of the Bremen stunt. It is just reciting them for the purpose of discussing a further policy. This administration says it will "to go back to international law"—meaning no congressional restriction whatever on its dealing with this war. Neither of these two acts which it did within the limits of its discretion finds any precedent in international law. To the extent that "neutrality" at international law means taking no part directly or indirectly with either side in any foreign war, both are un-neutral in spirit if not in letter. So is its reasons for repealing the embargo.

Is a Use of Force

Fencing off great areas of the open ocean and forbidding them to belligerent ships is also without warrant in international law. The seas are supposed to belong to all nations. You can do it—if you have a navy to make it stick. But that isn't "going back to international law." It is a use of force to override international law—which is the very thing we pretend to condemn.

I agree that force has already done that and our only safety is a defensive force—but why all the mealy-mouthed hypocrisy about "keeping out of war" and our "going back to international law."—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Home Rule Measure Needed

SERIOUS ATTENTION is being given to a Home Rule bill by Governor O'Conor's legislative council, and by local groups throughout the state, including the Legislative committee of the local chamber of commerce.

The bill, which was introduced last March 14 in the House of Representatives, was read the first time and referred to the committee on Judiciary; and that committee passed it on for study by the legislative council.

The measure proposes inclusion of its objective in the state constitution. "From and after the General Session in the year 1943," it provides, "the General Assembly shall not enact any law which applies to only one county or the City of Baltimore other than a law which amends the charter of any county or the City of Baltimore At the general election in November, 1942, each county shall elect a charter board, which shall draw up a charter for said county. . . .

"The General Assembly shall, at its regular session in the year 1945, enact a charter for any county which shall not have adopted a charter at the general election in November, 1944. A charter enacted for any county by the General Assembly shall not remain in effect after such county shall adopt a charter. . . ."

The proposed amendment "shall, at the election to be held in November, 1940, be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of the state for their adoption or rejection. . . ."

This may not be the best Home Rule bill that can be devised, but that the state is in need of something looking to its objective cannot be seriously questioned. The mass of local bills that clutter up the proceedings of the General Assembly every time it meets has no business there, and if local affairs can be looked after locally, instead of in the legislature by a single senator, which is usually the case, or at the most with the aid of a majority of the delegates from his county, the general legislative business of the state would be vastly promoted. Indeed, without such interfering handicap, it can be said that the study and care which could and should be given measures of general state application would undoubtedly result in better and more wholesome state laws.

A thoroughgoing study of a Home Rule measure, accordingly, should be productive of the desired result. The bill under study is apparently defective in not including provision for the enactment of local legislation after means therefor have been embraced by the charter boards in the charters they device. All the proposed amendment seems to do is to provide the boards. If they have no power to act, or if their acts are not authorized, any legislature could leave them stand as dummies. But that is a phase easily susceptible to amendment.

Newcomers, Secure Your Vote

THOSE who have taken up their residence in this city and county—or elsewhere in Maryland—within the last year or so should see to it now that their privilege of voting is secured. The advice applies also to those of a longer period of residence if they have not given the matter any attention.

The state laws require that all persons coming into the state to become citizens must file a declaration of their intention to become citizens of the state a year before the next election in order to have the privilege of voting.

The next election will be held in Maryland November 5, 1940. Consequently, in order to make these declarations effective, they must be filed on or before this November 4. There isn't much time left, so those who have neglected this duty should see to it at once. The sooner it is done the better.

By filing these declarations within the time stated, one will have the privilege of voting in the primary elections to be held next summer. Otherwise they are barred from those elections.

Young men and women who will arrive at the age of 21 years after assuming their residence in the state are not affected by the declaration of intentions law. Those above that age are.

Next year's campaign will be an interesting one. Many grave and important issues will come up for decision. Every citizen should by all means secure his privilege of taking part in the campaign and the election. Let the newcomers, accordingly, meet the requirement of the law and see that their names are properly filed. It is simple enough. One need only to go to the clerk's office in the court house and fill out a blank.

Breaks of the Game

THE FOOTBALL SEASON has now passed mid-season, and the college teams are supposed to be at their peak. Plays click, the bill is cleanly handled, the defense is on its toes, not easily to be fooled by trick reverses or passes, the players are drilled in the execution of their particular duties.

The best team, therefore, ought to win — and usually does. But is surprising how many games are determined by the breaks. Of course, part of the game is capitalizing on these breaks; but even so, without them the results might have been different, sometimes vastly different.

Take a look at the accounts of several of the major contests of last Saturday as written by various sports reporters:

Yale over Army, by Allison Danzig. "In one of the weirdest football games ever seen in the bowl . . ."

Princeton aover Columbia, by Robert F. Kelley. "In a game which started with the stabbing excitement of two touchdowns in the first five minutes. . . ."

Duquesne over Pitt, by the United Press. "A pair of sophomores who pounced on the break when they came led Duquesne to . . . . one of the greatest football upsets of the season. . . ."

N. Y. U. over Carnegie, by Arthur J. Daley. "In as wild and wooly a game as will tighten the heartstrings all season long. . . ."

These are all front page stories and by no means the end of the list of upsets, or victories which hung upon the thread of chance. It is fortunate that football holds such unpredictables, for if results could be calculated with mathematical certainty, the crowds in the stands would dwindle. They go in the hope of seeing the unexpected. Even loyalty to alma mater is secondary to the thrill that comes from some factor foreseen by neither side.

Let us be thankful that the statisticians who each Friday night try to dope the victors in the outstanding contests the following day do such a poor job of it. It's the breaks that make the game in football as in life.

The Sensible Reaction

AMERICAN CITIZENS should not be moved by any attempts to stir up excitement over the seizure of the steamship City of Flint by a German prize crew, which took it to Russia's Kola bay. They do not appear to have been so moved, however. Reports on the incident are still incomplete; but perhaps the most sensible reaction concerning it on the part of Americans is to question the advisability of the presence of the vessel laden as it was in dangerous waters.

The incident is just the kind the cash-and-carry legislation was designed to avoid, and if we are to have that to take the place of the provision expiring last May, and it seems we are to have it, the incident should serve to bring that to an early decision.

Possibly the German seizure can be shown as coming within the scope of international law. Great Britain is holding a number of American vessels suspected of carrying contraband and this action will probably come within that field of law. It is to be noted that the lists of goods carried by the steamship corresponded fairly closely with those of Britain and that the United States has not as yet taken exception to the definition of contraband made by either country. There is much quibbling as to the legal phase respecting the cargo of the City of Flint, and that will be threshed out in a prize court, where lawyers representing the United States will be on hand.

Such seizures are most likely to occur in wartime when ships attempt to engage in trade in the war zones.

Falling Leaves

THE THOUGHT of the leaves falling from the trees has always impressed imaginative people as a saddening one. Wrote Bryant the poet: "The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year." The dropping one by one of the mellowing and fading leaves, impresses such folks as comparable to the end of human life.

The tree drops its leaves, because it has no further use for them. But the tree still lives on. It absorbs into its fiber the nourishment it has received through leaves and roots. By and by it will spring forth again with new leaves.

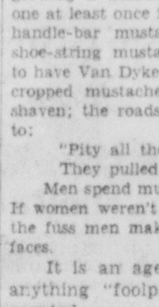

And the leaves are not lost. They descend into earth, enrich the soil, and in due time will blossom forth into other leaves. There is nothing lost in this wonderful earth. Everything is utilized. So it will be with the human spirit. When it falls off the tree of life, it will enter into other forms of existence, and blossom forth more gloriously.

Why is it that when we go to football games it rains? And if we stay home the game story next day starts off with: "Under the smiling, blue October skies—"?

The Serious Business Of Shaving

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Men are odd creatures. One of the funniest things about the species is shaving. . . . When they are youngsters they can hardly wait for that day when they will begin to shave. Then they spend the rest of their days moaning about the tyranny of shaving. Nearly every man I know wishes he didn't have to shave but wouldn't dream of growing a beard. . . . Shavers are divided into two classes: Those that shave at night, just before going to bed and those who shave in the morning just before going to work. If they shave at night their faces don't look clean the next morning or all the next day and their wives object. If they shave in the morning they must get up fifteen minutes earlier and slug-a-beds don't like that.

Marshall Maslin

Some men use safety razors. Some use the old straight edge razor and are very proud of it. Those who use safety razors boast about how long they can use a blade. They buy fancy sharpeners or they strop the blades on the fleshy part of the palm. The straight-edgers are prouder fellows, however. They feel superior because they shave as grandfather did; grandfather, who had a case with seven razors in it and used a different one each day in the week.

Some shavers use a tube of shaving cream; others lather the brush around in a cup with a cake of soap in the bottom. When we were young we were ambitious to have our own cup on a shelf in a barber shop some day with our name on it in Old English letters; but somehow we never did get around to it. We shave at home and only three or four barbers have ever run over our face with a razor.

Some men make a great to-do about shaving; and monopolize the bathroom for half an hour. Others lather the face, give it a fast once-over and that's enough. We're in the second class (and look it). . . . Men frequently complain that they have a heavy beard but a tender skin; we have caught ourselves making that boast often.

Farmers used to shave only once a week. When city folk go camping they prove their freedom by growing a beard. Nearly every male tries to grow one at least once in his life. Old-time bartenders had handle-bar mustaches. Chinese bandits have long shoe-string mustaches. Professors and doctors used to have Van Dyke beards. British officers have close-cropped mustaches. The old Romans were smooth shaven; the roadside advertising man used to beg us to:

"Pity all the might Caesars,
They pulled each whisker out with tweezers."

Men spend much of their time laughing at women. If women weren't so kindhearted, they'd laugh at all the fuss men make about scraping the hair off their faces.

It is an age and a world in which calling anything "foolproof" seems to take a lot for granted.

Edwin C. Hill

It seems to this observer that the imperatives of modern technological war are rewriting all the classics of military strategy, from the Prussian von Clausewitz on down to England's Liddell Hart and Major George Fielding Elliott. The two latter have revised their theories to cover modern weapons and have discarded the old smashing attack as too ruinous to be attempted. The net result of this seems to be a dead-center for any two forces anywhere nearly matched in mechanization, in land war, and leaves the issue to the sea and the sky.

The apparent stalemate at the West Wall would seem to support this view. There has been no von Clausewitz to embody in classical doctrine the ultimate effectiveness of airplanes and submarines. But any layman may see that in the quarter of a century between wars they have brought to a swift climax more destructive enterprise than the army of General von Clausewitz could have brought in a century, strategy for strategy. I have no idea that many noble old tomes, including von Lausewitz's "Vom Krieg", in the war colleges will gather dust in the decades to come.

New Terms of Survival

Consider the progress which has been made in communications, since the last world war. Radio was primitive then. A submarine hunting its prey in 1914, could get only a short-range view of the surrounding sea, even in bright weather; now the cooperating airplane gives a thousand-fold extension of the periscope eye. A scouting plane, high in the mists above the sea, can guide it unerringly to the kill. It can also guide it to its fuel base, or through a mine field, or warn it of the approach of attackers, with radio reception now perfect in the heavens above, the earth beneath and the waters under the earth. A dozen or two men, undersea and in the sky, might sink a huge battleship and take a thousand lives or more. As indeed has just occurred. It is the perfection of communications which has made new terms of survival for any maritime power.

In For Big Overhauling

Of course land war hasn't been written off because of the new and deadlier killing devices. Field strategy is as important as it ever was, but it is in for a tremendous overhauling. There is with a mechanized army little chance of a surprise attack. Currently there is a story from the Western Front of the tremendous uproar, audible for miles, as the Germans deploy their tanks and huge gun carriages, presumably readying an attack. These iron monsters can't move in the night without lights. The glare and the noise were quite as revealing to the French as if the Germans had used a sky-writer to advertise their plans. Reconnaissance planes can dash over the lines and back and keep both sides informed. There is little chance for a secret rabbit punch in a modern war. Communications, mobility and heightened killing power, all out in the open, have made the old military classics as old-fashioned as "Jane Austen".

Plane Menace Lessened

The late Arthur Brisbane used to insist that many of the revered military and naval authorities were just old stick-in-the-muds. The battleship, he vehemently argued, would be just a big, clumsy bomb target when air power really came through. The anti-aircraft gun had not then been developed to its present effectiveness. It is doubtless the only effective refutation, to cate, of Mr. Brisbane's contention.

It is too early in this war to check the argument. So far, it is indicated that the combination of anti-aircraft guns and defending planes may greatly lessen, if not nullify, the menace of the planes.

Drake sent the Spanish empire down with its Armada. The fate of the succeeding British empire may hinge on its defenses against bombing planes and submarines. And old General Karl von Clausewitz could never have glimpsed the "shape of things to come." Many a former plebe in a military college will recall that von Clausewitz was once as immutable as Blackstone—but the Wright Brothers and Simon Lake and few others changed all that. We still "see through a glass darkly."—Copyright, 1939, King Features.

THE BELL-WETHER OF "LIBERALISM"

Militarists in Japan Are Apparently In Much Disfavor among the People

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Of course Joseph C. Crew, Uncle Sam's ambassador to Japan, didn't make his extraordinarily undiplomatic speech in Tokio a few days ago without State Secretary Hull's approval — and that necessarily means President Roosevelt's back of it.

Joseph C. Grew

Parenthetically, if anybody missed reading reports of his talk, Grew told the Japs that America is "profoundly shocked" by their military men's disregard of Yankee rights, by their bombings, and by their general conduct on the eastern Asiatic mainland.

Ordinarily a foreign representative who expressed himself with such candor in the country he was assigned to, immediately would make himself "persona non grata" and his government would be asked to recall him.

But Grew evidently threw a scare into the Japanese. He was just back at his ambassadorial post from a visit in the United States, his hearers realized that he was speaking directly from Washington; also that he had chatted with plenty of his countrymen and was in up-to-date touch with sentiment on this side of the Pacific. Moreover, he spoke warningly; not threateningly. His whole tone was to the effect that we want to be friends with the Japs, but that their army, navy and aviation potentates are making it very difficult for us.

Jap Feelings Hurt

His listeners undoubtedly were hurt; yet Grew doesn't seem to have made them so much angry as pained.

Instead of making a sassy answer to the ambassador, Japanese Foreign Minister Nomura promptly announced that he'd "explain" to the former, in the hope of convincing him that Nippon is as anxious as we are to be friends, that we've misunderstood them if we think otherwise, and that in future they'll see that their military nabobs are more careful.

In short, Grew knows his Orient and did a classy job of oratory. He was forcible enough to attract lots of attention, but he steered clear of saying anything that it would have been impossible for the mikado to swallow without "loss of face"—the worst thing that can happen to anybody in the Far East.

Not only Premier Abe and Foreign Minister Nomura have taken his strong talk in excellent part, but the Jap press has voiced outright appreciation of it. The Tokio newspaper Nichi-Nichi even remarks that the islanders are under obligations to Grew for letting them know candidly just how his home folk feel about the Japanese militarists' methods in China.

Now there's something very queer about all this.

It isn't queer that Japan's diplomats are the last word in politeness. Their courtesy always has been perfectly exquisite. No informed person ever has found a particle of fault with the amiability of the country's civil officialdom's intentions.

The queer thing is that civil officialdom and press are so free now to admit, by implication, that maybe the nation's militarists' behavior has been open to just criticism.

Samurai a Hard Lot

The Japs' military setup is entirely independent of the rest of the government. It's dominated by the Samurai, a hereditary fighting class. The Samurai are anything but nice people to deal with. If a civil functionary from the premier on down, annoys them the Samurai's custom is to assassinate him in short order, and they can't be called to account for it, either.

How does it happen, then, that Foreign Minister Nomura and Nippon's newspapers have the nerve to take the attitude that they do take toward that speech by Ambassador Grew?

Washington inclines to the view that the militarists have fallen into such disfavor with the Jap masses that it's beginning to be safe to defy them.

It's the militarists who launched the campaign in China against the advice of many authorities in non-military governmental departments. If the militarists had made a quick cleanup on the mainland doubtless they simply would have enhanced their prestige. But the war has strung out tremendously and Japan can't stand the economic strain of it. When Russia seemed to be pulling out of the situation it was surmised even here that the Chinese speedily would be finished. Instead, they won a notable victory right afterward, now the Russians show signs of starting in to help them again.

It wouldn't be much better to have Russia dominant in China than to have Japan dominant there but it might be the death knell of the Samurai. With that crowd eliminated the Japs should be much easier to get along with.

Fraternities Challenged

From the Morgantown, W. Va., Post

The university has issued a report on the scholastic standing of fraternities and sororities for the second semester of the 1938-39 school year.

This report shows that the average of all men students in the university was 1.1638 while the average of all fraternities was 1.0402.

In contrast to this, the average of all sororities was 1.4435 compared to an average of 1.3601 for all women students.

Only four of the sixteen fraternities had an average higher than the average for all men students, whereas six of the nine sororities had a better average than the average for all women students.

This report indicates rather clearly that the sororities are doing a much better job than the fraternities, in promoting the scholastic welfare and accomplishments of their members and pledges.

What is true of the scholastic standing of fraternities is not true in all colleges and universities. Reports gathered by the Interfraternity Conference show that on many campuses the fraternities have been able to make consistently better scholastic records than the average for all students.

This is accomplished in many ways. What a fraternity's members do scholastically is largely determined by what the fraternity demands of its members. If it puts as much emphasis upon scholastic achievement as it does upon social finesse and extracurricular activities, it gets results.

The fraternities at the university are clearly faced with a responsibility to put more emphasis upon the school work of their members and to demand that fraternity men do at least as well as the average student.

Things Missing On Our Autos

From the Christian Science Monitor

New York is fortunate—indeed, all of America is—that there can be held in the metropolis on the Hudson such a display as is taking place there in the 1940 annual automobile show.

The good fortune is implicit in the fact that manufacturers do not have to cover their bright new models with field-gray armor plate in order to find a buyer. Instead, they can talk about styling and about safety in terms of brakes. The new sealed-beam headlights need not be hooded for blackouts. Fluid drive or overdrive transmissions, will master any roads that are likely to be encountered without requiring caterpillar treads on the wheels for battlefield terrain. Ride stabilizers will not be tested out on shell-holes, and salesmen can emphasize successfully the air-conditioning that warms the air inside the car without having to prove that the frame will mount enough machine guns or anti-tank guns to make a wide radius outside uninhabitable.

These are not items to boast about. Americans, as a race, are probably no more peace-loving than many peoples who have been drawn into the holocaust of war in Europe and Asia. The blessings of peace are something for which to be profoundly grateful. May the area widen in which production can be for convenience and comfort and the improvement of mankind, instead of for destruction.

Science Carries On

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

With a large part of the world engaged again in human slaughter, the gloomy thought suggests itself that about all we have accomplished through scientific advance is the ability to kill one another faster than ever before.

At such times it is particularly heartening to have fresh evidence of the truly constructive character of most of our scientific development. Two items in the day's news fall into this classification.

From New York comes announcement by the Chemical Foundation of the discovery of five new processes for making stainless steel impervious to all known corrosion.

From Pittsburgh comes word of the perfection of a safety glass that will bulge and bend before breaking, and will not shatter into sharp splinters.

The importance of these two discoveries is obvious. Back of them are years of patient work and large sums of money. The new safety glass, for example, is the product of the combined efforts of five companies, and was perfected at a cost estimated at $6,000,000.

Some day, we may learn to live to peace with one another, so that the fruits of scientific progress may be enjoyed to the full by all mankind.

Not Returning to International Law

HUGH JOHNSON

Washington, Oct. 25—Under the president's recent proclamation, a submarine of a nation at war can enter an American port unless pursued by an act of God. But a battleship, destroyer, cruiser or an armed merchantman can. The submarine is a recognized vessel of war, all naval powers have them for the same principal purpose. Ours are kept chiefly for use against warships. So are England's. For raiding commerce she has fast surface cruisers.

Germany has these also. She can't use them because the British command the seas. So Germany uses subs against commerce. Like surface ships, subs have to refuel to operate far from base. As a practical result, this proclamation has an effect to deprive Germany of the use of her one commerce raiding weapon in wide areas while permitting England to use hers without any impairment by us.

Technical Neutrality

Technically this is neutrality. It treats all subs alike—British and German. That is also true of sending arms. But, for the reasons just stated, its effect is violently pro-British and anti-German. Since this is so, a question arises as to why we do it. The only authority for doing it was to defend the safety and the neutrality of the United States.

Were either threatened? The disappearance of submarines was officially officially reported—on both our coasts and in the Caribbean. There was no confirmation. It was intimated but not stated that they were German submarines which—at least insofar as Alaskan waters are concerned—was absurd. A submarine scare can be like a sea-serpent hoax. There are too many things floating in the water that look like a periscope.

Submarines Different

It is argued that submarines are as different from surface warships as "pears and apples." They are—but that difference doesn't warrant this distinction. The only difference in that regard is that they can approach a port submerged and thus concealed. But it is a condition of this very proclamation that, even when they enter, they must approach on the surface.

All pretense that the repeal of the arms embargo is intended as a neutrality measure—to keep us out of war—has been dropped. It is now openly urged as a measure less than war but more than neutral; in words, to help the English and hurt the Germans. So, quite obviously is this clever stunt. So was hoisting up the German merchantman "Bremen" to "search for guns" and permitting English merchant ships to sail into harbors with their guns in plain sight.

Have No Precedent

This column is not now criticizing these measures—except the cynical trickery of the Bremen stunt. It is just reciting them for the purpose of discussing a further point. This administration says it wants "to go back to international law"—meaning no congressional resolution whatever on its dealing with this war. Neither of these acts which it did within the limit of its discretion finds any precedent in international law. To the extent that "neutrality" at international law means taking no side directly or indirectly with either side in any foreign war, both are un-neutral in spirit if not in law. So is its reasons for repealing the embargo.

Is a Use of Force

Fencing off great areas of the open ocean and forbidding them to belligerent ships is also without warrant in international law. The seas are supposed to belong to all nations. You can do it—if you have a navy to make it stick. But that isn't "going back to international law." It is a use of force to override international law—which is the very thing we pretend to condemn.

I agree that force has already done that and our only safety is a defensive force—but why all the mealy-mouthed hypocrisy about "keeping out of war" and our "going back to international law."—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

On the Record

By United States Senator Alva B. Adams, Democrat, of Colorado

What I am interested in is public action by the Congress which will stimulate employment, not public action which will discourage employment; and I think increasing the public debt, and increasing the continuation of the deficit, is a definite discouragement to industry to business. * * * I know what apprehension and fear have gripped our people because of the apparently unrestrained expenditures which we are guilty. What I am interested in is giving business a signal.

Morning Motto

Ah, how unjust to Nature is he himself is thoughtless, thankless, inconsistent man! — EDWARD YOUNG.

ECCAPES SPY'S FATE

Gay Orlova

Exotic Gay Orlova, who was deported from the U. S., was almost executed as a spy by the French when found in a village near the Maginot Line, according to report from Switzerland. The former sweetheart of Charles (Lucky) Luciano, New York gangster, went to visit her ex-husband, a French lieutenant in line regiment.

We don't promise dishwashing will become your husband's greatest joy, BUT—when he gets irritable and pepless due to constipation, just give him FEEN-A-MINT, the delicious chewing gum way to relief, and see how much jollier he'll be around the house! Maryland Teachers To Convene Friday

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP) — Maryland's school teachers were ready today for their seventy-second annual convention and their pupils were ready for a holiday from classes which many will get when the educators come here Friday to open the two-day meeting.

The gavel will bang the first session into order at 9:15 a. m. Friday when the teachers assemble for a round of speeches by persons prominent in the state education system. From then until the convention's close Saturday they will have but few idle moments.

Speakers on the opening program will include Wendell E. Dunn, president of the State Teachers' Association, Dr. J. M. T. Finney of the State Board of Education; Forrest Bramble, president of the Board of School Commissioners of Baltimore; Dr. Charles H. Judd, director of the education program of the National Youth Administration, and Aubrey Williams, Administrator of the NYA.

Schools throughout the city will be used Friday afternoon for sectional meetings, the teachers splitting into groups to discuss specialized topics.

They will reassemble in a general session Friday night to hear Dr. Judd and H. V. Kaltenborn, radio news commentator.

The annual business session will be held Saturday morning following breakfast in the Eastern high school cafeteria. Officers will be elected at this meeting.

The thirteenth annual concert of the All-Maryland high school orchestra will follow in the Eastern high auditorium. Osmar P. Steinwald, supervisor of instrumental music in the Baltimore Public schools, and Charles C. T. Stull, supervisor of music for Frederick county, will conduct the orchestra.

Nice Will Speak To N. Y. Republicans

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP)—Former Governor Harry W. Nice today accepted an invitation to address the National Republican Clb in New York City Nov. 28. He said the address, to be broadcast over a National chain, would probably discuss how the European situation will affect America.

700,000 Workers Added To Payrolls Recently

Washington, Oct. 25 (AP)—Employment gains in manufacturing industries have added 700,000 workers to payrolls in the past three months and boosted the government's employment index to its highest point in twenty-two months, Secretary of Labor Perkins disclosed today.

The index, she reported, now stands at 100.1 of the 1932-35 average, the highest point since November 1937.

The secretary said industrial recovery as measured by employment and payrolls, has been "unusually pronounced" in recent months, although factory employment is still about ten percent below the peaks of July and August, 1937.

Square Dancing Will Be a Feature Of Junior Volunteer Corps Event

With Hallowe'en just around the corner, thoughts are turning to such things as goblins, ghosts, pumpkins and gay parties.

One of the outstanding parties in Cumberland's social whirl this Hallowe'en season will be the barn dance sponsored by the Junior Volunteer Service Corps for the benefit of the Baby Milk fund tomorrow evening at Clarysville Inn. A number of private parties are scheduled to precede the dance.

Mrs. W. Earle Cobey, who heads the committee in charge of arrangements, announced today that a feature of the evening will be square dancing with music by a real square dance orchestra, which has just completed an engagement at Stone Tavern, Deep Creek, and which is well known to many Cumberlanders, particularly to the Deep Creek lake summer colony.

Pupils from the Lee Winter studio will furnish the entertainment for the floor show and the Black Diamond orchestra will play for the regular dancing which will be from 9 until 1. A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

Tickets may be obtained from any member of the Service Corps.

Many Parties Scheduled

With the Hallowe'en season here, many luncheons, cocktail parties, dances and childrens masquerade parties are planned for this week.

Among those entertaining is Mrs. R. M. Hudak, who will give a bridge luncheon today at her home, 809 Mount Royal avenue.

Guests will include: Mrs. Edmund S. Burke, Mrs. Porter D. Collins, Mrs. James M. Pitkethly, Mrs. William M. Diedrich, Mrs. Harry C. Reed, Mrs. Donald A. LaCoss, Mrs. James C. Warden and Mrs. Leo H. Ley.

Masquerade Event

In honor of Mrs. Paul DeMarcey who will celebrate her birthday Sunday and who with her husband, Paul DeMarcey, will leave soon to reside in Florida, the Wednesday night bowling league which meets at SS. Peter and Paul bowling alleys, entertained with a masquerade party last night at the Cumberland Country Club, Christie road.

Those who attended were:

Mrs. F. F. Sutherland, Mrs. Owen E. Hitchins, Mrs. Jean DeWitt, Mrs. D. L. Sloan, Mrs. Morris Rosenbaum, Mrs. W. J. Torrington, Mrs. Fred T. Small, Mrs. Howard L. Tolson, Mrs. P. J. Arendes, Mrs. F. Brooke Whiting, Mrs. Arthur P Dixon, Mrs. William A. Gunter, Miss Marie Holzshu, Mrs. Walter C. Capper, Mrs. Albert Morgan, Mrs. Robert E. King, Mrs. Sommerville Nicholson, Mrs. Cyril B. Geare, Mrs. George G. Young, Mrs. Ivan Poling, Mrs. William A. Gracie, Miss Bess Dickey, Mrs. Richard T Lowndes, Mrs. W. Carl White and Mrs. Frank M. Wilson.

Dinner and Play

A plate dinner will be served from 5 to 7 o'clock this evening in the Masonic temple in connection with the annual bazaar of Cumberland chapter No. 56 of the Order of the Eastern Star.

At 8 o'clock a one-act play, "The Rag Sociable," under the direction of Mrs. James Orr, will be given. The public is invited.

Warfield, Miss Dorothy Willison, Miss Marie Lapin, Miss Mary Rice, Miss Blanche Snyder, Miss Mary Sowerby, Jack Platt, John Comer and Ralph R. Webster, principal.

Birthday Party

Pauline, eleven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Durant, Cumberland street, celebrated her birthday Tuesday with a party in the afternoon at the home of her parents.

Guests included: Jeanette and Jerry Wallace, Frances Shipe, Mildred Borer and Patsy Madden.

Thanksgiving Dance

Thanksgiving may be Nov. 23 or Nov. 30, but the gala Thanksgiving dance being planned by the De-Molay Alumni will be Saturday, Nov. 18, it was announced yesterday.

The dance will be held at the Ali Ghan Country Club, with music by Jimmy Andrews and his orchestra. Invitations will go out in the next week or so.

Elks' Barn Dance

The dance committee reports that a number of reservations have been received by the social committee of Cumberland lodge No. 63 of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks for the Hallowe'en costume barn dance to begin at 9:30 o'clock Saturday evening in the ballroom of the Elk's home.

Some couples will be masked and in costume but formal and semi-formal attire will be permissible. Music will be by the Society Ramblers featuring Farmer Flynn's Fiddlers for the barn dance numbers.

Bible Class Meets

Expressing Your Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

EVERY LIFT of the eyebrow, every sly squint of the eyes cause tissues to drop into lines. But if the under padding of the skin is kept healthy, firm and well toned, the lines don't stick. They come and go.

You've heard of expression wrinkles. They include frown lines, crinkles around the mouth because lips are pursed disdainfully, furrows across the forehead that are made by the lady whose habit it is to register surprise. It seems silly to make a road map of the only face one has.

There are young people who have old faces. They are proud of being serious minded and never crack a smile. They have no wrinkles, of course, but there's that venerable look.

Expression means more than perfect features. A pleasing one is possible to any individual. It is a passport into the land of friendship. Even cats and dogs recognize it for what it is—sweetness of soul, kindliness, graciousness.

Mental health is a factor in appearance. The healthy mind is courageous, never morbid. It does not harbor brooding thoughts, nor does it go on grand worry sprees. Keeping sweet is one way of keeping young. The acidulated woman wrinkles early and nobody loves her. She is a lemon and a pest.

How you look depends to a large extent on what you are and how you behave toward your fellow creatures. Be kind to the cook, the cat and the woman next door, and you won't have to travel to the beauty shop the rest of your days.

Beware of eye strain. If you suffer from that trouble, you'll have jumpy nerves, turkey tracks and goodness knows what else.

After the age of 40 there's a good chance that you need glasses. Might as well seek the services of an eye specialist and have an examination. The wise one will take good care of her soul lamps. Specs will give them relief. Without them reading may be an effort, lids will redden, surrounding muscles may twitch.

Temporary relief from discomfort may be had by bathing the eyes with hot water, then with cold. If the day has been dusty, follow the hot and cold applications with a boric acid solution, one teaspoonful of the powder to one cup of boiling water. Strain through muslin and cool.

PATTERN 9180

No age is too young for fashion . . . if it's a girl! Marian Martin presents a very-much-in-style jumper frock in Pattern 9180—every young thing will adore it! The skirt is flaring and the basque-effect top may be ruffle-trimmed. The buttoning all down the back helps mother dress her quickly. Make a fresh blouse with either long or short sleeves, and frill-edge the neckline or sew on a tiny collar, perhaps in contrast. With the accurate Sew Chart directions, even the most timid dressmaker will have no difficulty with this frock.

Pattern 9180 may be ordered only in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6, jumper, requires ⅞ yard 54 inch fabric; short sleeves blouse, ⅞ yard 35 inch fabric; long sleeve blouse, 1¼ yards 39 inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address, and style number.

Let Marian Martin's new winter pattern book show you the easy way to home dressmaking and a distinctive individual wardrobe. It's a style rendezvous for everyone, from tots to teens . . . from brides to matrons and large-sized women. You'll find smart clothes for school year, for working, sporting, partying! And what pride you'll feel in making every stitch yourself! Hurry—write your order today! Book fifteen cents. Pattern fifteen cents. Book and pattern together, twenty-five cents.

Germany Places Order For 1,000,000 Tons of Fodder for Livestock

Moscow, Oct. 25 (AP) — Germany has placed an order with Soviet Russia for 1,000,000 tons of fodder for her livestock, it is understood, as part of enlarged German-Soviet trade.

This is the biggest order ever placed here. It was said in informed quarters that Russia will begin delivery in a few days.

James Wickersham Taken by Death

Juneau, Alaska, Oct. 25 (AP) — James Wickersham, 82, former congressional delegate, pioneer lawyer, federal judge, explorer, author and bibliophile, died today.

He came from Tacoma, Wash., in 1900 under President McKinley's appointment as Judge of the Third Judicial District of Alaska.

He covered a circuit of 300,000 square miles, much of it by dog sled; built courthouses and jails, organized towns, discovered gold, made the first attempt to scale Mt. McKinley, edited a newspaper and tried many cases, including the McKenzie-Noyes Conspiracy case at Nome—the case which provided material for Rex Beach's novel, "The Spoilers."

Walter Wilkinson is the person who first revived the art of the hand-puppet theater in England twenty years ago. He has written a number of puppet travel books.

Brokers Reminisce About "Black Thursday"

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—Brokers who went through the 1929 Wall street crash had plenty of time on the floor of the stock exchange today to reminisce about "Black Thursday" ten years ago.

In contrast with that tumultuous day a decade ago, when 12,894,000 shares changed hands, today's transactions amounted to only 1,163,330.

With the market in slack waters after the recent war boom, dealings were leisurely and the stock ticker had no trouble keeping abreast the transactions.

On Oct. 24, 1929, it was far behind the market. The final quotation was ticked off nearly three hours after the close.

A few days later, Oct. 29, the record turnover of 16,410,000 shares was made but the decline had become more orderly and the ticker kept closer step, registering the final quotation an hour and a half after trading on the floor had ceased.

Advice to the Lovelorn person to make the decision, concerning your marriage is your family doctor. And you haven't told me what degree of relationship this cousin is to you. If he's not a first cousin, I shouldn't think the danger, supposed to go with so close a degree of kinship, would be great.

First cousins sometimes do marry, and have lovely normal children. Again, certain taints in the children are ascribed to close relationships in the parents.

In any case, it would be most unwise for you to marry your fiance when you are in love with another man, and I hope for your own sake you won't go on with this marriage, at least for the present.

Gets No Response

Dear Miss Fairfax:

If he were not at our house continually, to see one of the boys in our family, perhaps I should not find it so difficult to get over loving him. At first I could not bear him, and then found myself loving him devotedly.

For years he has been mixed up in a love affair with a divorcee. They never seem to consider marriage, but are apparently devoted to each other. This man, who is somewhat older than I am, can hardly conceal his boredom when I talk to him. He has absolutely no use for me, and this unfortunate attachment is driving me crazy.

UNHAPPY.

Love and hate are so curiously intermingled, that if you were older you might have recognized the possibility of the strong dislike you started out with, turning to love.

It's pretty hard for a young girl or boy to act sanely and sensibly when going through the suffering of a first love affair. But if you can manage to look at your case objectively, you will see there is nothing in this giving of your best to an unappreciative man, interested in someone else. Try to be sensible. Force yourself to go out and meet other people. Absent yourself when this man comes to your home. Join a club, particularly a good hiking club. There's a splendid one in your city.

And, don't waste your sweetness on the desert air. This will also answer "Unhappy Sue".

To Keep a Lithe Figure, Start With a Good Stretch

Ann Rutherford, movie actress, does her sit-down-and-stretch exercises (No. 1 on the list) on a large beach towel.

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer

It will take a lot of will power to hold on to that lithe figure you've acquired this summer and fall.

Will power enough to watch your diet, keep fairly regular hours, and live a reasonably Spartan life.

2. Lie on your back and cycle. Hold your legs up in the air by placing your hands on your hips. Pedal around and around, pretending your bicycle wheel is just as large as you can take it. Three to five minutes of that is plenty.

3. Now lie down on your back on the floor. Bring both your knees up to the right and slowly lower them to the left, bringing them across your chest. Ten times, if possible.

4. Still lying on your back, fling your arms out at your shoulders. Touch your right toe over your out-flung left arm, then your left toe over your out-flung right arm. Ten times is a lot.

5. Now get up. Stand at the side of a good, strong chair, and holding onto its back with one hand, kick as high as possible with first one leg, then the other. Swing each leg from your hips. Ten times per leg is plenty.

6. Finish off with a posture check-up. Stand with your back pressed close against the wall. Raise your head and elevate your chin, stretching as high as possible. Put your chest up and out and your shoulders down and back. Press your spine as close against the wall as you can.

It should touch in six places: back of head, back of neck, shoulders, lower end of spine, upper calf and heels.

When you think your spine is pressed as tightly against the wall as you can press it, walk away. Hold that posture now—it's the climax of today's half-dozen.

Two Americans Are Released in Sweden

Stockholm, Oct. 25 (AP) — Two Americans, John Gray Farson and George Kidder-Smith, were footloose and free again today after a brief entanglement with Sweden's anti-espionage machinery.

Graduates of Princeton university, they were arrested yesterday when police thought they were showing too much interest in military objects near a child welfare institution they were visiting. After their release they explained they never were actually jailed, but merely taken to police headquarters and questioned. Two hours later they were freed.

Acid in Blood Is Seen As Cause Of Athlete's Foot

Fungus Growth Can Be Checked by Alkaline Powder

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Science is usually ahead, but sometimes it is behind the "common sense" opinion of the man in the street. When science catches up with him, the event should be acknowledged, even celebrated.

It has long been a fundamental belief, generally held in non-scientific quarters, that the itchy, blistery eruptions occurring on the feet, in the grain and sometimes on the fingers are caused by "acid in the blood." The medical profession has pooh-poohed this and pointed out that the blood does not and can not get acid without very serious consequences. Anyway, it has said, these eruptions are caused by a microscopic fungus commonly called ringworm, scientifically call trichophyton.

I have done a good deal of this pooh-poohing myself, and in partial restitution I should like to say that science now has found that there is something in the acid idea. The latest treatment of these forms of athlete's foot is to attempt to change the chemical reaction of the local tissues.

Variety of Fungi

There is a great variety of fungi which cause the trouble, and that fact has produced many methods of treatment. They do not all respond to the same germicide. But they all grow best in a slightly-acid medium, and stop growing or die out in an alkaline medium.

They grow best in a p H 3 or p H 5 medium (p H 7 is neutral and acid reactions are below this, alkaline above). The skin normally inclines toward the acid side, which makes it such an ideal medium for the growth of these fungi. Their own growth increases the acidity of the skin in the area where they are implanted.

Using a powder which has a reaction of p H 10—definitely alkaline—it has been found possible to produce so unfavorable an environment that fungus growth is checked.

The powder can be sprinkled between the toes and also in the shoes to preven reinfection. In the form known as oliotic itch, in the groin or under the armpits, sprinkling the powder on twice a day is helpful.

Observe Precautions

All the other precautions of the treatment of ringworm should be observed. These cases are often very chronic and secondary infection is common. This must be treated with antiseptics. When the secondary infection and fissures are healed, the alkaline powder can be used.

The occurrence of reinfection in ringworm is a most important feature in keeping these eruptions alive. Dermatologists believe that the skin of individuals who contract a fungus infection becomes sensitized, just as some people are sensitized to colds. The folds around the toe-nails and finger-nails are most troublesome depots of reinfection, and in all cases the toe-nails and finger-nails should receive special attention.

Questions and Answers

Reader: "(1). Are all light spots on the skin due to the loss of pigment? (2). Can the pigment be put back by any medical treatment?"

Answer: (1). Yes. (2). No.

Wave of Buying Sends Stocks Up Fractions to Two Points or More

Average for 60 Issues Is Highest Since Nov. 12, 1938

New York, Oct. 25 (AP) — Buying came into the stock market in volume today and leading issues were hiked up fractions to two points or more.

Steels, rails, motors, aircrafts and automobile accessory shares were most favored, but gains were general throughout the list.

The Associated Press average of sixty representatives stocks moved up .4 of a point at 53.9, its highest level since Nov. 12, 1938. Transfers totaled 1,691,200 shares compared with 1,163,330 yesterday.

Brokers said many traders who have avoided positions recently came in on the purchasing side, impressed with the market's action of the past fortnight, its strength in the face of liquidation from abroad, and the apparent laying of the "peace offensive" bugaboo.

Wall street accepted that the arms embargo would be lifted in the Senate vote, so "war infant" stocks were in demand.

Heyden chemical bounced five in the curb and gains ranging to two points were scored for Master Electric, Lockheed, American Cyanamid "B", Jones & Laughlin, Fruehauf Trailer, Bellanca Aircraft and Beech Aircraft. Turnover of 295,000 shares compared with 178,000 Tuesday.

Stoll To Quit Bund

Seattle, Oct. 25 (AP)—Paul Stoll, named in Dies committee testimony last week as Seattle and Spokane leader of the German-American Bund, said today he would sever all bund connections, after hearing a broadcast that members would be required to register under the alien registration law.

Stoll, a cabinet maker, said his employer dismissed him yesterday.

Interviewed at his home, Stoll asserted he was not a "foreign agent" and he refused to be connected with any organization whose members were so classified.

Mr. and Mrs. Stoll are German-born American citizens.

Acid in Blood Is Seen As Cause Of Athlete's Foot

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Science is usually ahead, but sometimes it is behind the "common sense" opinion of the man in the street. When science catches up with him, the event should be acknowledged, even celebrated.

It has long been a fundamental belief, generally held in non-scientific quarters, that the itchy, blistery eruptions occurring on the feet, in the grain and sometimes on the fingers are caused by "acid in the blood." The medical profession has pooh-poohed this and pointed out that the blood does not and can not get acid without very serious consequences. Anyway, it has said, these eruptions are caused by a microscopic fungus commonly called ringworm, scientifically call trichophyton.

I have done a good deal of this pooh-poohing myself, and in partial restitution I should like to say that science now has found that there is something in the acid idea. The latest treatment of these forms of athlete's foot is to attempt to change the chemical reaction of the local tissues.

Variety of Fungi

There is a great variety of fungi which cause the trouble, and that fact has produced many methods of treatment. They do not all respond to the same germicide. But they all grow best in a slightly-acid medium, and stop growing or die out in an alkaline medium.

They grow best in a p H 3 or p H 5 medium (p H 7 is neutral and acid reactions are below this, alkaline above). The skin normally inclines toward the acid side, which makes it such an ideal medium for the growth of these fungi. Their own growth increases the acidity of the skin in the area where they are implanted.

Using a powder which has a reaction of p H 10—definitely alkaline—it has been found possible to produce so unfavorable an environment that fungus growth is checked.

The powder can be sprinkled between the toes and also in the shoes to preven reinfection. In the form known as otiotic itch, in the groin or under the armpits, sprinkling the powder on twice a day is helpful.

Observe Precautions

All the other precautions of the treatment of ringworm should be observed. These cases are often very chronic and secondary infection is common. This must be treated with antiseptics. When the secondary infection and fissures are healed, the alkaline powder can be used.

The occurrence of reinfection in ringworm is a most important feature in keeping these eruptions alive. Dermatologists believe that the skin of individuals who contract a fungus infection becomes sensitized, just as some people are sensitized to colds. The folds around the toe-nails and finger-nails are most troublesome depots of reinfection, and in all cases the toe-nails and finger-nails should receive special attention.

Questions and Answers

Reader: "(1). Are all light spots on the skin due to the loss of pigment? (2). Can the pigment be put back by any medical treatment?"

Answer: (1). Yes. (2). No.

Wave of Buying Sends Stocks Up Fractions to Two Points or More

Average for 60 Issues Is Highest Since Nov. 12, 1938

New York, Oct. 25 (AP) — Buying came into the stock market in volume today and leading issues were hiked up fractions to two points or more.

Steels, rails, motors, aircrafts and automobile accessory shares were most favored, but gains were general throughout the list.

The Associated Press average of sixty representatives stocks moved up .4 of a point at 53.9, its highest level since Nov. 12, 1938. Transfers totaled 1,691,200 shares compared with 1,163,330 yesterday.

Brokers said many traders who have avoided positions recently came in on the purchasing side, impressed with the market's action of the past fortnight, its strength in the face of liquidation from abroad, and the apparent laying of the "peace offensive" bugaboo.

Wall street accepted that the arms embargo would be lifted in the Senate vote, so "war infant" stocks were in demand.

Heyden chemical bounced five in the curb and gains ranging to two points were scored for Master Electric, Lockheed, American Cyanamid "B", Jones & Laughlin, Fruehauf Trailer, Bellanca Aircraft and Beech Aircraft. Turnover of 295,000 shares compared with 178,000 Tuesday.

Stoll To Quit Bund

Seattle, Oct. 25 (AP)—Paul Stoll, named in Dies committee testimony last week as Seattle and Spokane leader of the German-American Bund, said today he would sever all bund connections, after hearing a broadcast that members would be required to register under the alien registration law.

Stoll, a cabinet maker, said his employer dismissed him yesterday.

Interviewed at his home, Stoll asserted he was not a "foreign agent" and he refused to be connected with any organization whose members were so classified.

Mr. and Mrs. Stoll are German-born American citizens.

Strings Should Be Taken from Gifts to Child

Presents Should Be Given Them Outright or Not at All

BY GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.

It is not unusual for a child of three or four, after giving something to another child, to demand the gift's return. This is because the giver's attitude toward the recipient has changed. There was a string tied to the gift, but the recipient hadn't known about the string. Many a parent does the same kind of thing. She presents a toy, for instance, as a reward earned by the child for accomplishing some previously announced requirement. Rightly, then, the child thinks the gift is his. But suddenly he may discover that it isn't, that it has been taken from him by the giver. Theobold, six, is given a long-wished for wagon by his parents. Two days later he strikes his sister, calls her ugly names or "sasses" his grandmother. "Now you can't have your wagon to play with for a week," he is told.

Some Suppositions

Suppose Theobold had received the wagon because he had washed the dinner dishes every evening for two months. And suppose that thereafter he either washed them under protest, or washed them carelessly or avoided washing them at all when possible. Then probably he is told that since he no longer is dependable among the dishes, his wagon must be put away until he proves to be a "better boy."

But there had been no statement of such conditions when the gift was promised, nor even when it was received. How is Theobold going to feel he had been treated justly? It is not wise to bestow a gift with a string to it. When you give a child anything either as a reward or promised achievement or not, give it outright or not at all. Don't be childish. Assume then that the thing is wholly his, to do with as he likes so long as he does not deliberately damage it, or injure others or himself with it. Provided Theobold had, in some other respect, been naughty and should, in your judgment, be punished, give him the punishment, but not by confiscating his property, which had no relation whatsoever to the delinquency.

Solving Parent Problems

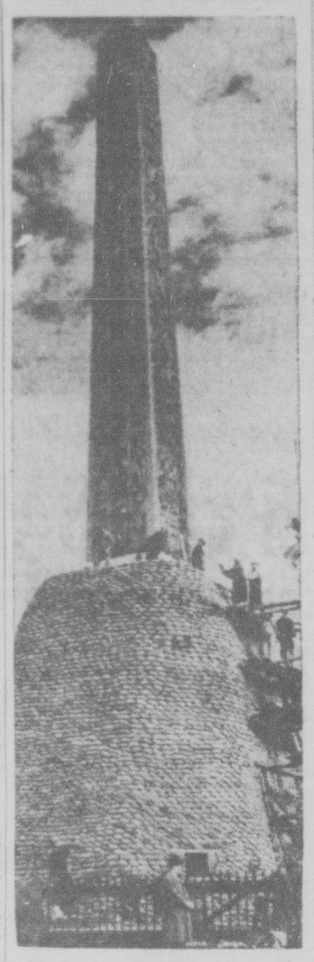

Q. Suppose you leave your children, eight and ten, with a caretaker and on arriving home discover that these children had been fighting and had broken some of the furniture. What would you do about it?

A. If I could manage myself as I should, I would listen calmly to the caretaker's report of the matter. Also I should let each child tell about it as he chose, but I should not ask any questions nor hold any trial; neither would I administer any punishment. After conference alone with my wife, we would map plan for the future when we have to be away and leave the children home. We would agree on one of the following: (1) To find some caretaker who could be counted on to manage these chilren in our absence. (2) To stay home, one or both of us, until the children had been trained in responsibility in our absence. (3) To put up with the consequences, hoping for the best. But in no instance would we have a trial and administer punishment on our return, because we would not want to induce the children to battle and lie about each other, nor make of the caretaker an official bearer of tales.

Q. Would you ever tell a child he must not cry after you had punished him?

A. No, I meant to give him pain. Then why should he not have the right to cry?

Christine Rogers Claims She Was an Employe Of William Garrison

Annapolis, Oct. 25 (AP)—Christine Rogers, a Virginia girl (King George county) argued before the Court of Appeals today that she was an employe of the late William T. Garrison, Baltimore, when she bore his son, and was not his common law wife.

The unusual argument came up when Miss Rogers defended her right to a $6,600 verdict for back wages against Garrison's estate, returned in the Baltimore Superior court.

Charles Allan Lynch, administrator of Garrison's estate, appealed the verdict on the ground that Miss Rogers was Garrison's common law wife, and hence debarred from collecting wages.

Evidence in the case showed Miss Rogers went to live in Garrison's home in 1928 when she was nineteen years old. She was then making $10 a week in a candy factory, and testified Garrison agreed "to pay her more than that."

She testified she subsequently bore him a son, Billy, now of school age, and that Garrison frequently assured her the child would be educated. She said Garrison forged a marriage certificate, which she signed, to show her parents in Virginia, and that she signed purchase contracts as his wife at his insistence.

She insisted, however, that she was his employe throughout the ten years, and asked $15 a week as compensation on Garrison's promise to "pay her more" than the $10 she was making at the candy factory.

"It is true that she did have a child by him; but this fact alone is not sufficient to bar her from enforcing her claim for compensation for the housekeeping services she rendered him," her brief reads.

Appeal Lidston Case

Annapolis, Oct. 25 (AP)—Whether Frank F. Lidston broke his hip at home because he injured his ankle eight days before while working for Unger & McMahon o. Baltimore was the question posed before the Court of Appeals today.

The employers and the Maryland Casualty Company, issuer under the Workmen's Compensation laws, appealed the verdict of a Baltimore judy holding that Lidstron's second injury was caused by the first.

Lidston testified he hurt his ankle June 22, 1938, and that the injury causer him to fall at home on July 1 and to fracture his hip.

The Insurance Company argued the second injury was separate and not caused by the first, and that it was not compensable as it did not arise from his work.

Woman Mayor Makes Kids Cops for Hallowe'en

Washington, Oct. 25 (AP) — The mayor of Glen Echo, Md., Mrs. Beulah McCuen, has given the town's 200 children the job of preventing vandalism this Hallowe'en.

They elected their own marshals tonight—one for each block. These will be deputized and given badges, and each will appoint two or three deputies.

Their compensation will be a big party in the firehouse the night after hallowe'en.

Shadow Over Hill House

By ELLIOTT FILLION

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER THIRTY

AS I SWUNG open the door and bounced out into the hall, Coral sprang away from Mrs. Peake's door. If ever guilt was written on a woman's face, it was on hers!

Anger burned in my blood like a hot flame. I stalked down the hall and confronted her. Her lips curled sarcastically, and I was so furious I could have struck her in the face.

"What are you doing here?" I demanded.

"Just what business is that of yours?" she flung back at me. "You're getting altogether above yourself, Miss Gor—don, taking me to task for anything I do HERE. I am engaged to Dr. Peake, as you know, and this is HIS house. I have a right to—"

Her face changed. She shrank back for an instant, then boldly stepped forward. The rage faded from her face, a placating expression crept over it. The flame in her blazing eyes softened to a dewy light. That woman could turn on the tear tap at will.

I cast one swift glance backward over my shoulder. Neal was standing at the head of the stairs facing us. His expression was a peculiar one. It baffled diagnosis. His eyes watched us through narrowed lids.

"The fat's in the fire now for fair," I muttered to myself. "Here's where little Sally gets thrown out on her own."

"Oh, Neal," wailed Coral. "Miss Gordon's accusing me of—"

"I didn't accuse you of anything," I cut in furiously. "I merely want to know what you were doing sneaking down this hall. I found her in front of your mother's door," I said to Neal. If I were going out over this, I was going out with colors flying. I wasn't going to pull one single punch because he was fool enough to believe in her.

His brown eyes bored deeply into mine. What he saw there must have satisfied him that I was speaking the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, as they say in court. He turned to her. His face was grim and hard.

"What WERE you doing up here?" The words were curt and cold.

She slipped her arm under his and pressed her shining black head against his shoulder.

"Oh, Nealy," she sobbed. "What a way to talk to me. Are you going to take her word before mine?"

Neal stepped back and released his arm from her grasp. "I'm not taking anyone's word for anything," he said sternly. "I am asking you what you were doing up here?"

She cast swift glances from Neal to me. "I came up to—to—to wash my hands."

"A likely story," I flung at her. "There's a washroom off the lounge and a bathroom connected with your room. Why come up here?"

At my retort her injured appearance faded. Fury and hatred flamed in her eyes. Neal received the first shock of her wrath.

"You stand there like a fool," she stormed, "and allow her to speak to me like this. What right has she to question me? As far as that goes, what right have you to question me either? I'm your fiancee, why should anyone question me if I go from one room to another in your house?"

Poor Neal! He seemed momentarily stunned by the suddenness of her attack.

"Well," she snarled at him, "am I to be taken to task by HER every time I put my head out of my room?"

"Listen, Coral." Neal found his voice—a voice I would hate to have him use to me. "I have told you before that I do not know if this house is to be mine or not. I don't care if it is or isn't, although you seem to. Until we know, you have no more right here than any other of the guests."

"What about HER?" That HER relegated me to the dust under her feet.

"Josie has asked Miss Gordon to run the house for a time. That has nothing to do with you."

"Well, I like that," she ranted. "Nothing to do with me! Let me tell you, big boy, if you care anything about me, you'd better fix it so this house is yours. I'm not marrying a pauper."

"Just what business is that of yours?" Coral flung back at me.

He flushed, then paled. "You almost compel me to hope the house is not mine." He strode away, leaving her staring after him.

It was my turn, and I took full advantage of it. I grabbed her arm and yanked her around to face me.

"From now on I'm boss here, and don't you forget it," I hurled at her. "And the next time I find you any place where you have no right to be, I'll have Captain Lancy lock you in your room. He'll do it if I ask him to, so watch your step. Now get downstairs where you belong."

And believe it or not, she went without another word. That she did made me more suspicious of her than before. I opened the door into Mrs. Peake's room. As far as I could see, nothing had been disturbed.

I came out, closed the door and started down the hall. Then a thought came to me. I went back, locked the door and took the key. The door could probably be easily opened, it was just an ordinary lock, but at least an intruder would be more careful, for he could not know if the room were occupied or not.

I started down the stairs to the lounge and, hearing a step, turned to look back. Josie was at the head of the stairs.

"I thought you were in the village," I said surprisedly.

"Neal had to have the deed to the—lot. We came back for it. It was in the file in my study." Her voice was piteous.

I hated to tell her my news, but I must.

"Are you going out again?" I asked as we descended the stairs side by side.

"No. I'm too tired. Neal told me to stay and rest. He will attend to everything." Her breath caught on a sob.

"Then sit down here with me, Josie." I drew her to one of the davenports and held her cold hand in mine as I laid the key of her mother's door in her lap and told the story. To my utter amazement she began to cry; not loudly, but with a hopeless helplessness which cut me to the heart.

"Oh, Sally," she cried, "to think how I misjudged you."

"Misjudged me! What on earth do you mean?"

"I saw you lock mother's door and I thought—I can't tell you what I thought—but I was afraid—"

I knew what she had thought and what she could not now bear to say. She had thought it was I, not Coral, who was at the bottom of the Hill House mystery.

"Josie," I said gently, "I don't blame you for thinking anything at all if you saw me take that key. But Neal knows that what I have told you is the truth. He doesn't know about my locking the door. I thought of that after I was alone. Now forget everything you THOUGHT and remember that I am your friend and that anything I can do for you I will gladly do."

"And for Neal," she said softly.

Once more I stared at her. Her words seemed full of some meaning I could not catch. It was impossible for her to know—

"You love him, don't you, Sally? I wish you could be my sister, but Coral has him under her thumb."

"How did you know, Josie?" I asked. I felt dazed that she had penetrated the secret I had known only such a short time.

"I think I've known it as long as you have, Sally. Don't be sorry I know. It shall always be our secret."

I wasn't exactly sorry, but I was bewildered. I glanced at her. She looked so frail and ill, I rose to my feet.

"It's all right," I said, "but let's not talk about it. I'm going to tuck you into bed. You are completely worn out."

I assisted her up the stairs and into bed. Then I went for some hot milk and sat beside her until she went to sleep. I would not let her get up again that night, and in the morning she did seem stronger.

I dreaded the day, and it was fully as bad as I anticipated. When we returned from the cemetery, Mrs. Peake's lawyer, a Mr. Banbury, was waiting for us. He insisted on reading Mrs. Peake's will at once and, determidly, led the way to the office where Captain Lancy and Chief Forrest were waiting.

Neal led the way with Coral flaunting by his side as though she had every right in the world to be there. And as his fiancee I suppose she had, but nothing could make me believe that her interest was not for Hill House instead of for Neal.

I was turning to go up the stairs to our room when Josie called me.

"Sally, I want you with me." Her tone was imperious.

Coral sniffed disdainfully as I entered the room. She was all in white, but it gave the impression of festive array. Her black hair in startling contrast to her white hat and her vivid red lips, the only spot of color about her, in some inexplainable way made her entirely out of place in that mournful setting.

Mr. Banbury waited for us to be seated; then with a great rustling of papers and a dry rasp clearing of his throat, he began to read.

Lawson and Mooney Appeal Damage Suit

Annapolis, Oct. 25 (AP)—William P. Lawson, former Baltimore Police Commissioner later convicted of fraud, was listed as an appellant in a damage action argued before the Court of Appeals today.

Lawson, Inspector Thomas J. Mooney and the International Association of Police Chiefs Convention committee appealed the verdict returned for Isaiah D. Clawson, Baltimore lawyer, for injuries received when a bleacher seat collapsed at the 1937 Police Chiefs' convention frolic in Baltimore.

Lawson and Mooney were held negligent, along with Ed Contos, sports promoter, for the condition of the seats. Contos did not appeal the verdict.

Lawson and Mooney argued they never should have been held as defendants, and that Contos was solely responsible.

Notre Dame Aiming at Unbeaten Season

Irish Have Won Four Games from Strong Elevens

Must Beat Carnegie Tech, Army, Iowa, Northwestern and Southern Cal

By EARL HILLIGAN

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 25, (AP)—Notre Dame, a football team with plenty of class "in the clutch," apparently has its sights set on its first undefeated season since 1930.

A month ago the Irish were rated little chance of going through a nine game program as difficult as any encountered by a major school eleven. Coach Elmer Layden wasn't outwardly pessimistic, but as he looked ahead to games with Purdue, Georgia Tech and Southern Methodist he was worried about several things—particularly the lack of experienced reserves.

Today, Notre Dame has four straight victories to its credit—all at the expense of strong teams. And the manner in which the Irish have improved from week to week indicates Layden has the kind of a club he likes—one with ability to learn from experience and enough spirit to fight its way out of any kind of a hole.

"Our passing offense could stand much improvement," Layden said today. "Once we get our aerial attack to clicking we should be a much better all-round team. The reserves looked better against Navy than they did against Southern Methodist, but our downfield blocking was not particularly good. The team as a whole is getting better, however, and in a few weeks we may have a fair club."

Notre Dame now has a running attack good enough to trouble the best line in the nation. It gained 419 yards in 66 plays in the Irish victory over Navy. In addition, the Notre Dame "torpedo," Little Ben Sheridan, showed the form which made him a star last year, galloping 27 yards for a touchdown on the opening play of the second period to climax a 79-yard Irish march.

In four games the Irish, however, have completed only eight of 26 forward passes for an average of .308.

Notre Dame meets Carnegie Tech next Saturday and then has games with Army, Iowa, Northwestern and Southern California. That's a big assignment, but on past performance this 1939 Irish squad has a bright chance of taking its place alongside that great unbeaten 1930 team—the last one coached by the immortal Knute Rockne.

Allegany Rifle League Results

The second match of the Allegany Rifle League was held last Friday. The Cold Springs team again took first place as a result of the match with a score of 1349.

The high men on the teams are as follows: D. Barns, of Cold Spring, 275; Duke of Kelly, 272; Nycum, of Corriganville, 265; J. Golden, of Company G, 275; H. Morgan, of 4-H, 265; McCusker, of Celanese, 281; H. Yates, of Frostburg, 258; J. Armstrong, of Riverside, 172.

Six possible scores were made in the prone position, those who made them are as follows: Harry Morgan, J. Windle, J. Golden, Brant, Duke, Seie. One possible was made in the sitting position by Billings of the Kelly.

Michigan Pulled Punches In 85-0 Chicago Victory

By JOHN LARDNER
Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

New York, Oct. 25—As I under-it—Operative T-94 has just arrived from Ann Arbor, Mich, by gondola, with a full report—Michigan did not shut the gates of mercy on Chicago last Saturday when she nosed out the Maroons by 85 to 0.

In other words, the barbecue was not premeditated. Michigan pulled her punches all the way through, going so far at one point as to call for a field goal on second down, with Chicago's end zone (the busiest crossroads in America) just ahead. Mr. Tom Harmon, the famous Wolverine all-everything, was just planning to retrieve a gold inlay which he had dropped in the end zone the last time he was there when the signal-caller nudged him in the ribs.

"You will kick a field goal on this play," said the quarterback.

"I beg pardon?" said Mr. Harmon, startled.

"A field goal. With the foot. Good for three points is successful."

"I know all about field goals," said Mr. Harmon coldly, "but I was thinking of making another touchdown this time. I want to recover my gold inlay."

Scene Delayed Three Minutes

"Coach's orders,' 'said the signal-caller. "We will settle for 50 per cent."

Thus it was that Mr. Harmon, the all-everything, had to wait three minutes before he got into the end zone again. Meanwhile, he kicked the field goal so tactfully requested by Herbert Orin Crisler, through whose veins the milk of human kindness trickles, in lieu of the more conventional hemoglobin.

Even so, Michigan bettered par for the course. Par is 61, established a couple of weeks ago by Harvard. In scoring 85 points, Michigan also stepped up the beat of her famous old point-a-minute teams of the first ten years of the century. According to my figures, 85 points is nearly a point-and-a-half a minute. And the Wolverines were pulling their punches, at that.

It was not always thus with the mild men of the midway, the football players of the University of Chicago. The time was when these fellows were sometimes accused of shutting the gates of mercy themselves. Before the amateur disease bit them, and culture reared its ugly head on the loop, Chicago was a killer. The records show that she punished Monmouth college by a score of 108 to 0 in 1903. As recently as 1919, old man Stagg looked the other way while his murderers whaled Great Lakes by 123 to 0.

In combing my files for the worst beating a major team ever suffered, I pause before this item, as of 1884—Yale 113, Dartmouth 0. Of course, Dartmouth was none too major in those days. Even so, I expect Dartmouth spies will attempt to burn my papers and sabotage my safe-deposit box within a couple of days. That kind of stuff does no good if it gets around.

George Tech 22, Cumberland 0

There's one story of greed in the books that carries a moral—a sting in the tail. In 1916, Georgia Tech outnumbered Cumberland by 222 to 0, which is a score and not a typographical error. This rambazzle whetted the appetite of the engineers, who, up to that time, were a gentlemanly, accommodating gang, always willing to settle for a touchdown when they could get it.

Two years later, having tasted blood, we find them perpetrating the following barbecues on successive Saturdays:

George Tech 118, Furman 0.

Georgia Tech 119, Eleventh Calvary 0.

Georgia Tech 128, North Carolina State 0.

In the case of the Eleventh Cavalry, a subdivision of Bylaw XII in the rulebook compelled the victims to get down off their horses when the whistle blew and perform as infantry. They were still getting their land-legs while Tech was getting her thirteenth touchdown.

The following Saturday, Georgia Tech sailed cheerfully into a ball game with the University of Pittsburgh, only to find that the Pitt players never read the newspapers. The upshot of this anti-climax was:

Georgia Tech 0, Pittsburgh 32.

From that time forward, the Tech slogan has been "Live and let live."

Some of the greatest score-rolleruppers of past times have been Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Michigan, Minnesota, Washington, Nebraska, and Oklahoma. The last-named team used to beat Kingfisher regularly by 180 to 0 until Kingfisher detected signs of overmatching and haughtily severed football relations.

A score I like is Rice 146, Southern Methodist 3, in 1916. Rice always did have a rotten defense.

Navy Plebes Win

Annapolis, Oct. 25 (AP)—Navy Plebe soccer players opened their season today by pasting a 2-0 licking on the previously undefeated Mt. St. Joseph's high school team, from Baltimore.

The fast Navy yearlings scored once in each quarter of the first half and then kept outrushing the visitors to hang onto their lead.

Canzoneri Will Quit Ring If He Loses to Davis

Bout in Madison Square Garden Next Week To Decide His Future

By SID FEDER

Marlboro, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP)—Tony Canzoneri has about decided to stop kidding himself.

The grand little guy who has been fighting since the mid-'20's said today his bout in Madison Square Garden a week from tonight with Al Davis, a youngster from Brooklyn, will decide his ring future. If he wins, Tony will keep right on going; if Davis whips him—well, Tony has decided to hang 'em up for good.

"Tony doesn't need a horse to kick him in the face," was the way his manager, Sammy Goldman, explained it here at the Canzoneri farm and training quarters.

"He'll be ready for Davis, you can be sure of that. So everything hangs on that fight."

Of course, fighters, like women, always reserve the right to change their minds, so maybe Tony will feel differently the night after he takes tea with young Davis—win, lose or draw. But right now the little Louisiana larruper, who came out of the south to win the world featherweight, lightweight and junior welterweight championships, has his mind made up.

For a couple of years now, Tony's closest friends have been telling him it's time to call a halt. Since he lost the 135-pound crown in 1936 to his former sparring partner, Lou Ambers, and followed that up by receiving a sound whipping from Jimmy McLarnin, Tony's pals have been on him to get out before the "bells start to ring." Tony hasn't listened to them.

However, in the last year, two or three fighters whom he probably would have belted clear out of the park in his heyday have been tagging him. Two, Eddie Brink and Eddie Zivic, have beaten him. Maybe that had something to do with it.

The little guy, once ranked as the greatest fighter in the world for his weight and inches, has just about all of his old-time punching power left, but his speed is gone.

Terps Expect Aerial Battle with Florida

College Park, Md., Oct. 25 (AP)—The University of Maryland gridiron practice today presaged an aerial battle Saturday when the Terps meet Florida in Maryland's homecoming game.

Emphasis was all on the airways today, the Terps setting a hard drill both in their passing attack and aerial defense. The majority of points scored by both teams this year have been the direct or indirect result of aerials.

The Terps divided their time between offense and defense, and Coach Dobson said that would be the program the next two days. Florida will arrive Friday afternoon in time for a workout.

Maryland's unbeaten Cross Country team will race North Carolina Saturday morning in an added homecoming feature.

Clemson Does Not Have a First Team

Clemson, Oct. 25—You've heard of the Man Without a Country? Well consider the plight of a Football Squad Without a First Team. According to Head Coach Jess Neely, that is the status of the Clemson Tiger.

"We are playing two teams as units," Neely says, "but there has ceased to be a 'first' or 'second' team. Both outfits appear to be of about equal ability and we hope to be able to alternate them as much as possible."

Crane's Clothiers Will Meet Tonight

A meeting of the Crane's Clothiers basketball team will be held at the Y.M.C.A. tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

All former players as well as new ones wishing to try out for the team are invited to attend the meeting.

The team will be organized tonight and plans made to start practice at an early date.

Challedon at Baltimore for Pimlico Special

Maryland-Bred Colt To Make Bid for "Horse of Year Title"

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP)—Challedon, W. L. Brann's three-year-old champion, came over from Laurel today to begin tuning up for the Pimlico Special, the race in which the Maryland-bred colt will make his bid for the "horse of the year" title.

Trainer Lou Schaeffer said Challedon would be given a workout tomorrow morning. The big bay colt, leading money-winner of the year with earnings of $174,535, was stabled in the same barn with T. B. Martin's Cravat, also a candidate for the Special.

They will be joined tomorrow by C. S. Howard's Kayak 2nd, winner of the Continental Handicap at Jamaica last Saturday, the same day that Challedon won the Maryland Handicap at Laurel. Kayak is second to Challedon in 1939 earnings, with $161,025.

William Woodward's Isolater, the fourth horse to accept an invitation to the Special, worked impressively at Laurel today, covering a mile and an eighth in 1:52 2-5. Isolater may be a starter in the Washington Handicap at Laurel Saturday.

Cravat also may get in another race before the Special. Trainer Walter Burrows, who has been trying to develop Cravat's early speed, has entered him in the six-furlong Delmar Handicap at Laurel tomorrow.

The Pimlico Special will be run Nov. 1 over a mile and three-sixteenths, the distance for which Challedon holds the World's record of 1:54 3-5. It will be a weight-for-age, $10,000 winner-take-all event.

Big Crowd To See Duquesne And Texas Tech

Dukes Upset of Favored Pitt Makes Game Major Attraction

Pittsburgh, Oct. 25 (AP)—A Friday night game between Duquesne and Texas Tech—just another date on the schedule until last Saturday—is shaping up as a major attraction in the Smoky City since the Dukes toppled Pitt from the nation's football throne.

Unbeaten, untied and scored upon only twice in four games, the doughty Dukes are beginning to aim for big things this season and a bowl bid is already mentioned in hopeful tones on the Bluff.

Normally, Duquesne trails Carnegie Tech and Pitt in popularity with the ducat buyers. But the fans are beginning to realize that Coach Aldo "Buff" Donelli has dished up something extra.

The game—which wouldn't have attracted more than the Duquesne student body and a few Annie Oakleys if the Nightriders hadn't upset Pitt—is now expected to draw 15,000 to 20,000 to Forbes Field. Duquesne athletic officials gleefully reported "ticket sales are good."

Navy Squad Is Hard Hit with Regulars Hurt

Most of Injuries Are Not Serious but Players Miss Practice

Annapolis, Oct. 25 (AP) — Coach Swede Larson may recommend that Navy give up varsity football and go in for wheelchair polo if the epidemic of injuries doesn't end soon at the Naval Academy.

The casualty list is bigger than the varsity squad, and that game with the rough, tough Clemson boys is only three days away.

Only a few of the injuries are serious, and most of the regulars are expected to get in the game Saturday, but their minor hurts have kept them from practice.

Too, the replacements for the injured men are much smaller, and cut the squad's tonnage down from battleship to approximately destroyer size.

The line tonight had new faces at both guards and both tackles.

Dick Foster, 165, replaced Swede Hansen, 227, at end, for a net loss of 62 pounds. Line avoirdupois dropped another 55 pounds when Joe Sliwka, 170, went in for Tom McGrath, 225, at one guard.

Other line replacements were Al Feldmeier, 180, for Bex Trimble, 205, guard, and Johnny Schmitz, 170, for Lou Burke, 190, end.

Capt. Al Bergner and Dick Opp, tackles, and Hal Harwood, center, were the only regular starters running with first string tonight.

The injured linemen were expected to be ready for Clemson, but the Swede worried because they are missing so much vital practice.

The backfield problem is still tough, with Emmett Wood and Butch Werner definitely out, and the rest of the crew looking as if they'd traded punches with an air raid.

Only one of five right halfbacks was well enough for practice tonight. Cliff Lenz, Lou Mayo, Earl Rowse and Werner are all limping. Werner was not even in suit. Casey Beers, good offensively but weak on defense, was in first-class shape. How much service Lenz, Mayo and Rowse will see Saturday is problematical, Larson said.

Valley Loop Prizes To Be Given Friday

Prizes will be awarded to the champion Eckhart A.A. club, runnerup Mt. Savage combination and third-place Wellersburg outfit at a meeting of the Will's Creek Valley Baseball League Friday night at 7 o'clock at the Junior Order Hall in Mt. Savage.

All business pertaining to the 1939 campaign will be settled and plans for next season discussed. New clubs interested in taking out franchises should be represented at this session.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—The fact that the Reds fumbled the Yanks for the bigger world series check probably has much to do with it, but in any event the Cincinnati club probably will be one of the principal trading posts in what looms as one of the most eventful winters of hoss swapping in National League history.

Practically every club has players to trade, sell of give away, and the Reds have at least five who, close observers believe, may be auctioned off. The list includes Ernie Lombardi, the "where-is-it" catcher; Lonnie Frey, Bill Myers, Wally Berger and Harry Craft.

Frey and Myers former a fine second-base combination during most of the season, but there is a possibility the Red fans have soured on them since the world series. Craft, many believe, never will hit in fast company again, and Berger is approaching the dangerous age. Lombardi's negative speed is his big handicap.

However, other clubs, notably the Cubs, Pirates, Giants and Brooklyn, are seen as major operatives in the winter mart. The Cubs are sorely in need of outfield power. Until mid-season they didn't have a .300 hitter in the garden. Hank Leiber finally finished with .309, which, incidentally, was tops for the club.

Phil Wrigley has asked Gabby Hartnett to submit a 1940 program, putting Gabby in the role of a factory production manager, and Wrigley didn't mean the kind they sell in the grandstand. He wants results.

Frank Frisch as new Pirate boss has permission to take the broom and sweep out the corners. He undoubtedly will be in the market for pitchers, and possibly a catcher.

The Giants need everything from new pistons to air in their tires. They have money to spend, and possibly will spend it for Minor League stars as their trading material isn't the best. The same is true of Brooklyn, which seeks outfield power and pitching.

As for St. Louis, Boston and Philadelphia, their deals probably would involve surrendering an outstanding star, such as Ducky Medwick, for several players who might bolster the respective clubs all around.

Kern Has Jordano Throwing Passes

Pittsburgh, Oct. 25. (U.P.)—They're throwing footballs all over the Carnegie Tech practice field this week in preparation for the annual clash Saturday with Notre Dame.

Special emphasis is being placed on the aerial game by Coach Bill Kern, whose eastern champions took a nose dive last Saturday when New York U. surprised them, 6-0.

Frank Jordano, of Cumberland, Md., went into the first backfield lineup to sharpen the Tartans passing game. Jordano is an excellent passer and has replaced Merlyn Condit at left half.

This change does not necessarily mean that Condit will be relegated to the second team, but rather that Jordano will move into the spot if and when Tech ever should get behind Notre Dame in next Saturday's game.

Niland Arranges Amateur Boxing Show for Nov. 3

Card of Fine Bouts Is Scheduled for Queen City Hotel

Plans are well underway for the next amateur boxing show to be held here Monday, November 3, at 8:30 P. M., at the Queen City Hotel Ballroom. Bill Niland, matchmaker for the Shamrock A. C. announced today, that he has completed five bouts, and expects to complete the card of eight or more bouts by the end of this week.

Niland is trying to secure the services of the popular "Tony" Di Ubaldo, for the feature bout of the evening with Homer "Stoney" Jackson, and needed only the acceptance of DiUbaldo to clinch the match. Jackson was the South Atlantic A.A.U. Middleweight champion, in 1938, and is a logical choice to meet the vicious DiUbaldo, who has scorde two wins on recent Shamrock cards.

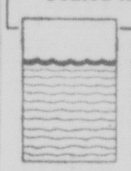

Delton Parker will meet an opponent to be named this week in the semi-final bout. Other boys who are listed to see action on this card are Armand Franchi, "Tony" Lisanti, "Chink" Davis, John Booth, "Smokey Joe" Niland, "Red" Riley, and "Bill" Corbin.

Bouts completed up to today are as follows:

Irish Have Won Four Games from Strong Elevens

By EARL HILLIGAN

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 25. (AP)—Notre Dame, a football team with plenty of class "in the clutch," apparently has its sights set on its first undefeated season since 1930.

A month ago the Irish were rated little chance of going through a nine game program as difficult as any encountered by a major school eleven. Coach Elmer Layden wasn't outwardly pessimistic, but as he looked ahead to games with Purdue, Georgia Tech and Southern Methodist he was worried about several things—particularly the lack of experienced reserves.

Today, Notre Dame has four straight victories to its credit—all at the expense of strong teams. And the manner in which the Irish have improved from week to week indicates Layden has the kind of a club he likes—one with ability to learn from experience and enough spirit to fight its way out of any kind of a hole.

"Our passing offense could stand much improvement," Layden said today. "Once we get our aerial attack to clicking we should be a much better all-round team. The reserves looked better against Navy than they did against Southern Methodist, but our downfield blocking was not particularly good. The team as a whole is getting better, however, and in a few weeks we may have a fair club."

Notre Dame now has a running attack good enough to trouble the best line in the nation. It gained 419 yards in 66 plays in the Irish victory over Navy. In addition, the Notre Dame "torpedo," Little Ben Sheridan, showed the form which made him a star last year, galloping 27 yards for a touchdown on the opening play of the second period to climax a 79-yard Irish march.

In four games the Irish, however, have completed only eight of 26 forward passes for an average of .308.

Notre Dame meets Carnegie Tech next Saturday and then has games with Army, Iowa, Northwestern and Southern California. That's a big assignment, but on past performance this 1939 Irish squad has a bright chance of taking its place alongside that great unbeaten 1930 team—the last one coached by the immortal Knute Rockne.

Allegany Rifle League Results

The second match of the Allegany Rifle League was held last Friday. The Cold Springs team again took first place as a result of the match with a score of 1349.

Michigan Pulled Punches In 85-0 Chicago Victory

Released by North American Newspaper Alliance

New York, Oct. 25—As I under-it—Operative T-94 has just arrived from Ann Arbor, Mich, by gondola, with a full report—Michigan did not shut the gates of mercy on Chicago last Saturday when she nosed out the Maroons by 85 to 0.

In other words, the barbecue was not premeditated. Michigan pulled her punches all the way through, going so far at one point as to call for a field goal on second down, with Chicago's end zone (the busiest crossroads in America) just ahead. Mr. Tom Harmon, the famous Wolverine all-everything, was just planning to retrieve a gold inlay which he had dropped in the end zone the last time he was there when the signal-caller nudged him in the ribs.

"You will kick a field goal on this play," said the quarterback.

"I beg pardon?" said Mr. Harmon, startled.

"A field goal. With the foot. Good for three points is successful."

"I know all about field goals," said Mr. Harmon coldly, "but I was thinking of making another touchdown this time. I want to recover my gold inlay."

Scene Delayed Three Minutes

"Coach's orders,' 'said the signal-caller. "We will settle for 50 per cent."

Thus it was that Mr. Harmon, the all-everything, had to wait three minutes before he got into the end zone again. Meanwhile, he kicked the field goal so tactfully requested by Herbert Orin Crisler, through whose veins the milk of human kindness trickles, in lieu of the more conventional hemoglobin.

Even so, Michigan bettered par for the course. Par is 61, established a couple of weeks ago by Harvard. In scoring 85 points, Michigan also stepped up the beat of her famous old point-a-minute teams of the first ten years of the century. According to my figures, 85 points is nearly a point-and-a-half a minute. And the Wolverines were pulling their punches, at that.

It was not always thus with the mild men of the midway, the football players of the University of Chicago. The time was when these fellows were sometimes accused of shutting the gates of mercy themselves. Before the amateur disease bit them, and culture reared its ugly head on the loop, Chicago was a killer. The records show that she punished Monmouth college by a score of 108 to 0 in 1903. As recently as 1919, old man Stagg looked the other way while his murderers whaled Great Lakes by 123 to 0.

In combing my files for the worst beating a major team ever suffered, I pause before this item, as of 1884—Yale 113, Dartmouth 0. Of course, Dartmouth was none too major in those days. Even so, I expect Dartmouth spies will attempt to burn my papers and sabotage my safe-deposit box within a couple of days. That kind of stuff does no good if it gets around.

George Tech 22, Cumberland 0

There's one story of greed in the books that carries a moral—a sting in the tail. In 1916, Georgia Tech outnumbered Cumberland by 222 to 0, which is a score and not a typographical error. This rambazzle whetted the appetite of the engineers, who, up to that time, were a gentlemanly, accommodating gang, always willing to settle for a touchdown when they could get it.

Two years later, having tasted blood, we find them perpetrating the following barbecues on successive Saturdays:

Georgia Tech 118, Furman 0.

Georgia Tech 119, Eleventh Calvary 0.

Georgia Tech 128, North Carolina State 0.

In the case of the Eleventh Cavalry, a subdivision of Bylaw XII in the rulebook compelled the victims to get down off their horses when the whistle blew and perform as infantry. They were still getting their land-legs while Tech was getting her thirteenth touchdown.

The following Saturday, Georgia Tech sailed cheerfully into a ball game with the University of Pittburgh, only to find that the Pitt players never read the newspapers. The upshot of this anti-climax was:

Georgia Tech 0, Pittsburgh 32.

From that time forward, the Tech slogan has been "Live and let live."

Some of the greatest score-rollers-uppers of past times have been Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Michigan, Minnesota, Washington, Nebraska, and Oklahoma. The last-named team used to beat Kingfisher regularly by 180 to 0 until Kingfisher detected signs of overmatching and haughtily severed football relations.

A score I like is Rice 146, Southern Methodist 3, in 1916. Rice always did have a rotten defense.

Navy Plebes Win

Annapolis, Oct. 25 (AP)—Navy Plebe soccer players opened their season today by pasting a 2-0 licking on the previously undefeated Mt. St. Joseph's high school team, from Baltimore.

The fast Navy yearlings scored once in each quarter of the first half and then kept outrushing the visitors to hang onto their lead.

Canzoneri Will Quit Ring If He Loses to Davis

Bout in Madison Square Garden Next Week To Decide His Future

By SID FEDER

Marlboro, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP)—Tony Canzoneri has about decided to stop kidding himself.

The grand little guy who has been fighting since the mid-'20's said today his bout in Madison Square Garden a week from tonight with Al Davis, a youngster from Brooklyn, will decide his ring future. If he wins, Tony will keep right on going; if Davis whips him—well, Tony has decided to hang 'em up for good.

"Tony doesn't need a horse to kick him in the face," was the way his manager, Sammy Goldman, explained it here at the Canzoneri farm and training quarters.

"He'll be ready for Davis, you can be sure of that. So everything hangs on that fight."

Of course, fighters, like women, always reserve the right to change their minds, so maybe Tony will feel differently the night after he takes tea with young Davis—win, lose or draw. But right now the little Louisiana larruper, who came out of the south to win the world featherweight, lightweight and junior welterweight championships, has his mind made up.

For a couple of years now, Tony's closest friends have been telling him it's time to call a halt. Since he lost the 135-pound crown in 1936 to his former sparring partner, Lou Ambers, and followed that up by receiving a sound whipping from Jimmy McLarnin, Tony's pals have been on him to get out before the "bells start to ring." Tony hasn't listened to them.

However, in the last year, two or three fighters whom he probably would have belted clear out of the park in his heyday have been tagging him. Two, Eddie Brink and Eddie Zivic, have beaten him. Maybe that had something to do with it.

The little guy, once ranked as the greatest fighter in the world for his weight and inches, has just about all of his old-time punching power left, but his speed is gone.

Anyway, the ring will lose one of its finer citizens when Tony goes.

Terps Expect Aerial Battle with Florida

College Park, Md., Oct. 25 (AP)—The University of Maryland gridiron practice today presaged an aerial battle Saturday when the Terps meet Florida in Maryland's homecoming game.

Emphasis was all on the airways today, the Terps setting a hard drill both in their passing attack and aerial defense. The majority of points scored by both teams this year have been the direct or indirect result of aerials.

The Terps divided their time between offense and defense, and Coach Dobson said that would be the program the next two days. Florida will arrive Friday afternoon in time for a workout.

Maryland's unbeaten Cross Country team will race North Carolina Saturday morning in an added homecoming feature.

Clemson Does Not Have a First Team

Clemson, Oct. 25—You've heard of the Man Without a Country? Well consider the plight of a Football Squad Without a First Team. According to Head Coach Jess Neely, that is the status of the Clemson Tiger.

"We are playing two teams as units," Neely says, "but there has ceased to be a 'first' or 'second' team. Both outfits appear to be of about equal ability and we hope to be able to alternate them as much as possible."

Crane's Clothiers Will Meet Tonight

A meeting of the Crane's Clothiers basketball team will be held at the Y.M.C.A. tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

All former players as well as new ones wishing to try out for the team are invited to attend the meeting.

The team will be organized tonight and plans made to start practice at an early date.

Challedon at Baltimore for Pimlico Special

Maryland-Bred Colt To Make Bid for "Horse of Year Title"

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP)—Challedon, W. L. Brann's three-year-old champion, came over from Laurel today to begin tuning up for the Pimlico Special, the race in which the Maryland-bred colt will make his bid for the "horse of the year" title.

Trainer Lou Schaeffer said Challedon would be given a workout tomorrow morning. The big bay colt, leading money-winner of the year with earnings of $174,535, was stabled in the same barn with T. B. Martin's Cravat, also a candidate for the Special.

They will be joined tomorrow by C. S. Howard's Kayak 2nd, winner of the Continental Handicap at Jamaica last Saturday, the same day that Challedon won the Maryland Handicap at Laurel. Kayak is second to Challedon in 1939 earnings, with $161,025.

William Woodward's Isolater, the fourth horse to accept an invitation to the Special, worked impressively at Laurel today, covering a mile and an eighth in 1:52 2-5. Isolater may be a starter in the Washington Handicap at Laurel Saturday.

Cravat also may get in another race before the Special. Trainer Walter Burrows, who has been trying to develop Cravat's early speed, has entered him in the six-furlong Delmar Handicap at Laurel tomorrow.

The Pimlico Special will be run Nov. 1 over a mile and three-sixteenths, the distance for which Challedon holds the World's record of 1:54 3-5. It will be a weight-for-age, $10,000 winner-take-all event.

Big Crowd To See Duquesne And Texas Tech

Dukes Upset of Favored Pitt Makes Game Major Attraction

Pittsburgh, Oct. 25 (AP)—A Friday night game between Duquesne and Texas Tech—just another date on the schedule until last Saturday—is shaping up as a major attraction in the Smoky City since the Dukes toppled Pitt from the nation's football throne.

Unbeaten, untied and scored upon only twice in four games, the doughty Dukes are beginning to aim for big things this season and a bowl bid is already mentioned in hopeful tones on the Bluff.

Normally, Duquesne trails Carnegie Tech and Pitt in popularity with the ducat buyers. But the fans are beginning to realize that Coach Aldo "Buff" Donelli has dished up something extra.

The game—which wouldn't have attracted more than the Duquesne student body and a few Annie Oakleys if the Nightriders hadn't upset Pitt—is now expected to draw 15,000 to 20,000 to Forbes Field. Duquesne athletic officials gleefully reported "ticket sales are good."

Even Notre Dame's invasion against Carnegie Tech—one of Saturday's outstanding games—hasn't taken the edge off the tussle because the Dukes, alone, are the only undefeated major team in this district.

Navy Squad Is Hard Hit with Regulars Hurt

Most of Injuries Are Not Serious but Players Miss Practice

Annapolis, Oct. 25 (AP) — Coach Swede Larson may recommend that Navy give up varsity football and go in for wheelchair polo if the epidemic of injuries doesn't end soon at the Naval Academy.

The casualty list is bigger than the varsity squad, and that game with the rough, tough Clemson boys is only three days away.

Only a few of the injuries are serious, and most of the regulars are expected to get in the game Saturday, but their minor hurts have kept them from practice.

Too, the replacements for the injured men are much smaller, and cut the squad's tonnage down from battleship to approximately destroyer size.

The line tonight had new faces at both guards and both tackles.

Dick Foster, 165, replaced Swede Hansen, 227, at end, for a net loss of 62 pounds. Line avoirdupois dropped another 55 pounds when Joe Sliwka, 170, went in for Tom McGrath, 225, at one guard.

Other line replacements were Al Feldmeier, 180, for Bex Trimble, 205, guard, and Johnny Schmitz, 170, for Lou Burke, 190, end.

Capt. Al Bergner and Dick Opp, tackles, and Hal Harwood, center, were the only regular starters running with first string tonight.

The injured linemen were expected to be ready for Clemson, but the Swede worried because they are missing so much vital practice.

The backfield problem is still tough, with Emmett Wood and Butch Werner definitely out, and the rest of the crew looking as if they'd traded punches with an air raid.

Only one of five right halfbacks was well enough for practice tonight. Cliff Lenz, Lou Mayo, Earl Rowse and Werner are all limping. Werner was not even in suit. Casey Beers, good offensively but weak on defense, was in first-class shape. How much service Lenz, Mayo and Rowse will see Saturday is problematical, Larson said.

Valley Loop Prizes To Be Given Friday

Prizes will be awarded to the champion Eckhart A.A. club, runnerup Mt. Savage combination and third-place Wellersburg outfit at a meeting of the Will's Creek Valley Baseball League Friday night at 7 o'clock at the Junior Order Hall in Mt. Savage.

All business pertaining to the 1939 campaign will be settled and plans for next season discussed. New clubs interested in taking out franchises should be represented at this session.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)—The fact that the Reds fumbled the Yanks for the bigger world series check probably has much to do with it, but in any event the Cincinnati club probably will be one of the principal trading posts in what looms as one of the most eventful winters of hoss swapping in National League history.

Practically every club has players to trade, sell of give away, and the Reds have at least five who, close observers believe, may be auctioned off. The list includes Ernie Lombardi, the "where-is-it" catcher; Lonnie Frey, Bill Myers, Wally Berger and Harry Craft.

Frey and Myers former a fine second-base combination during most of the season, but there is a possibility the Red fans have soured on them since the world series. Craft, many believe, never will hit in fast company again, and Berger is approaching the dangerous age. Lombardi's negative speed is his big handicap.

However, other clubs, notably the Cubs, Pirates, Giants and Brooklyn, are seen as major operatives in the winter mart. The Cubs are sorely in need of outfield power. Until mid-season they didn't have a .300 hitter in the garden. Hank Leiber finally finished with .309, which, incidentally, was tops for the club.

Phil Wrigley has asked Gabby Hartnett to submit a 1940 program, putting Gabby in the role of a factory production manager, and Wrigley didn't mean the kind they sell in the grandstand. He wants results.

Frank Frisch as new Pirate boss has permission to take the broom and sweep out the corners. He undoubtedly will be in the market for pitchers, and possibly a catcher.

The Giants need everything from new pistons to air in their tires. They have money to spend, and possibly will spend it for Minor League stars as their trading material isn't the best. The same is true of Brooklyn, which seeks outfield power and pitching.

As for St. Louis, Boston and Philadelphia, their deals probably would involve surrendering an outstanding star, such as Ducky Medwick, for several players who might bolster the respective clubs all around.

Kern Has Jordano Throwing Passes

Pittsburgh, Oct. 25. (U.P.)—They're throwing footballs all over the Carnegie Tech practice field this week in preparation for the annual clash Saturday with Notre Dame.

Special emphasis is being placed on the aerial game by Coach Bill Kern, whose eastern champions took a nose dive last Saturday when New York U. surprised them, 6-0.

Frank Jordano, of Cumberland, Md., went into the first backfield lineup to sharpen the Tartans passing game. Jordano is an excellent passer and has replaced Merlyn Condit at left half.

This change does not necessarily mean that Condit will be relegated to the second team, but rather that Jordano will move into the spot if and when Tech ever should get behind Notre Dame in next Saturday's game.

Niland Arranges Amateur Boxing Show for Nov. 3

Card of Fine Bouts Is Scheduled for Queen City Hotel

Plans are well underway for the next amateur boxing show to be held here Monday, November 3, at 8:30 P. M., at the Queen City Hotel Ballroom Bill Niland, matchmaker for the Shamrock A. C. announced today, that he has completed five bouts, and expects to complete the card of eight or more bouts by the end of this week.

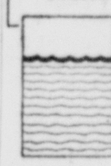

Niland is trying to secure the services of the popular "Tony" Di Ubaldo, for the feature bout of the evening with Homer "Stoney" Jackson, and needed only the acceptance of DiUbaldo to clinch the match. Jackson was the South Atlantic A.A.U. Middleweight champion, in 1938, and is a logical choice to meet the vicious DiUbaldo, who has scorde two wins on recent Shamrock cards.

Delton Parker will meet an opponent to be named this week in the semi-final bout. Other boys who are listed to see action on this card are Armand Franchi, "Tony" Lisanti, "Chink" Davis, John Booth, "Smokey Joe" Niland, "Red" Riley, and "Bill" Corbin.

Bouts completed up to today are as follows:

MacPhail Proposes Major League Play-offs

Will Suggest 8 Series Next Fall Instead of One

League Winning Most Games in Play-off To Hold Trophy One Year

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Oct. 25. (AP)—Never at a loss for an idea, General Manager Larry MacPhail of the Brooklyn Dodgers come out today in favor of turning the world series into a free-for all between the sixteen big league clubs.

Specifically, the red-haired genius of Flatbush said he would suggest at the mid-winter meeting in Cincinnati that there be eight play-offs next October instead of the customary one, thus settling the question of supremacy between the National and American leagues with a vengeance.

Under the MacPhail plan the world series between the flag winning clubs whould be played exactly as at present. Then there also would be a play-off between the second place teams, the third placers, and so on down to a fierce inter-league struggle between, say, the Phillies and the St. Louis Browns.

"Each game in the inter-league series would count equally," Larry proposes, "and the league winning the greater number of games would hold for one year a trophy emblematic of league supremacy.

"No fair-minded person questions the world series accomplishments of the Yankees," he added. "But the Yankees have also overwhelmed the American League. Their unbroken string of successes has created an impression in some quarters that the American is the stronger league. This does not necessarily follow. Many are convinced the National is the better-balanced league.

"I hope the National League will challenge the American League to such a series, the games to be played under the jurisdiction of the commissioner of baseball, with players participating in the net receipts."

The idea apparently was MacPhail's own brain child, for President Ford Frick of the National League said this was the first he had heard of it. "In other words, it must not be assumed that this is a National League plot designed to take some of the curse off its pitiful showing in recent world series.

"I don't think I should comment before Larry proposes it at the meeting," said Frick. "But I don't think it sounds so silly. Theoretically, I should say it's a good idea."

Sun Says Navy and Irish Will Play in Baltimore in 1940

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP)—The Sun says in a story written for tomorrow's edition that Navy and Notre Dame will meet at the Baltimore Stadium Nov. 9, 1940, although there has been no official announcement from the Naval Academy.

The Sun added that "it has been said off the record that Navy and Notre Dame will meet in this city in 1941."

Phils To Train at Miami Beach Next Spring

Philadelphia, Oct. 25 (AP)—Returning from a ten-day tour of inspection of southeast Florida points, Gerry Nugent, president of the Philadelphia National League baseball club, announced today the Phillies would train at Miami Beach, Fla., next spring. They trained last year at New Braunfels, Tex., but were handicapped by unfavorable weather conditions.

Raiders To Practice Today and Friday

The North End Raiders, independent football team, will hold practice sessions today and tomorrow at North End playground at 4 p. m. All members are urged to attend.

The Raiders would like to book a game for Sunday, Oct. 29, on a home and home basis. Teams interested should write to Spike Herboldsheimer, Fairview avenue, Cumberland.

Kicking Duel Seen

Clemson, Oct. 25—There is going to be some high, wide and handsome football kicking in the stadium at Annapolis next Saturday when Ulmont Whitehead of the Navy Midshipmen and Banks McFadden of Clemson's Tigers start kicking that ball around. And the runbacks are liable to become scoring weapons at any moment with Shad Bryant receiving Whitehead's punts and Whitehead himself handling McFadden's boots.

Home Stealer

BIG TEN AND IVY

New York, Oct. 25—This is the season's feature week in the classic circles of the Big Ten and the Ivy League. It is the week when unbeaten Cornell moves against unbeaten Ohio State at Columbus—where a game Yale team strikes at Michigan's stout fortress in Ann Arbor.

It will be the Ivy against the maize of Michigan and the bloom of the Buckeye.

The Big Red from Cayuga's famous waters has been rolling smoothly so far. But the Scarlet and Gray of Ohio State is a taller hurdle than Cornell has faced to date.

Ohio State has taken a good Missouri team, Northwestern and Minnesota in a triple thrust. Cornell has dominated Syracuse, Princeton and Penn State by wider margins—but the competition was somewhat lighter.

Cornell and Ohio State are two of the country's stronger teams and two of the few that remain unbeaten and untied. They belong where class belongs. Others in the upper berths wearing spotless gowns include Tennessee, Texas A. and M., Notre Dame, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Mississippi, Kentucky, Duquesne and Oregon State.

This doesn't mean that a number of these spotless town entries could handle Duke, Southern California, Oklahoma, S.M.U., Nebraska, North Carolina and Tulane. I don't think too many of them could.

Real Battle

The Buckeye and the Big Red will make a real battle.

Schmidt and Snavely are two of our best offensive coaches and both have the material needed for a contest worth inspecting. This means good lines and good backs—big enough fellows who can move around in a hurry.

This time an Ivy League outfit has the man power to stand up against the big men of the West. That goes for line and backs. Those who seem to think Ohio State is in for a romp may step into something resembling a shock. Whatever the score, it will be no romp either way.

Yale and Michigan

Michigan was supposed to outclass Yale at New Haven last fall, but while Yale lost it was a game Yale might easily have won on the afternoon's play. Two bad decisions wrecked the Blue.

This time it will be tougher for the Eli cause. A strong Bulldog line will match the Wolverine forwards, but Michigan has too many big, fast backs for Yale's defense to throttle unless Eli can turn on a miracle job.

Michigan's starting backfield of Harmon, Kromer, Evashevski and Westfall is one of the best that any field can show. It has power, speed, weight and experience. Harmon and Kromer make one of the strongest combinations of the year, and the others are not far behind.

Michigan's backfield is well beyond Yale's physical makeup. Yale's undermanned defense will take a heavy hammering before the day is over, but the Blue will be out there hustling and scrapping it out to the final play—against heavy odds but still on the job.

Breakers Ahead!

There are still heavy breakers ahead for more than a few of the untied and unwhipped.

For example, Pennsylvania has a stormy afternoon ahead with North Carolina—the team that beat a high-class N.Y.U. outfit and tied Tulane. Old Penn might just as well look out for Stirnweiss and Lelanne.

If the Red and Blue can duck by the Tarheels, its meeting with Michigan will be something to see. For Penn is coming along.

Notre Dame must move in against a revengeful Carnegie Tech team that still remembers the break from last fall, and is out to win with all it has. Every barrel is loaded. Don't enter this contest as any Notre Dame mop-up. It will be one of the hrdest games of a hard day.

Unbeaten and untied Mississippi has Tulane in the road, a trifle outraged by that final North Carolina rally. If Ole Miss can bag this one, Harry Mehre's young men take a long jump forward. It will be their hardest game.

Kentucky and Oregon State, in the unblemished class, have rougher traveling through November—a trifle more than they can handle, so far as any unbeaten record is concerned. Kentucky only has Alabama, Georgia Tech and Tennessee—Oregon State has Southern Cal., Oregon, California and U.C.L.A.

Leading Backs

Naming the better backs of the year will be the same involved matter as it always has been before.

The earlier nominations for Cafego of Tennessee, Harmon and Kromer of Michigan, McFadden of Clemson, Nelson of Alabama, McAfee of Duke, Stirnweiss of North Carolina, Cassiano of Pittsburgh and a few others still stand. But don't overlook a young fellow by the name of Boell of N.Y.U. who has more than done his share. And don't overlook two sophomere stars—Jack Crain of Texas and Johnny Butler of Tennessee. Both are October sensations, who are quite likely to last. Jacobs of Oklahoma is another sophomore challenger.

It might also be suggested that young Bill De Correvont is coming along well enough. He has done his part so far and will be heard from in louder tones later on. There is also a good chance that Pittsburgh will see more than a mere trifle from Blumenstock of Fordham in Saturday's game. All in all this has been an outstanding year for sophomore backs.

Thrill From Losing

Busy Shaking Hands

Berkeley, Cal.—When Lee Grissom, the Cincinnati Reds' southpaw, pitched a 2 to 1 victory here in 1934, striking out twelve batters, his reward was a mile and a half walk back to the University of California campus. While fans were congratulating him his teammates drove away with the bus.

Long Distance Bowlers

Detroit—When the annual American Bowling Congress meets here in March for its long tournament, the contestants coming the greatest distance will be a five-man team from Honolulu.

Francis with 4 Teams

Pittsburgh — Harrison (Sam) Francis, Brooklyn Dodger fullback, now in the midst of his third season in the National Football League, has been the property of four teams since leaving the University of Nebraskka in 1936. He was drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles and traded to the Chicago Bears, with whom he played for two years. The Bears traded him to the Pittsburgh Pirates last Spring for Billy Patterson of Baylor and the Pirates sold him to Brooklyn.

Potomac To Play Blue Ridgers

Six Catamount Players Are Suffering Injuries and May Miss Game

Keyser, W. Va., Oct. 25.—Today the outlook for victory Saturday for Potomac State Catamounts is dark indeed. Six men, are now apparently out of the game with Blue Ridge College, at New Windsor, because of injuries and illness. Ends Hawkins, and Starford, backs, Kight, a local boy, Harmon, who scored from the 25 yard line against Shepherd, and Straub, as well as Garlathy, a lineman, will probably see the game from the bench.

Coach Dana Lough stated today that his starting line-up was, "far from certain." However, several boys have been doing rather well namely, Tuttle, Garlathy, and O'Neil, on the line, while Hughes, and Young are impressive in the backfield. Capt. Toothman is also doing well at center.

The Catamounts practiced on pass defense today. They also went through a stiff scrimmage, which was none too encouraging to Coach Lough and the Potomac State fans. Young, who has been playing in the blocking position, was tried in the tail-back spot. He did rather well, but is not expected to start the game in that berth.

Following the Blue Ridge game the Potomac eleven will play the W. V. U. 'BB' team in Morgantown, Nov. 4, and will play West Liberty here Nov. 11.

Oklahoma Uses Its Balance To Win Grid Games

Sooner Eleven Better Balanced Than Crack 1938 Team

(By AUSTIN BEALMEAR)

Norman, Okla., Oct. 25 (AP)—Like bicycles, tight-rope walkers and teeter-totters, the University of Oklahoma's unbeaten football team depends on balance to go places.

Not even the crack Sooner team of 1938—class of the Big Six and ranked fourth nationally at the end of the season—could match Coach Tom Stidham's 1939 outfit in magnificently balanced power.

A different backfield man is the pace-setter in every department of offensive play.

Beryl Clark, who rode the bench for two seasons is the most consistent ground gainer, although Byron Potter, a sophomore, has the highest ball-carrying figures for a single game.

Bill Jennings, junior back, has caught more passes than any of the endes. Dick Favor, blocking back, kicks the points after touchdown. Bob Selmour, senior fullback, shares

MacPhail Proposes Major League Play-offs

Will Suggest 8 Series Next Fall Instead of One

League Winning Most Games in Play-off To Hold Trophy One Year

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Oct. 25. (AP)—Never at a loss for an idea, General Manager Larry MacPhail of the Brooklyn Dodgers come out today in favor of turning the world series into a free-for all between the sixteen big league clubs.

Specifically, the hed-haired genius of Flatbush said he would suggest at the mid-winter meeting in Cincinnati that there be eight play-offs next October instead of the customary one, thus settling the question of supremacy between the National and American leagues with a vengeance.

Under the MacPhail plan the world series between the flag winning clubs whould be played exactly as at present. Then there also would be a play-off between the second place teams, the third placers, and so on down to a fierce inter-league struggle between, say, the Phillies and the St. Louis Browns.

"Each game in the inter-league series would count equally," Larry proposes, "and the league winning the greater number of games would hold for one year a trophy emblematic of league supremacy.

"No fair-minded person questions the world series accomplishments of the Yankees," he added. "But the Yankees have also overwhelmed the American League. Their unbroken string of successes has created an impression in some quarters that the American is the stronger league. This does not necessarily follow. Many are convinced the National is the better-balanced league.

"I hope the National League will challenge the American League to such a series, the games to be played under the jurisdiction of the commissioner of baseball, with players participating in the net receipts."

The idea apparently was MacPhail's own brain child, for President Ford Frick of the National League said this was the first he had heard of it. In other words, it must not be assumed that this is a National League plot designed to fake some of the curse off its pitiful showing in recent world series.

"I don't think I should comment before Larry proposes it at the meeting," said Frick. "But I don't think it sounds so silly. Theoretically, I should say it's a good idea."

Sun Says Navy and Irish Will Play in Baltimore in 1940

Baltimore, Oct. 25 (AP)—The Sun says in a story written for tomorrow's edition that Navy and Notre Dame will meet at the Baltimore Stadium Nov. 9, 1940, although there has been no official announcement from the Naval Academy.

The Sun added that "it has been said off the record that Navy and Notre Dame will meet in this city in 1941."

Phils To Train at Miami Beach Next Spring

Philadelphia, Oct. 25 (AP)—Returning from a ten-day tour of inspection of southeast Florida points, Gerry Nugent, president of the Philadelphia National League baseball club, announced today the Phillies would train at Miami Beach, Fla., next spring. They trained last year at New Braunfels, Tex., but were handicapped by unfavorable weather conditions.

Raiders To Practice Today and Friday

The North End Raiders, independent football team, will hold practice sessions today and tomorrow at North End playground at 4 p. m. All members are urged to attend.

The Raiders would like to book a game for Sunday, Oct. 29, on a home and home basis. Teams interested should write to Spike Herboldsheimer, Fairview avenue, Cumberland.

Kicking Duel Seen

Clemson, Oct. 25—There is going to be some high, wide and handsome football kicking in the stadium at Annapolis next Saturday when Ulmont Whitehead of the Navy Midshipmen and Banks McFadden of Clemson's Tigers start kicking that ball around. And the runbacks are liable to become scoring weapons at any moment with Shad Bryant receiving Whitehead's punts and Whitehead himself handling McFadden's boots.

Home Stealer

Minneapolis—Buck Fawcett, third-baseman on the Minneapolis Millers, stole home on three consecutive games last summer. Two of his thefts scored the winning run and the other tied the score.

BIG TEN AND IVY

New York, Oct. 25—This is the season's feature week in the classic circles of the Big Ten and the Ivy League. It is the week when unbeaten Cornell moves against unbeaten Ohio State at Columbus—where a game Yale team strikes at Michigan's stout fortress in Ann Arbor.

It will be the Ivy against the maize of Michigan and the bloom of the Buckeye.

The Big Red from Cayuga's famous waters has been rolling smoothly so far. But the Scarlet and Gray of Ohio State is a taller hurdle than Cornell has faced to date.

Ohio State has taken a good Missouri team, Northwestern and Minnesota in a triple thrust. Cornell has dominated Syracuse, Princeton and Penn State by wider margins—but the competition was somewhat lighter.

Cornell and Ohio State are two of the country's stronger teams and two of the few that remain unbeaten and untied. They belong where class belongs. Others in the upper berths wearing spotless gowns include Tennessee, Texas A. and M., Notre Dame, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Mississippi, Kentucky, Duquesne and Oregon State.

This doesn't mean that a number of these spotless town entries could handle Duke, Southern California, Oklahoma, S.M.U., Nebraska, North Carolina and Tulane. I don't think too many of them could.

Real Battle

The Buckeye and the Big Red will make a real battle.

Schmidt and Snavely are two of our best offensive coaches and both have the material needed for a contest worth inspecting. This means good lines and good backs—big enough fellows who can move around in a hurry.

This time an Ivy League outfit has the man power to stand up against the big men of the West. That goes for line and backs. Those who seem to think Ohio State is in for a romp may step into something resembling a shock. Whatever the score, it will be no romp either way.

Yale and Michigan

Michigan was supposed to outclass Yale at New Haven last fall, but while Yale lost it was a game Yale might easily have won on the afternoon's play. Two bad decisions wrecked the Blue.

This time it will be tougher for the Eli cause. A strong Bulldog line will match the Wolverine forwards, but Michigan has too many big, fast backs for Yale's defense to throttle unless Eli can turn on a miracle job.

Michigan's starting backfield of Harmon, Kromer, Evashevski and Westfall is one of the best that any field can show. It has power, speed, weight and experience. Harmon and Kromer make one of the strongest combinations of the year, and the others are not far behind.

Michigan's backfield is well beyond Yale's physical makeup. Yale's undermanned defense will take a heavy hammering before the day is over, but the Blue will be out there hustling and scrapping it out to the final play—against heavy odds but still on the job.

Breakers Ahead!

There are still heavy breakers ahead for more than a few of the untied and unwhipped.

For example, Pennsylvania has a stormy afternoon ahead with North Carolina—the team that beat a high-class N.Y.U. outfit and tied Tulane. Old Penn might just as well look out for Stirnweiss and Lelanne.

If the Red and Blue can duck by the Tarheels, its meeting with Michigan will be something to see. For Penn is coming along.

Notre Dame must move in against a revengeful Carnegie Tech team that still remembers the break from last fall, and is out to win with all it has. Every barrel is loaded. Don't enter this contest as any Notre Dame mop-up. It will be one of the hrdest games of a hard day.

Unbeaten and untied Mississippi has Tulane in the road, a trifle outraged by that final North Carolina rally. If Ole Miss can bag this one, Harry Mehre's young men take a long jump forward. It will be their hardest game.

Kentucky and Oregon State, in the unblemished class, have rougher traveling through November—a trifle more than they can handle, so far as any unbeaten record is concerned. Kentucky only has Alabama, Georgia Tech and Tennessee—Oregon State has Southern Cal., Oregon, California and U.C.L.A.

Leading Backs

Naming the better backs of the year will be the same involved matter as it always has been before.

The earlier nominations for Cafego of Tennessee, Harmon and Kromer of Michigan, McFadden of Clemson, Nelson of Alabama, McAfee of Duke, Stirnweiss of North Carolina, Cassiano of Pittsburgh and a few others still stand. But don't overlook a young fellow by the name of Boell of N.Y.U. who has more than done his share. And don't overlook two sophomere stars—Jack Crain of Texas and Johnny Butler of Tennessee. Both are October sensations, who are quite likely to last. Jacobs of Oklahoma is another sophomore challenger.

It might also be suggested that young Bill De Correvont is coming along well enough. He has done his part so far and will be heard from in louder tones later on. There is also a good chance that Pittsburgh will see more than a mere trifle from Blumenstock of Fordham in Saturday's game. All in all this has been an outstanding year for sophomore backs.

Thrill From Losing

Busy Shaking Hands

Berkeley, Cal.—When Lee Grissom, the Cincinnati Reds' southpaw, pitched a 2 to 1 victory here in 1934, striking out twelve batters, his reward was a mile and a half walk back to the University of California campus. While fans were congratulating him his teammates drove away with the bus.

Long Distance Bowlers

Detroit—When the annual American Bowling Congress meets here in March for its long tournament, the contestants coming the greatest distance will be a five-man team from Honolulu.

Francis with 4 Teams

Pittsburgh — Harrison (Sam) Francis, Brooklyn Dodger fullback, now in the midst of his third season in the National Football League, has been the property of four teams since leaving the University of Nebraskka in 1936. He was drafted by the Philadelphia Eagles and traded to the Chicago Bears, with whom he played for two years. The Bears traded him to the Pittsburgh Pirates last Spring for Billy Patterson of Baylor and the Pirates sold him to Brooklyn.

Potomac To Play Blue Ridgers

Six Catamount Players Are Suffering Injuries and May Miss Game

Keyser, W. Va., Oct. 25.—Today the outlook for victory Saturday for Potomac State Catamounts is dark indeed. Six men, are now apparently out of the game with Blue Ridge College, at New Windsor, because of injuries and illness. Ends Hawkins, and Starford, backs, Kight, a local boy, Harmon, who scored from the 25 yard line against Shepherd, and Straub, as well as Garlathy, a lineman, will probably see the game from the bench.

Coach Dana Lough stated today that his starting line-up was, "far from certain." However, several boys have been doing rather well namely, Tuttle, Garlathy, and O'Neil, on the line, while Hughes, and Young are impressive in the backfield. Capt. Toothman is also doing well at center.

The Catamounts practiced on pass defense today. They also went through a stiff scrimmage, which was none too encouraging to Coach Lough and the Potomac State fans. Young, who has been playing in the blocking position, was tried in the tail-back spot. He did rather well, but is not expected to start the game in that berth.

Following the Blue Ridge game the Potomac eleven will play the W. V. U. 'BB' team in Morgantown, Nov. 4, and will play West Liberty here Nov. 11.

Oklahoma Uses Its Balance To Win Grid Games

Sooner Eleven Better Balanced Than Crack 1938 Team

(By AUSTIN BEALMEAR)

Norman, Okla., Oct. 25 (AP)—Like bicycles, tight-rope walkers and teeter-totters, the University of Oklahoma's unbeaten football team depends on balance to go places.

Not even the crack Sooner team of 1938—class of the Big Six and ranked fourth nationally at the end of the season—could match Coach Tom Stidham's 1939 outfit in magnificently balanced power.

A different backfield man is the pace-setter in every department of offensive play.

Beryl Clark, who rode the bench for two seasons is the most consistent ground gainer, although Byron Potier, a sophomore, has the highest ball-carrying figures for a single game.

Johnny Martin's passing average is tops. Orv Matthews, a sophomore whose chief weapon is speed, has devedloped into the best punter. L. G. Rriedrichs, sophomore safety, leads in runback on punts.

Bill Jennings, junior back, has caught more passes than any of the ends. Dick Favor, blocking back, kicks the points after touchdown. Bob Selmour, senior fullback, shares

Captain Johnny Long's crew failed to match the set count registered by Captain George Brodbeck's outfit in Division "A" of the Elks' Bowling League last night, but the pinmen headed by the Fort Hill High football coach bunched their sticks effectively to win 2-1 and maintain their .667 pace at the top of the standing.

Gene Gunning's team, knotted with the Brodbeck's in second place last night, took sole possession of the runnerup spot as a result of a 2-1 victory over Captain Clarence Fletcher's club Monday. It was a close affair with the winners upsetting only two more pins than the losers.

STARS OF THRILLING UNDERSEA DRAMA

GIRL MENACE SNARES YOUNG DOCTOR

Theaters Today

MacMurray, Carroll Star in Gay Picture

Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll, teamed for the second time, prove that they are among the screen's peers when it comes to romantic teams, in Paramount's "Honeymoon In Bali," a gay, romantic comedy, which opened yesterday at the Strand and continues through Sunday.

Using a smart New York department store, Nassau and Bali for background, the picture casts the ethereally lovely Miss Carroll as a department store executive who is so wrapped up in being competent and independent that she has no time for romance. Fred is cast as the young man who is the disturbing factor in her little scheme of things —a reckless, carefree adventurer who has just returned from Bali, and is more or less convinced that woman's place is in the home and in a man's arms. Allan Jones, co-starred with Fred and Miss Carroll, is cast as an opera singer who is also ardently interested in Miss Carroll.

Getting under way in the purlieus of Manhattan, the story finds Miss Carroll meeting MacMurray just after his return from Bali. Aware that she has fallen in love with him, she refuses to express her love, and remains within her shell even when another girl—one of Fred's old friends and still in love with him—appears on the scene.

Fred's next move is to attempt to get her to take care of a cute little four-year-old girl, left on his hands by a friend. At first she refuses, but the woman in her asserts itself, and she decides to take the child for a while.

"Thunder Afloat" Film Mighty Action Hit

Surpassing in sea thrills even the magnificent schooner sequences of "Captains Courageous," hitherto considered "tops" of their kind, "Thunder Afloat" opened yesterday at the Maryland Theatre as an epic story of naval courage, starring Wallace Beery in one of the most thoroughly satisfying characterizations he has ever enjoyed.

As the tugboat captain who joins the navy and wants to fight the war single-handed after an enemy submarine has sunk his craft, Beery is at his blustering best. The role is not all bravado however. It permits him to prove himself the versatile veteran that he is, schooled in every art of the screen. Chester Morris, as Beery's bitter tugboat rival, is effectively convincing, while Virginia Grey, winning her most important opportunity to date as Beery's daughter, asks odds of no one in ability.

A most effective menace, because in the restraint in characterization of a part which might easily have been a typical melodramatic heavy, is Carl Esmond as the U-boat commander.

German Refugee Actor In "Saint In London"

Forced to leave Germany in 1936, Carl Jaffe, young player now appearing in RKO Radio's "The Saint in London," is rapidly winning his spurs in this country.

Following a succession of minor roles, Jaffe scored a great success as the French radical in the successful London stage version of "Idiot's Delight."

In this new film, which is now at the Garden, he plays in support of George Sanders and Sally Gray, as a crooked foreigfin embassy official involved with a gang seeking to perpetrate a vast currency fraud on a foreign government.

Marking her first American-made picture in eighteen months, Lupe Velez returns to the screen in "The Girl From Mexico," an uproarious comedy filled with gay romantic action and song and dance, and now showing at the Garden.

Miss Velez recently appeared on Broadway in "You'll Never Know." She also made and appeared in a play in Mexico, and traveled through South America presenting a vaudeville act. Her last American screen appearance was in "High Flyers."

Realism, Sincerity Seen In "Of Human Bondage"

If RKO Radio Pictures had scoured the stage and screens of the world, it could not have better cast Leslie Howard and Bette Davis than in W. Somerset Maughan's "Of Human Bondage," which enjoyed high favor with the audiences at the Liberty Theatre yesterday.

Howard, as the sensitive young idtalist of Maugham's classic imbues his characterization with a wistfulness and tenderness seldom seen on the screen.

We dream, long, pity, suffer, love and hate with him in the role of Philip Carey, the medical student victimized by an unrequited love for heartless Mildred, triumphantly played by Miss Davis. Helplessly infatuated with the girl, he suffers utter torture. His friend, Nora, understands his unnatural romance, but cannot save him from his devotion to Mildred. Baffled, she marries another man. Another friend, Sally, tries to give him happiness, but his tie to Mildred retards the development of their romance.

Only after Mildred's death does Philip find it possible to taste life's pleasures, and his ordeal is revealed in a tale of pathos and drama and love—as only Leslie Howard can portray it.

Miss Davis is a remarkable Mildred, imparting to the role sincerity and realism. It is this picture that revealed her as one of the most brilliant and enthralling actresses of this decade. Frances Dee as Sally and Kay Johnson as Nora use their fine talents with splendid success. Other roles are enacted admirably by such seasoned players as Reginald Denny, Reginald Owen, Reginald Sheffield, Allan Hale and Desmond Roberts.

BALI-ESQUE

What with the flowers atop her hair, and that mischievous look in her eyes, "Bali-esque" is just the word to describe Madeleine Carroll as she appears in a starring role in "Honeymoon in Bali," Paramount's new comedy romance, at the Strand Theatre. Miss Carroll, cast as a career girl, purports to have little time for love, but Fred MacMurray and Allan Jones, her co-stars do their best to convince her otherwise. One of them succeeds.

"King of the Turf" and "Hidden Valley"

"King of the Newsboys" And Western Picture

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy Theater will be Roy Rogers and Mary Hart in the singin' western hit, "Frontier Pony Express," with Raymond Hatton. The second hit is Lew Ayres, Helen Mack and Alison Skipworth in "King Of The Newsboys." On the same program there will be another chapter of the new serial, "Mandrake, The Magician."

Captain Johnny Long's crew failed to match the set count registered by Captain George Brodbeck's outfit in Division "A" of the Elks' Bowling League last night, but the pinmen headed by the Fort Hill High football coach bunched their sticks effectively to win 2-1 and maintain their .667 pace at the top of the standing.

Gene Gunning's team, knotted with the Brodbeck's in second place last night, took sole possession of the runnerup spot as a result of a 2-1 victory over Captain Clarence Fletcher's club Monday. It was a close affair with the winners upsetting only two more pins than the losers.

STARS OF THRILLING UNDERSEA DRAMA

GIRL MENACE SNARES YOUNG DOCTOR

Theaters Today

MacMurray, Carroll Star in Gay Picture

Fred MacMurray and Madeleine Carroll, teamed for the second time, prove that they are among the screen's peers when it comes to romantic teams, in Paramount's "Honeymoon In Bali," a gay, romantic comedy, which opened yesterday at the Strand and continues through Sunday.

Using a smart New York department store, Nassau and Bali for background, the picture casts the ethereally lovely Miss Carroll as a department store executive who is so wrapped up in being competent and independent that she has no time for romance. Fred is cast as the young man who is the disturbing factor in her little scheme of things —a reckless, carefree adventurer who has just returned from Bali, and is more or less convinced that woman's place is in the home and in a man's arms. Allan Jones, co-starred with Fred and Miss Carroll, is cast as an opera singer who is also ardently interested in Miss Carroll.

Getting under way in the purlieus of Manhattan, the story finds Miss Carroll meeting MacMurray just after his return from Bali. Aware that she has fallen in love with him, she refuses to express her love, and remains within her shell even when another girl—one of Fred's old friends and still in love with him—appears on the scene.

Fred's next move is to attempt to get her to take care of a cute little four-year-old girl, left on his hands by a friend. At first she refuses, but the woman in her asserts itself, and she decides to take the child for a while.

"Thunder Afloat" Film Mighty Action Hit

Surpassing in sea thrills even the magnificent schooner sequences of "Captains Courageous," hitherto considered "tops" of their kind, "Thunder Afloat" opened yesterday at the Maryland Theatre as an epic story of naval courage, starring Wallace Beery in one of the most thoroughly satisfying characterizations he has ever enjoyed.

As the tugboat captain who joins the navy and wants to fight the war single-handed after an enemy submarine has sunk his craft, Beery is at his blustering best. The role is not all bravado however. It permits him to prove himself the versatile veteran that he is, schooled in every art of the screen. Chester Morris, as Beery's bitter tugboat rival, is effectively convincing, while Virginia Grey, winning her most important opportunity to date as Beery's daughter, asks odds of no one in ability.

A most effective menace, because in the restraint in characterization of a part which might easily have been a typical melodramatic heavy, is Carl Esmond as the U-boat commander.

German Refugee Actor In "Saint In London"

Forced to leave Germany in 1936, Carl Jaffe, young player now appearing in RKO Radio's "The Saint in London," is rapidly winning his spurs in this country.

Following a succession of minor roles, Jaffe scored a great success as the French radical in the successful London stage version of "Idiot's Delight."

In this new film, which is now at the Garden, he plays in support of George Sanders and Sally Gray as a crooked foreigfin embassy official involved with a gang seeking to perpetrate a vast currency fraud on a foreign government.

BALI-ESQUE

What with the flowers atop her hair, and that mischievous look in her eyes, "Bali-esque" is just the word to describe Madeleine Carroll as she appears in a starring role in "Honeymoon in Bali," Paramount's new comedy romance, at the Strand Theatre. Miss Carroll, cast as a career girl, purports to have little time for love, but Fred MacMurray and Allan Jones, her co-stars do their best to convince her otherwise. One of them succeeds.

Marking her first American-made picture in eighteen months, Lupe Velez returns to the screen in "The Girl From Mexico," an uproarious comedy filled with gay romantic action and song and dance, and now showing at the Garden.

Miss Velez recently appeared on Broadway in "You'll Never Know." She also made and appeared in a play in Mexico, and traveled through South America presenting a vaudeville act. Her last American screen appearance was in "High Flyers."

Realism, Sincerity Seen In "Of Human Bondage"

If RKO Radio Pictures had scoured the stage and screens of the world, it could not have better cast Leslie Howard and Bette Davis than in W. Somerset Maughan's "Of Human Bondage," which enjoyed high favor with the audiences at the Liberty Theatre yesterday.

Howard, as the sensitive young idtalist of Maugham's classic imbues his characterization with a wistfulness and tenderness seldom seen on the screen.

We dream, long, pity, suffer, love and hate with him in the role of Philip Carey, the medical student victimized by an unrequited love for heartless Mildred, triumphantly played by Miss Davis. Helplessly infatuated with the girl, he suffers utter torture. His friend, Nora, understands his unnatural romance, but cannot save him from his devotion to Mildred. Baffled, she marries another man. Another friend, Sally, tries to give him happiness, but his tie to Mildred retards the development of their romance.

Only after Mildred's death does Philip find it possible to taste life's pleasures, and his ordeal is revealed in a tale of pathos and drama and love—as only Leslie Howard can portray it.

Miss Davis is a remarkable Mildred, imparting to the role sincerity and realism. It is this picture that revealed her as one of the most brilliant and enthralling actresses of this decade. Frances Dee as Sally and Kay Johnson as Nora use their fine talents with splendid success. Other roles are enacted admirably by such seasoned players as Reginald Denny, Reginald Owen, Reginald Sheffield, Allan Hale and Desmond Roberts.

"King of the Turf" and "Hidden Valley"

"King of the Newsboys" And Western Picture

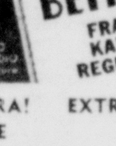

Opening tomorrow at the Embassy Theater will be Roy Rogers and Mary Hart in the singin' western hit, "Frontier Pony Express," with Raymond Hatton. The second hit is Lew Ayres, Helen Mack and Alison Skipworth in "King Of The Newsboys." On the same program there will be another chapter of the new serial, "Mandrake, The Magician."

Big Forest Fires Blaze Out of Control in West Virginia

600 Men Fight Half Dozen Fires On Long Front

High Winds Fan Blazes Covering Thousands of Acres

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 25. (AP)—Half a dozen forest fires blazed out of control tonight in Mercer and McDowell counties, with individual fire "fronts" ranging from five to six miles.

High winds fanned the big blazes, covering thousands of acres, and State Forester Dan B. Griffin said there was little prospect of bringing them under control tonight. Griffin, who is at the scene directing the firefighting operations of 600 men, described the situation as an "emergency."

At the same time several large fires from Virginia swept across the border near Bluefield and Princeton.

Rain Forecasted

The Parkersburg Weather Bureau forecast a general rain for the state, coming in from the northwest, but Griffin said the weather in McDowell and Mercer counties was "clear as crystal."

All forest fire towers were "blind" because of the heavy smoke.

No accidents were reported, and although the fires threatened numerous homes, none of them had been reported burned, Griffin said.

Nineteen new fires were reported in the state today, outside the beleaguered Pocahontas district, to bring the total to approximately 65 for the state. There were 17 new blazes in the Pocahontas district, including Mingo, Logan, McDowell, Mercer, Wyoming and Raleigh counties.

Sixty-Five Fires

The situation outside Mercer and McDowell counties was not considered serious, Griffin said.

The northwestern section of the state experienced steady, soaking rains today, extinguishing every fire in the Northern Panhandle conservation commission office reported.

C. L. Wilson of the Parkersburg weather bureau said the rain appeared to be moving southward. It has been raining steadily in Parkersburg since 4 p. m., where .25 inch of rain fell in the first three hours.

The worst situations were at Keystone, McDowell county, and Camp Creek, Mercer county, Griffin related after an air survey of the territory.

The wind, which has ranged from 15 to 35 miles an hour velocity in the past several days, was the worst opponent of the firefighters.

The McDowell-Mercer situation is "as bad as last fall," Griffin said.

Woods Very Dry

The woods in the state have been extremely dry as a result of the two-month drought. The last general rain fell Sept. 29-30. Wilson said at Parkersburg, but he added it was not sufficient to break the dry spell.

The last soaking rains the state had fell during th esecond and third weeks of August.

Commissioner of Agriculture J. B. McLaughlin said that in some respects the dry spell was the worst since 1930-31.

McLaughlin related some municipalities have reported water shortages and emergency measures have been ordered. "Cover" crops such as clover and wheat have been hard hit.

"The worst will come when the rains come," McLaughlin said.

He referred to the erosion of the dusty topsoil which usually follows when the earth has been sun-baked for long periods.

The agriculture commissioner said the present drought is not as bad as that of 1930-31 with respect to water shortages but added that the effect on crops unharvested is just as bad. These were few since most of the spring and summer farm products had been gathered before the drought began.

Hunters Use Dogs To Kill Deer Near Grantsville

Residents Asked To Report All Such Violations

Grantsville, Oct. 25 — Hunters in this section were unable to wait for the five day deer season to open in the county Dec. 1, and started out in search of this game Monday. It was reported they were using dogs in their hunt. A party of five men, thought to be from Pennsylvania, were seen chasing the deer with dogs in the woods on Red Ridge, near here, where three deer, one of them a doe, were found killed illegally Monday afternoon.

Deputy Game Warden, Joseph A. Minke had the deer dressed and took them to the Associated Charities at Cumberland for distribution to the needy.

Persons in the community are asked to cooperate with the officers by reporting information regarding such violations at once and not several hours afterward. They believe this is the only way to prevent illegal slaughter of game in this section.

Dramatic Club Formed

A dramatic club, under the direction of Miss Emma Caulk, head of the English Department of the high school, was organized yesterday afternoon.

In order to qualify as a member of the club each student applicant was required to go upon the stage and make a brief speech. Seventy-three applicants were accepted for membership. Miss Caulk plans to direct the club in at least two productions for the public this season, for the purpose of raising funds for the purchase of some needed scenery.

A number of the students in the local school show considerable dramatic ability and the public is looking forward to some excellent performances by them in the near future. The following sponsors for committees were named: Miss Jean Young, scenery; Miss Mabel Schlossnagle, make-up; Mrs. W. J. Glenn, music; Mrs. Julius Renninger, costume; Verl Edwards and Guy Hardesty, lighting and curtain.

Mrs. Glenn, who is supervisor of music at the school, has organized a band and at present has twelve members. Trombone, French horn, clarinet, trumpet, accordion and drum pieces are included so far. More are expected to join the group as soon as instruments are received.

Artists To Exhibit

An exhibition of the artists of Garrett County will be held in the auditorium of the Oakland high school November 6, 7 and 8, and will be open evenings on the 6 and 7.

This exhibition is entirely free, and every artist or craftsman in the county is invited to submit some of their work. This may include pencil, pen and ink, charcoal, or water color sketches, oil paintings, wood or metal work, hand art or needle work, etc. Persons may leave their entrys with Miss Jean Young, head of the Art Department of the Grantsville high school, or with Miss Catherine Baker, at the Oakland high school.

Prizes Awarded

Mr. William E. Tarbell, head of the agricultural department of the high school, received a favorable report from the authorities of the Frederick Fair Association last night.

Bus Accident Victims On Road To Recovery At Welch Hospitals

Welch, W. Va., Oct. 25 (AP)—Seventeen of the 67 children injured just two weeks ago in the state's worst school bus accident remained in Welch hospitals today but doctors said all are out of danger.

A big bus enroute to Big Creek High School at War went over a 75-foot bank October 11, killing six students and the driver, H. L. Belcher.

One of those still in a hospital is Jessie Mullins, whose sister, Lucille, was fatally injured, physicians said some of those still under treatment might be weeks in recovering.

Meanwhile, the Department of Public Safety and Department of Education officials at Charleston held almost daily conferences on an official report of the wreck. Pictures prepared by the troopers were studied along with statements taken from victims.

The first official report, made to Charleston by Sergeant C. S. Wilson shortly after the bus plunged over the embankment, said the left front axle broke in such a manner as to lock the bus wheels and send it out of control over the cliff.

The patients still hospitalized: Helen Combs, Clinton Forbes, Dorothy White, Oliver Jesse, John Palko, Violet McKinney, Pauline Jesse, Virginia Logan, Kathleen Hudson, Juanita Hammitt, Dorothy Kilgore, Eloise Conklin, Rose Baldwin, Grace Dewitt, Kathleen Brewster, and Clara Justice.

Frostburg Bells Ring Once More, Repair Job Now Completed

Fostburg, Oct. 25. —About 8:30 Monday night the residents of East Frostburg were wondering what was going on at Zion Evangelical and Reformed church.

The bells, three in number, began to ring and toll; they rang separately and in various combinations. Their tone seemed richer and fuller. The cause of the unusual ringing at the unusual hour was that workmen from the McShane Bell Foundry Co. of Baltimore, had just completed their repair work and were testing the bells.

Considerable work was needed to put the bells in good condition. They were tightened in their yokes, all nuts and bolts in the mechanism were checked and tightened, a new stand for the largest bell was installed and the old wheel on the large bell was replaced by a new one. These wheels are unusual in constriction, being about five feet in diameter, made of oak.

Made By Hand

They are constructed by hand and are so braced to take the strain from the bell-ropes. These large wheels make it possible to swing the heavy bells by means of ropes leading down from the steeple to the interior of the church. In addition to the above, the clapper-springs were adjusted and new leather pads put on the springs.

Just as a person does not notice the ticking of a clock until it has stopped, so, many people were not aware of the many church bells in Fronstburg until something interrupted the usual. Many incidents are told about the part the bells and chimes of Frostburg hold in the lives and memories of the residents.

Bells Missed

The writer was told about a youngster in the neighborhood of Zion church who was very much concerned about the fact that the bells no longer rang. He felt badly until convinced that the bells would soon be fixed. Now, each time he passes the church he looks up at the steeple and informs his companion at the time that the bells were broken but they were going to be fixed.

Many of the older members of the church, especially those who have moved to other cities became alarmed when they heard that the bells had stopped ringing, thinking that they would remain permanently silent.

It is interesting to hear some of the old timers tell about the Sunday afternoon about 60 years ago when the bells were dedicated. Many of the families of the community made substantial contributions toward their cost. That part of East Main street was considered "country" at that time.

The story goes that the people of town gathered on the dusty road in front of the church for the dedication ceremonies. Picket fences lined the road. Can you imagine dedication services being conducted on Main street with people gathered on the highway? Sixty years is a long time!

Authorities Will Discuss Cancer Control Nov. 1

Authorities on cancer control will address an open meeting sponsored jointly by the A. A. U. W. and the Women's Auxiliary to the Medical Society, at the Methodist church at 8 o'clock, Wednesday evening, Nov. 1, at Bedford, Pa.

Dr. Stanley B. Reiman, cancer research director of the Lankenau Hospital, Philadelphia, will deliver the principal address. He is a specialist in this field, with national reputation, and his remarks will be not only interesting but instructive.

Following this, there will be ten-minute talks by Dr. N. A. Timmins, Dr. D. R. Sipes and Dr. Kester, of Centerville, on different phases of cancer.

Questions on the cancer problem and progress on research will be answered.

Paternity Case Heard at Keyser

Case of Shook Versus Evans Now Before Jury

Keyser, W. Va., Oct. 24—The case of Ura Shook, 27, Beryl, versus Otha Evans, 34, Piedmont, a West Virginia Pulp and Paper company employe, in which plaintiff is seeking to establish paternity of an illegitimate child born September 5, was ordered continued until tomorrow, in Circuit Court.

After a jury had deliberated for forty-five minutes without reaching a verdict, Judge Robert McV. Drane adjourned the court at 4:40 this afternoon until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Attorney H. G. Shores represents the plaintiff, and H. R. Athey is defending Evans.

One case, earlier today, was disposed of in slightly more than an hour, with only three witnesses being called. Frank Homershire, itinerant negro, was found guilty of breaking and entering the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Magruder, Ridgeley, and stealing a coat. The jury returned the guilty verdict after little more than ten minutes' consideration.

Ministers Meet

At their regular meeting here yesterday, members of the Keyser Ministerial Association elected the Rev. R. L. Brill, pastor of Calvary United Brethren church, Piedmont, and the Rev. C. K. Spiggle, Trinity Lutheran church pastor, secretary-treasurer.

A special meeting was announced for Thursday, to determine the time of this year's Thanksgiving service and union week of prayer.

Officers Puzzled

Whether or not a man can be prosecuted for stealing his own car is a question that is puzzling State Trooper R. R. Karickhoff and City Policeman Estle Miers today.

Shortly after 1 o'clock this morning the two officers found Charles Davis, 24, Kitzmiller, in his car, which had been impounded after he was convicted on a drunken driving charge, on Centre street, near the court house. The Kitzmiller man was attempting to start the motor by crossing the ignition wires. He had pushed the automobile around the corner to Centre street from its parking spot behind the court house.

After paying a fine in Justice of the Peace court yesterday, on the drunken driving charge, Davis was released. Today he is back in jail facing a charge of drunkenness—and of stealing his own car, if there is any such charge.

Negro Convicted

Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 25. (AP)—Hampton Harris, negro, was convicted of second degree murder for the slaying of Roscoe George, negro.

George's body, burned about the torso, was found on a stairway in a rooming house last January. He had been beaten on the head.

Lockjaw Fatal

Five Delegates To Attend Press Convention

Lonaconing High School Paper To Be Represented

Lonaconing, Oct. 25—Five delegates of the Orange and Black, Central high school publication, will attend the fifteenth annual convention of the Southern interscholastic press association, Lexington, Va., Friday and Saturday, Nov. 3 and 4, it was announced today.

Sponsored by the Lee memorial journalism foundation, the convention will open with a get-acquainted reception at the Student Union building, Thursday, Nov. 2 for delegates and advisers who arrive early. Among the events featuring the convention this year will be: short course in a year book production; special round-table on the school magazine with Denver Lindley, associate editor of Collier's magazine, in charge; regional meeting of the National association of journalism advisers.

Students of the local school have represented their paper eleven times and it was awarded nine successive trophies. This year the paper will be placed in class D group and judged accordingly.

Accompanied by Arthur F. Smith, adviser of the paper, the delegates will be guests of the Natural Bridge, Inc., and its president, J. Lee Davis. A visit to the Natural Bridge and sight-seeing tour of historic Lexington, Va., will be made. Saturday evening the annual Southern interscholastic press association banquet will be held, which is the biggest event of the convention. Awards and prizes will be presented to a representative of each winning publication, after which the convention will come to a close.

The following members of the staff making the trip are: Elizabeth Langley, Anna Lease, Hilda Mackey, Doris Lee and Marvel Warnick.

Three Firsts Scored

All these departments of the Central high school ranked first in attendance in Allegany county for the month of September. Barton, one of the foremost contenders for attendance honors in the county, dropped to third.

At the local school the junior high department ranked first with a percentage of 99.6, the elementary division came second with a percentage of 99.5, while the senior high department received the third honor, having a percentage of 99.4. Each of the departments lead respective division in the county.

Pappas Rites Held

Mrs. William Barnes, Watercliffe street; Mrs. William Henry, Douglas avenue and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shaw, Jackson street, returned today after attending the funeral of William "Billy" Pappas, 19, who died Sunday after a month's illness, at Martinsburg, W. Va.

The young man, a former resident of this place, was the son of Gust and Bessie (Patrick) Pappas. He was born at Frostburg, Md., and later came to live in Lonaconing, where his father was proprietor of a confectionery on Main street for a number of years. When a child of six, young Pappas lost an eye while at play. He went to Martinsburg, W. Va., with his parents who

Big Forest Fires Blaze Out of Control in West Virginia

High Winds Fan Blazes Covering Thousands of Acres

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 25. (AP)—Half a dozen forest fires blazed out of control tonight in Mercer and McDowell counties, with individual fire "fronts" ranging from five to six miles.

High winds fanned the big blazes, covering thousands of acres, and State Forester Dan B. Griffin said there was little prospect of bringing them under control tonight. Griffin, who is at the scene directing the firefighting operations of 600 men, described the situation as an "emergency."

At the same time, several large fires from Virginia swept across the border near Bluefield and Princeton.

Rain Forecasted

The Parkersburg Weather Bureau forecast a general rain for the state, coming in from the northwest, but Griffin said the weather in McDowell and Mercer counties was "clear as crystal."

All forest fire towers were "blind" because of the heavy smoke.

No accidents were reported, and although the fires threatened numerous homes, none of them had been reported burned, Griffin said.

Nineteen new fires were reported in the state today, outside the beleaguered Pocahontas district, to bring the total to approximately 65 for the state. There were 17 new blazes in the Pocahontas district, including Mingo, Logan, McDowell, Mercer, Wyoming and Raleigh counties.

Sixty-Five Fires

The situation outside Mercer and McDowell counties was not considered serious, Griffin said.

The northwestern section of the state experienced steady soaking rains today, extinguishing every fire in the Northern Panhandle, conservation commission office reported.

C. L. Wilson of the Parkersburg weather bureau said the rain appeared to be moving southward. It has been raining steadily in Parkersburg since 4 p. m., where .25 inch of rain fell in the first three hours.

The worst situations were at Keystone, McDowell county, and Camp Creek, Mercer county, Griffin related after an air survey of the territory.

The wind, which has ranged from 15 to 35 miles an hour velocity in the past several days, was the worst opponent of the firefighters.

The McDowell-Mercer situation is "as bad as last fall," Griffin said.

Woods Very Dry

The woods in the state have been extremely dry as a result of the two-month drought. The last general rain fell Sept. 29-30, Wilson said at Parkersburg, but he added it was not sufficient to break the dry spell.

The last soaking rains the state had fell during th esecond and third weeks of August.

Commissioner of Agriculture J. B. McLaughlin said that in some respects the dry spell was the worst since 1930-31.

McLaughlin related some municipalities have reported water shortages and emergency measures have been ordered. "Cover" crops such as clover and wheat have been hard hit.

"The worst will come when the rains come," McLaughlin said.

He referred to the erosion of the dusty topsoil which usually follows when the earth has been sun-baked for long periods.

The agriculture commissioner said the present drought is not as bad as that of 1930-31 with respect to water shortages but added that the effect on crops unharvested is just as bad. These were few since most of the spring and summer farm products had been gathered before the drought began.

Hunters Use Dogs To Kill Deer Near Grantsville

Residents Asked To Report All Such Violations

Grantsville, Oct. 25 — Hunters in this section were unable to wait for the five day deer season to open in the ~~county~~ Dec. 1, and started out in search of this game Monday. It was reported they were using dogs in their hunt. A party of five men, thought to be from Pennsylvania, were seen chasing the deer with dogs in the woods on Red Ridge, near here, where three deer, one of them a doe, were found killed illegally Monday afternoon.

Deputy Game Warden, Joseph A. Minke had the deer dressed and took them to the Associated Charities at Cumberland for distribution to the needy.

Persons in the community are asked to cooperate with the officers by reporting information regarding such violations at once and not several hours afterward. They believe this is the only way to prevent illegal slaughter of game in this section.

Dramatic Club Formed

A dramatic club, under the direction of Miss Emma Caulk, head of the English Department of the high school, was organized yesterday afternoon.

In order to qualify as a member of the club each student applicant was required to go upon the stage and make a brief speech. Seventy-three applicants were accepted for membership. Miss Caulk plans to direct the club in at least two productions for the public this season, for the purpose of raising funds for the purchase of some needed scenery.

A number of the students in the local school show considerable dramatic ability and the public is looking forward to some excellent performances by them in the near future. The following sponsors for committees were named: Miss Jean Young, scenery; Miss Mabel Schlossnagle, make-up; Mrs. W. J. Glenn, music; Mrs. Julius Renninger, costume; Verl Edwards and Guy Hardesty, lighting and curtain.

Mrs. Glenn, who is supervisor of music at the school, has organized a band and at present has twelve members. Trombone, French horn, clarinet, trumpet, accordion and drum pieces are included so far. More are expected to join the group as soon as instruments are received.

Artists To Exhibit

An exhibition of the artists of Garrett County will be held in the auditorium of the Oakland high school November 6, 7 and 8, and will be open evenings on the 6 and 7.

This exhibition is entirely free, and every artist or craftsman in the county is invited to submit some of their work. This may include pencil, pen and ink, charcoal, or water color sketches, oil paintings, wood or metal work, hand art or needle work, etc. Persons may leave their entrys with Miss Jean Young, head of the Art Department of the Grantsville high school, or with Miss Catherine Baker, at the Oakland high school.

Prizes Awarded

Mr. William E. Tarbell, head of the agricultural department of the high school, received a favorable report from the authorities of the Frederick Fair Association last night.

Mr. Tarbell took a group of six of his students to Frederick Oct. 12, to participate in various F.F.A. contests sponsored by the Fair and

Bus Accident Victims On Road To Recovery At Welch Hospitals

Welch, W. Va., Oct. 25 (AP)—Seventeen of the 67 children injured just two weeks ago in the state's worst school bus accident remained in Welch hospitals today but doctors said all are out of danger.

A big bus enroute to Big Creek High School at War went over a 75-foot bank October 11, killing six students and the driver, H. L. Belcher.

One of those still in a hospital is Jessie Mullins, whose sister, Lucille, was fatally injured, physicians said some of those still under treatment might be weeks in recovering.

Meanwhile, the Department of Public Safety and Department of Education officials at Charleston held almost daily conferences on an official report of the wreck. Pictures prepared by the troopers were studied along with statements taken from victims.

The first official report, made to Charleston by Sergeant C. S. Wilson shortly after the bus plunged over the embankment, said the left front axle broke in such a manner as to lock the bus wheels and send it out of control over the cliff.

The patients still hospitalized: Helen Comba, Clinton Forbes, Dorothy White, Oliver Jesse, John Falko, Violet McKinney, Pauline Jesse, Virginia Logan, Kathleen Hudson, Juanita Hammitt, Dorothy Kilgore, Eloise Conklin, Rose Baldwin, Grace Dewitt, Kathleen Brewster, and Clara Justice.

Frostburg Bells Ring Once More, Repair Job Now Completed

Fostburg, Oct. 25. —About 8:30 Monday night the residents of East Frostburg were wondering what was going on at Zion Evangelical and Reformed church.

The bells, three in number, began to ring and toll; they rang separately and in various combinations. Their tone seemed richer and fuller. The cause of the unusual ringing at the unusual hour was that workmen from the McShane Bell Foundry Co. of Baltimore, had just completed their repair work and were testing the bells.

Considerable work was needed to put the bells in good condition. They were tightened in their yokes, all nuts and bolts in the mechanism were checked and tightened, a new stand for the largest bell was installed and the old wheel on the large bell was replaced by a new one. These wheels are unusual in constriction, being about five feet in diameter, made of oak.

Made By Hand

They are constructed by hand and are so braced to take the strain from the bell-ropes. These large wheels make it possible to swing the heavy bells by means of ropes leading down from the steeple to the interior of the church. In addition to the above, the clapper-springs were adjusted and new leather pads put on the springs.

Just as a person does not notice the ticking of a clock until it has stopped, so, many people were not aware of the many church bells in Fronstburg until something interrupted the usual. Many incidents are told about the part the bells and chimes of Frostburg hold in the lives and memories of the residents.

Bells Missed

The writer was told about a youngster in the neighborhood of Zion church who was very much concerned about the fact that the bells no longer rang. He felt badly until convinced that the bells would soon be fixed. Now, each time he passes the church he looks up at the steeple and informs his companion at the time that the bells were broken but they were going to be fixed.

Many of the older members of the church, especially those who have moved to other cities became alarmed when they heard that the bells had stopped ringing, thinking that they would remain permanently silent.

It is interesting to hear some of the old timers tell about the Sunday afternoon about 60 years ago when the bells were dedicated. Many of the families of the community made substantial contributions toward their cost. That part of East Main street was considered "country" at that time.

The story goes that the people of town gathered on the dusty road in front of the church for the dedication ceremonies. Picket fences lined the road. Can you imagine dedication services being conducted on Main street with people gathered on the highway? Sixty years is a long time!

Authorities Will Discuss Cancer Control Nov. 1

Authorities on cancer control will address an open meeting sponsored jointly by the A. A. U. W. and the Women's Auxiliary to the Medical Society, at the Methodist church at 8 o'clock, Wednesday evening, Nov. 1, at Bedford, Pa.

Dr. Stanley B. Reiman, cancer research director of the Lankenau Hospital, Philadelphia, will deliver the principal address. He is a specialist in this field, with national reputation, and his remarks will be not only interesting but instructive.

Following this, there will be ten-minute talks by Dr. N. A. Timmins, Dr. D. R. Sipes and Dr. Kester, of Centerville, on different phrases of cancer.

Questions on the cancer problem and progress on research will be answered.

Case of Shook Versus Evans Now Before Jury

Keyser, W. Va., Oct. 24—The case of Ura Shook, 27, Beryl, versus Otha Evans, 34, Piedmont, a West Virginia Pulp and Paper company employe, in which plaintiff is seeking to establish paternity of an illegitimate child born September 5, was ordered continued until tomorrow, in Circuit Court.

After a jury had deliberated for forty-five minutes without reaching a verdict, Judge Robert McV. Drane adjourned the court at 4:40 this afternoon until 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Attorney H. G. Shores represents the plaintiff, and H. R. Athey is defending Evans.

One case, earlier today, was disposed of in slightly more than an hour, with only three witnesses being called. Frank Homershire, itinerant negro, was found guilty of breaking and entering the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Magruder, Ridgeley, and stealing a coat. The jury returned the guilty verdict after little more than ten minutes' consideration.

Ministers Meet

At their regular meeting here yesterday, members of the Keyser Ministerial Association elected the Rev. R. L. Brill, pastor of Calvary United Brethren church, Piedmont, and the Rev. C. K. Spiggle, Trinity Lutheran church pastor, secretary-treasurer.

A special meeting was announced for Thursday, to determine the time of this year's Thanksgiving service and union week of prayer.

Officers Puzzled

Whether or not a man can be prosecuted for stealing his own car is a question that is puzzling State Trooper R. R. Karickhoff and City Policeman Estle Miers today.

Shortly after 1 o'clock this morning the two officers found Charles Davis, 24, Kitzmiller, in his car, which had been impounded after he was convicted on a drunken driving charge, on Centre street, near the court house. The Kitzmiller man was attempting to start the motor by crossing the ignition wires. He had pushed the automobile around the corner to Centre street from its parking spot behind the court house.

After paying a fine in Justice of the Peace court yesterday, on the drunken driving charge, Davis was released. Today he is back in jail facing a charge of drunkenness—and of stealing his own car, if there is any such charge.

Negro Convicted

Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 25. (AP)—Hampton Harris, negro, was convicted of second degree murder for the slaying of Roscoe George, negro.

George's body, burned about the torso, was found on a stairway in a rooming house last January. He had been beaten on the head.

Lockjaw Fatal

Five Delegates To Attend Press Convention

Lonaconing High School Paper To Be Represented

Lonaconing, Oct. 25—Five delegates of the Orange and Black, Central high school publication, attend the fifteenth annual convention of the Southern interscholastic press association, Lexington, Va., Friday and Saturday, Nov. 3 and 4, it was announced today.

Sponsored by the Lee memorial journalism foundation, the convention will open with a get-acquainted reception at the Student Union building, Thursday, Nov. 2 for delegates and advisers who arrive early. Among the events featuring the convention this year will be: short course in a year book production, special round-table on the school magazine with Denver Lindley, associate editor of Collier's magazine in charge; regional meeting of the National association of journalism advisers.

Students of the local school have represented their paper eleven times and it was awarded nine successive trophies. This year the paper will be placed in class D group and judged accordingly.

Accompanied by Arthur F. Smith, adviser of the paper, the delegates will be guests of the Natural Bridge, Inc., and its president, J. Lee Davis. A visit to the Natural Bridge and a sight-seeing tour of historic Lexington, Va., will be made. Saturday evening the annual Southern interscholastic press association banquet will be held, which is the biggest event of the convention. Awards and prizes will be presented to a representative of each winning publication, after which the convention will come to a close.

Three Firsts Scored

All these departments of the Central high school ranked first in attendance in Allegany county for the month of September. Bart, one of the foremost contenders for attendance honors in the county, dropped to third.

At the local school the junior high department ranked first with a percentage of 99.6, the elementary division came second with a percentage of 99.5, while the senior high department received the third honor, having a percentage of 99. Each of the departments lead respective division in the county.

Pappas Rites Held

Mrs. William Barnes, Waterch street; Mrs. William Henry, Dough avenue and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shaw, Jackson street, returned today after attending the funeral of William "Billy" Pappas, 19, who died Sunday after a month's illness, at Martinsburg, W. Va.

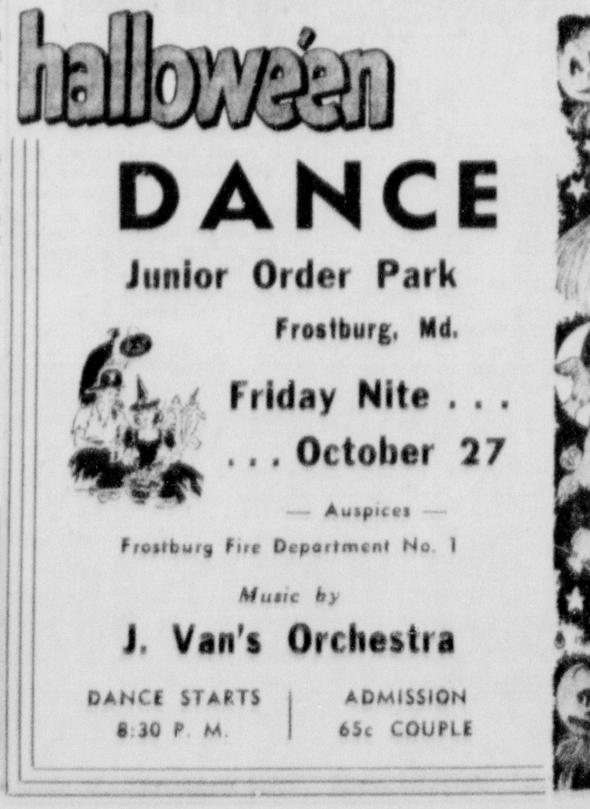

The young man, a former resident of this place, was the son of Gust and Bessie (Patrick) Pappas. He was born at Frostburg, Md., and later came to live in Lonaconing, where his father was proprietor of a confectionery on Main street for a number of years. When a child of six, young Pappas lost an eye while at play. He went to Martinsburg, W. Va., with his parents when

Two Hundred Attend Eagle Reception

Frostburg Aerie Opens Newly Furnished Rooms

Frostburg, Oct. 25 — The informal reception held last evening in connection with the opening of the newly furnished room of Frostburg aerie, No. 1273, Fraternal Order of Eagles, was attended by about two hundred persons.

Music for dancing was furnished by James Cathcart's string orchestra and vocal selections were rendered by Mrs. Edna Engle, William Payton and William Eberly. The piano accompaniments were played by Prof. Chris Kenney.

Addresses were made by Woodrow Layman, president, and Thomas H. Morgan, secretary of the aerie. Kenneth Close, this city, State chaplain of Fraternal Order of Eagles of Maryland, was among the guests. Refreshments were served.

Watts To Speak

Dr. J. T. Watts, Baltimore, executive secretary of the Maryland Baptist Union Association, will be the speaker at the annual Rally Day services to be held Sunday morning, Oct. 29, commencing at 9:30 o'clock.

Dr. Watts will also deliver the sermon at the morning church services. Special music will be rendered for the occasion by the Sunday school orchestra of fourteen pieces under direction of John R. Watson, and the church choir under direction of F. Earle Krietzburg.

Due to the fact that Dr. Watts holds one of the most important positions in the Baptist denomination in Maryland, the committee in charge is making plans to take care of an overflow audience. The committee consists of John R. Watson, Mrs. Leah Rephan and Mrs. Ellen Krietzburg.

Marriage Announced

Announcement has been made of the marriage, July 29, 1937, at Winchester, Va., of Russell Burkett, an employe of the Hitchins Brothers department store, this city, and Miss Caroline Fischer, supervisor of the operating rooms at the Memorial Hospital, Cumberland. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Herman McKay, pastor of the Winchester Methodist church.

Light Company To Construct News Lines

Extensions Scheduled in Fort Run, Kessel and South Fork

Moorefield, W. Va., Oct. 25—Hansel Harper, superintendent of the Hardy County Light and Power Association, the R. E. A. financed cooperative, announces construction will start today on twenty miles of extensions through the Fort Run, Kessel and South Fork sections of the county.

The work is being done by the Rockingham Construction Company of Harrisonburg. The new lines will be completed within three weeks and will employ from thirty-five to forty men during that time.

The new lines will serve approximately sixty new customers.

Fish Distributed

Floyd Bryant and Eddie Blossom, representing the Leetown Hatchery of the Bureau of Fisheries, Department of Interior, distributed some 20,000 forage fish in the South Branch Monday afternoon. This is the third planting of food for game fish in the South Branch of the Potomac during the summer.

The fish were brought in cans and were put out at the Old Fields Bridge, at the ford on the old Morgantown Road, at Buzzerd's Ford Bridge and at the bridge in Petersburg Gap.

Some small bass, sunfish and a new species for these waters, blue gills, were distributed.

Divorces Granted

Four divorces were granted in the Circuit court last week during the October term of court with H. M. Calhoun sitting as judge. Carrie Beatrice Keener was granted a divorce from Herchell Keener and was granted custody of her girl, Nina Lee Keener.

Benjamin C. Shobe was granted a divorce from Vern Hose Shobe and he was given custody of the two children Lena and Bernice. Carl Bowman was granted a divorce from Helen Bowman and was given custody of their son Carl Bowman, Jr. Ota V. Dyer was granted a divorce from Gilbert O. Dyer.

In the recess of the county court the will of Frederick A. High was presented for probate. Joseph M. High and Manasseh Dasher were named executors and posted bond of $5,000. Roy Sions, Wilbur Sions and H. H. Sions were appointed appraisers and C. C. Wise was named commissioner of accounts.

Chapter Wins Prize

The Winnie Davis Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy was notified Tuesday that their chapter won first prize donated by Mrs. Samuel D. Brady of Morgantown for having the largest number of children in their junior chapter of the U. D. C. in competition with the other chapters in the state of West Virginia. Mrs. Brady is the president of the West Virginia Division of the U. D. C.

The meeting was held in the home of Mrs. W. B. Bowen. The prize of $5 was donated to the Junior Chapter to be used in compiling their scrap book. Miss Martha Gilkeson, president of the Winnie Davis Chapter of the U. D. C. read a paper loaned by Mrs. H. M. Calhoun on Mrs. Samuel Dorsey, who willed the estate 'Beauvoir' at Biloxi, Mississippi to Jefferson Davis, the president of the Confederate States of America. Mrs. Dorsey was an ancestor of Mrs. Calhoun's.

Miss Alice Heiskel was named delegate to the national general convention of the U. D. C. to be held in Charleston, S. C., in November. Mrs. John Mitchell Wyatt, Richmond, Va., was named alternate.

Vet Starts Practice

Dr. D. D. Bodenheimer, Elkins, veterinary, located his office in the Friddle Old Stone Tavern Tuesday for the practice of his profession. Dr. Bodenheimer is a graduate of Ohio State College and received his D. V. M. from Indianna Veterinary College.

Fish Planted

District Game Protector John Shanholtz reports the planting of three thousand small mouth black bass in the Lost River and Capon River Monday. The bass range from three to seven inches long and were supplied at the state hatchery at Ridge. This is the third planting of the game fish in these waters this year.

Protector Shanholtz also reports more than seventy wild turkey kills have been reported to him during the first week of the hunting season. Hardy county leads the state and very likely the whole nation in the number of wild turkeys killed during the hunting season. More than 200 were reported last year and the county will probably exceed that this season.

Amateurs To Perform

An amateur contest for local talent will be conducted in Moorefield for the benefit of the Moorefield School Band. The date for the final competition has not been determined but it will be in the last weeks of November.

Bob Rosen has been named chairman of the arrangements and entrants have been requested to get in touch with him. Rosen stated all types of talent would be considered from dancing and playing to monologs or plays.

Rehearsals have been called at Inskeep Hall Friday evenings. Cash prizes will be awarded for the winners.

Judge Warth Bawls Out Fifty Disgruntled Petit Jurymen

Huntington, W. Va., Oct. 25 (AP)—After several requests for dismissals, Common Pleas Judge H. Clay Warth took to task today in his chambers a panel of 50 petit jurors.

"I made my language strong," he said afterwards, and it must have done some good because none asked to be dismissed after I had finished."

Members of the present panel, the court added, "are as fine a group of representative citizens as I have ever seen, but they did not seem to regard their duty seriously."

Judge Warth said he had never had "more requests for dismissals."

Brief Mention

Sportsmen Meet

At the special meeting of the sportsmen of the community which was called last night the old order of the Grantsville Fish and Game Protective Association, which was organized Oct. 3, 1934, was dissolved.

The members of this organization affiliated themselves with the Garrett County Sportsmens Association and organized the Grantsville Branch of this order. Officers named were: J. Urban Stanton, president; Jesse Merrill, Avilton, vice president; Daniel W. Hershberger, secretary; and Henry L. Durst, treasurer. All money in the treasury of the old organization was turned over to the treasurer of the new branch.

The question was brought up at the meeting as to what jurisdiction the local branch would have in Garrett county and it was decided that two local executive committeemen, William Winterberg and Henry Durst, would take the matter up at the next meeting of the executive committee.

Meetings of the new order will be held locally every second and fourth Tuesday of each month for the present, the next meeting being set for Nov. 14. The group will meet at the W.O.W. Hall.

Train Kills Man

Clarksburg, W. Va., Oct. 25. (AP)—S. Lee Bartlett, 54, former Clarksburg painter, was struck and killed today by a passenger train (Baltimore and Ohio) at a Flemington crossing.

Coroner Paul Warden said Bartlett apparently did not notice the approaching train.

Oklahoma

the honors of scoring the most points with Clark.

Defensively, the Sooners were good enough to stop Northwestern at the two-yard line twice and never have been behind in any of their four games to date, although four touchdowns have been scored against their reserves.

Records of the Sooners' fumble-filled tie with Southern Methodist and their smashing victories over Northwestern, Texas and Kansas show only a slight advantage for Oklahoma in all statistics. But they have scored eighty-one points, while their opponents—some of whom out-gained them on the ground or through the air—were working their heads off to collect twenty-six.

With six different backs handling the kicking assignments, the Sooners have a punting average of 43.5 yards from the line of scrimmage on thirty-nine punts in four games. That was figured after twenty yards had been lopped off every punt that went over the goal line.

Favor, senior blocker, has kicked eight extra points in ten tries and has booted two field goals.

If the Sooners have a weakness, since Southern Methodist taught them to hold on to the ball, nobody has been able to find it. Perhaps that's why the experts rank them among the nation's first ten.

Two Hundred Attend Eagle Reception

Frostburg Aerie Opens Newly Furnished Rooms

Frostburg, Oct. 25 — The informal reception held last evening in connection with the opening of the newly furnished room of Frostburg aerie, No. 1273, Fraternal Order of Eagles, was attended by about two hundred persons.

Music for dancing was furnished by James Cathcart's string orchestra and vocal selections were rendered by Mrs. Edna Engle, William Payton and William Eberly. The piano accompaniments were played by Prof. Chris Kenney.

Addresses were made by Woodrow Layman, president, and Thomas H. Morgan, secretary of the aerie. Kenneth Close, this city, State chaplain of Fraternal Order of Eagles of Maryland, was among the guests. Refreshments were served.

Watts To Speak

Dr. J. T. Watts, Baltimore, executive secretary of the Maryland Baptist Union Association, will be the speaker at the annual Rally Day services to be held Sunday morning, Oct. 29, commencing at 9:30 o'clock.

Dr. Watts will also deliver the sermon at the morning church services. Special music will be rendered for the occasion by the Sunday school orchestra of fourteen pieces under direction of John R. Watson, and the church choir under direction of F. Earle Krietzburg.

Due to the fact that Dr. Watts holds one of the most important positions in the Baptist denomination in Maryland, the committee in charge is making plans to take care of an overflow audience. The committee consists of John R. Watson, Mrs. Leah Rephan and Mrs. Ellen Krietzburg.

Light Company To Construct News Lines

Extensions Scheduled in Fort Run, Kessel and South Fork

Moorefield, W. Va., Oct. 25—Hansel Harper, superintendent of the Hardy County Light and Power Association, the R. E. A. financed cooperative, announces construction will start today on twenty miles of extensions through the Fort Run, Kessel and South Fork sections of the county.

The work is being done by the Rockingham Construction Company of Harrisonburg. The new lines will be completed within three weeks and will employ from thirty-five to forty men during that time.

The new lines will serve approximately sixty new customers.

Fish Distributed

Floyd Bryant and Eddie Blossom, representing the Leetown Hatchery of the Bureau of Fisheries, Department of Interior, distributed some 20,000 forage fish in the South Branch Monday afternoon. This is the third planting of food for game fish in the South Branch of the Potomac during the summer.

The fish were brought in cans and were put out at the Old Fields Bridge, at the ford on the old Morgantown Road, at Buzzerd's Ford Bridge and at the bridge in Petersburg Gap.

Some small bass, sunfish and a new species for these waters, blue gills, were distributed.

Divorces Granted

Four divorces were granted in the Circuit court last week during the October term of court with H. M. Calhoun sitting as judge. Carrie Beatrice Keener was granted a divorce from Herchell Keener and was granted custody of her girl, Nina Lee Keener.

Benjamin C. Shobe was granted a divorce from Vern Hose Shobe and he was given custody of the two children Lena and Bernice. Carl Bowman was granted a divorce from Helen Bowman and was given custody of their son Carl Bowman, Jr. Ota V. Dyer was granted a divorce from Gilbert O. Dyer.

In the recess of the county court, the will of Frederick A. High was presented for probate. Joseph M. High and Manasseh Dasher were named executors and posted bond of $5,000. Roy Sions, Wilbur Sions and H. H. Sions were appointed appraisers and C. C. Wise was named commissioner of accounts.

Chapter Wins Prize

The Winnie Davis Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy was notified Tuesday that their chapter won first prize donated by Mrs. Samuel D. Brady of Morgantown for having the largest number of children in their junior chapter of the U. D. C. in competition with the other chapters in the state of West Virginia. Mrs. Brady is the president of the West Virginia Division of the U. D. C.

The meeting was held in the home of Mrs. W. B. Bowen. The prize of $5 was donated to the Junior Chapter to be used in compiling their scrap book. Miss Martha Gilkeson, president of the Winnie Davis Chapter of the U. D. C. read a paper loaned by Mrs. H. M. Calhoun on Mrs. Samuel Dorsey, who willed the estate 'Beauvoir' at Biloxi, Mississippi to Jefferson Davis, the president of the Confederate States of America. Mrs. Dorsey was an ancestor of Mrs. Calhoun's.

Miss Alice Heiskel was named delegate to the national general convention of the U. D. C. to be held in Charleston, S. C., in November. Mrs. John Mitchell Wyatt, Richmond, Va., was named alternate.

Vet Starts Practice

Dr. D. D. Bodenheimer, Elkins, veterinary, located his office in the Friddle Old Stone Tavern Tuesday for the practice of his profession. Dr. Bodenheimer is a graduate of Ohio State College and received his D. V. M. from Indianna Veterinary College.

Fish Planted

District Game Protector John Shanholtz reports the planting of three thousand small mouth black bass in the Lost River and Capon River Monday. The bass range from three to seven inches long and were supplied at the state hatchery at Ridge. This is the third planting of the game fish in these waters this year.

Protector Shanholtz also reports more than seventy wild turkey kills have been reported to him during the first week of the hunting season. Hardy county leads the state and very likely the whole nation in the number of wild turkeys killed during the hunting season. More than 200 were reported last year and the county will probably exceed that this season.

Amateurs To Perform

An amateur contest for local talent will be conducted in Moorefield for the benefit of the Moorefield School Band. The date for the final competition has not been determined but it will be in the last weeks of November.

Bob Rosen has been named chairman of the arrangements and entrants have been requested to get in touch with him. Rosen stated all types of talent would be considered from dancing and playing to monologs or plays.

Judge Warth Bawls Out Fifty Disgruntled Petit Jurymen

Huntington, W. Va., Oct. 25 (AP)—After several requests for dismissals, Common Pleas Judge H. Clay Warth took to task today in his chambers a panel of 50 petit jurors.

"I made my language strong," he said afterwards, and it must have done some good because none asked to be dismissed after I had finished."

Members of the present panel, the court added, "are as fine a group of representative citizens as I have ever seen, but they did not seem to regard their duty seriously."

Judge Warth said he had never had "more requests for dismissals."

Inskeep Hall Friday evenings. Cash prizes will be awarded for the winners.

Sportsmen Meet

At the special meeting of the sportsmen of the community which was called last night the old order of the Grantsville Fish and Game Protective Association, which was organized Oct. 3, 1934, was dissolved.

The members of this organization affiliated themselves with the Garrett County Sportsmens Association and organized the Grantsville Branch of this order. Officers named were: J. Urban Stanton, president; Jesse Merrill, Avilton, vice president; Daniel W. Hershberger, secretary; and Henry L. Durst, treasurer. All money in the treasury of the old organization was turned over to the treasurer of the new branch.

The question was brought up at the meeting as to what jurisdiction the local branch would have in Garrett county and it was decided that two local executive committeemen, William Winterberg and Henry Durst, would take the matter up at the next meeting of the executive committee.

Meetings of the new order will be held locally every second and fourth Tuesday of each month for the present, the next meeting being set for Nov. 14. The group will meet at the W.O.W. Hall.

Wheeling, W. Va., Oct. 25 (AP)—An ambulance took Burton Carter, 53, back to Indiana today to answer charges of slaying Sheriff William Van Camp 16 years ago.

Train Kills Man

Clarksburg, W. Va., Oct. 25. (AP)—S. Lee Bartlett, 54, former Clarksburg painter, was struck and killed today by a passenger train (Baltimore and Ohio) at a Flemington crossing.

Coroner Paul Warden said Bartlett apparently did not notice the approaching train.

Oklahoma

the honors of scoring the most points with Clark.

Defensively, the Sooners were good enough to stop Northwestern at the two-yard line twice and never have been behind in any of their four games to date, although four touchdowns have been scored against their reserves.

Records of the Sooners' fumble-filled tie with Southern Methodist and their smashing victories over Northwestern, Texas and Kansas show only a slight advantage for Oklahoma in all statistics. But they have scored eighty-one points, while their opponents—some of whom out-gained them on the ground or through the air—were working their heads off to collect twenty-six.

With six different backs handling the kicking assignments, the Sooners have a punting average of 43.5 yards from the line of scrimmage on thirty-nine punts in four games. That was figured after twenty yards had been lopped off every punt that went over the goal line.

Favor, senior blocker, has kicked eight extra points in ten tries and has booted two field goals.

If the Sooners have a weakness, since Southern Methodist taught them to hold on to the ball, nobody has been able to find it. Perhaps that's why the experts rank them among the nation's first ten.

Five Delegates

Mrs. John Kiddy, Pekin, who has been a patient in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, for the past seven weeks, is recuperating at the home of Mrs. Ora Kiddy, Baltimore.

Mrs. Joseph Reese entertained with four tables of bridge at her home on Douglas avenue. Honors were won by Mrs. Stakem and Mrs. Robert Kelly.

Mrs. James Doyle entertained the G. C. Club, Monday evening. Those present were, Mesdames George Keller, Piedmont, W. Va.; Edward Jones, Patrick Nolan, Daniel Jones, William Keating, Leslie Jones, Robert Smith, William Jones, Charles Moses, Thomas Fazenbaker, Leo Niland, Gilbert Blackburn and Eva Doyle. Catherine Doyle, and Bobby Niland. The table prize was awarded Mrs. Niland.

Honor Roll Announced

For the first six weeks of the school semester, twenty-four high school students were named on the honor roll. Agnes Richmond, a senior, led with thirteen points.

Other seniors were: Marie Merrbach, eleven points; Roberta Ritchie, ten points; June Landis and Marie Stakem, eight points; Josephine Jones and Helen Marx, seven points.

Bernadette Devlin led the junior class with twelve points. Others were: Harry Dixon and June Merrbach, nine points; Esther Stakem eight points; Catherine Doyle, Marion Eilbeck and Balir Holmes, seven points. Sophomores were Betty Dudley, eleven points; John Hohing, ten points; Earl Kelly, nine points; Marianna Logsdon and Melvin Whirfield, seven points. Freshmen were: Betty Lou Rankin, nine points; June McGee, eight points; Madeline Baumann, Eleanor Cuthbertson and John Muster, seven points.

Personal Mention

Miss Jane Nichols, R. N., New York, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Lindley Nichols, East Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Patton, Dudley Terrace, announce the birth of a son, Monday morning at the Potomac Valley Hospital, Keyser, W. Va.

Mr. and Mrs. James Russell and children, Colleen and Billy, Martin's Ferry, Ohio, are visiting relatives.

Miss Daisy Cline, Miss Lucile Houck, Miss Annetta Yates and Arthur F. Smith, members Central high school faculty, will attend the State Teachers association meeting, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 27 and 28, in the Polytechnic institute, Baltimore. They will leave tomorrow evening.

Forum Audience Gives Big Cheer For Embargo

Dr. Frank Urges U.S. To Tend to Own Problems over Here

The United States should stay out of the war and spend its time in putting its own house in order, Dr. Glenn Frank told an audience of 700 at a Community Forum lecture at Fort Hill high school last night.

His advocacy of retention of the arms embargo and the placing of shipments of all other goods "on an iron-clad unqualified cash-and-carry basis" drew spirited applause from the audience.

Admitting that seeing up such a distinction is "not logical," the former president of the University of Wisconsin, now Republican policy chief, pointed out that wheat, for example, is as important to a belligerent as munitions.

Repeal Would Lengthen War

But drawing such a line is psychologically sound, he continued, stating that repeal of the arms embargo would probably tend to prolong rather than shorten the war.

The speaker was emphatic in his plea for U. S. neutrality. 'The United States faces two alternatives, he declared:

"The United States must stay out of European wars entirely, or it must stay in European affairs permanently."

Neither the United States nor the rest of the world would derive any real benefit from our entry into the present struggle, Dr. Frankk asserted.

"It would affect only the military outcome, and there would be absolutely no assurance that it would, in the end, result in a settlement any more sound than that which ended the last war. And it probably wouldn't be as sound."

The speaker warned, too, of the grave dangers to America's political and economic systems should it plunge into the European war.

Can Our System Survive War?

"If we enter," he said, "it will be impossible for us to return to normal living for a generation or more. And I am gravely doubtful whether either our form of government or economic system could survice.

"Participation in this war would affect this country far more seriously than did its entrance into the last World War."

Dr. Frank concluded his discussion of the foreign situation as it affects America with a "fervent hope that the American people keep their heads—and use them too."

Then, turning to the domestic situation, he plunged into a discussion of the two schools of economic thought in America today.

Two Schools of Economic Thought

One, he said, holds that the United States has reached the zenith of its economic development and must depend increasingly on the federal government to maintain the national income.

The other, he explained, vigorously contradicts this thesis, believing that American industry and business can and will expand to provide new investment fields and more and more jobs.

He declared that the first theory, expressed by a group of Harvard-Tufts economists in a 20,000-word book entitled "An Economic Program for America," is based on the premises:

Basis for First School

1. That the frontier is gone.
2. That the rate of population growth is slowing down.
3. That our economic plant is already built—if not over-built.
4. That there are no new industries in sight to pull the country out its economic bog.

In answer to this, he said, the other school of thought contends:

The Other Side

1. That the passing of our western frontier does not mean an inevitable "shrinking" of private enterprise.
2. That neither does the slowing down of the rate of population growth mean such a shrinkage. Industrial expansion makes for population increase far more than population increase makes for industrial expansion.
3. That it is not true that our economic plant is entirely built—or over-built.
4. That it is absolutely false that there are no new industries in sight to provide industrial expansion. "There are many new industries waiting to be born—waiting for the proper climate," with regard to investment and enterprise opportunities.

Takes Anti-New Deal Stand

Dr. Frank, in his prepared address, did not specifically identify either group as New Deal or anti-New Deal, but in his discussion and particularly in his comments during the forum that followed he made it clear where he stood.

He had prefaced his discussion with the statement that proponents of both groups could be found in both the Democratic and Republican parties.

Despite his promise and apparent effort to keep away from politics, Dr. Frank couldn't resist the opportunity to get in a dig at Roosevelt in answering a forum questioner.

The question was, "If the Harvard-Tufts view expresses the New Deal philosophy, which you say is pessimistic, how do you account for Roosevelt's optimism?"

Dr. Frank reflected a moment and then began his answer by noting that the book written by the Harvard-Tufts economists was the New Deal's "Mein Kampf."

"Neo-Liberalism"

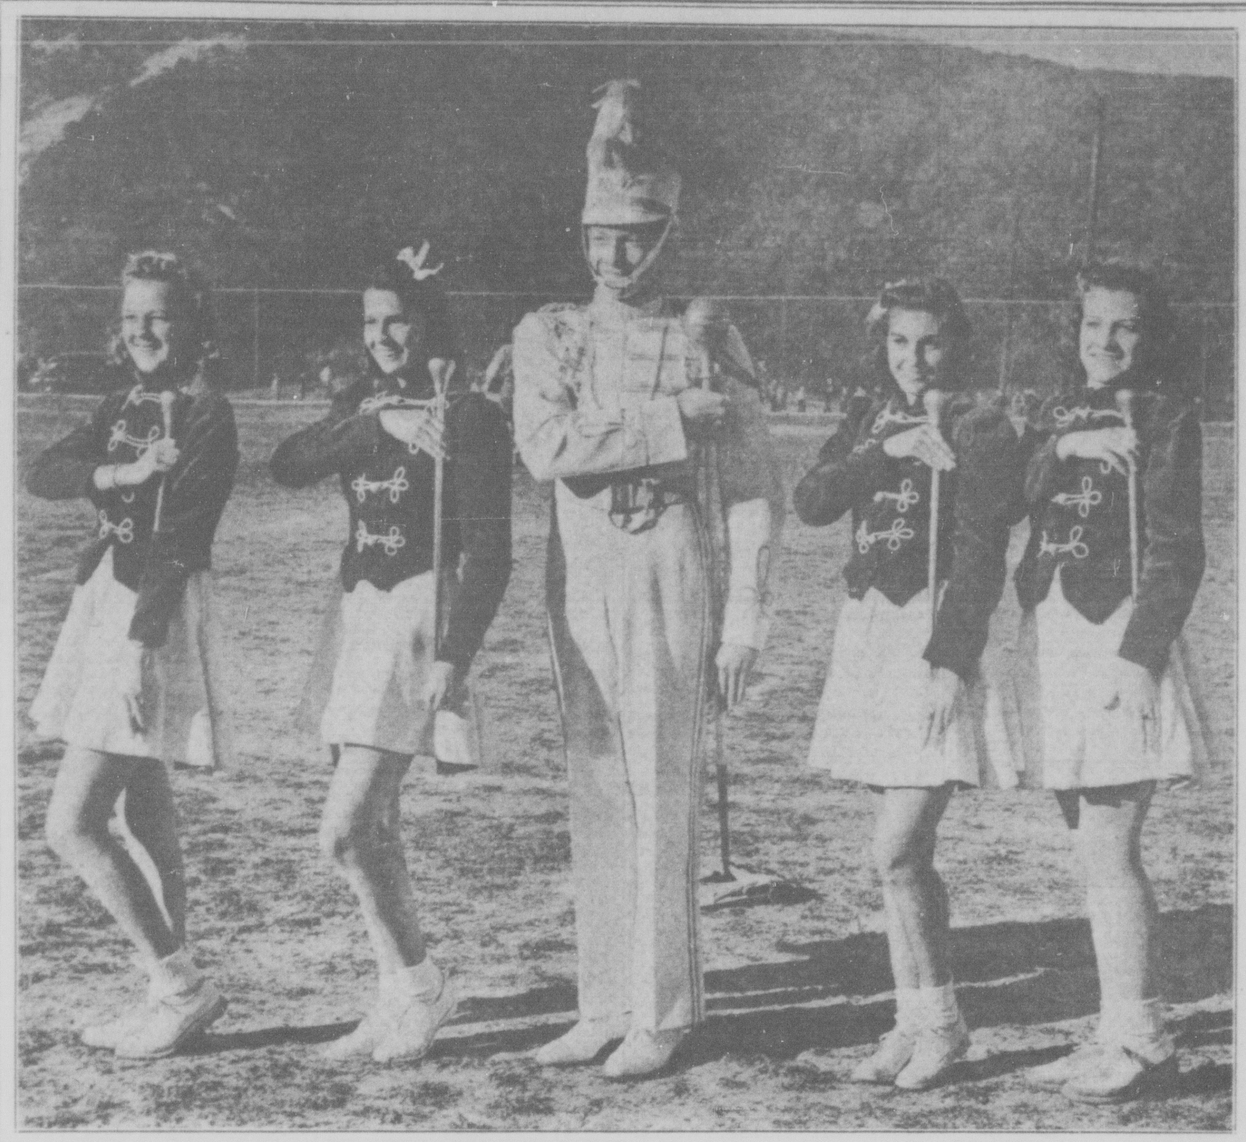

He then went on to explain that this apparent paradox was like the case of "thousands of Americans," who, while loudly proclaiming themselves liberals, embrace the tenets of Mussolini and Hitler, with the exception of their race prejudices and the use of force.

"This is the neo-liberalism," he told the audience.

Dr. Glenn Frank Tells Reporter What GOP Candidate Should Be

Dr. Glenn Frank, here to open the Community Forum series, donned his tux shirt last night in a most deliberate and methodical manner.

And in a simultaneous interview in his room at the Fort Cumberland hotel, he disposed of the war in Europe in the same deliberate way.

As calmly as he fished for his collar button, he declared that the United States has no conceivable reason for entering the European war, and never will have, as far as he can see.

Having said that, and having gotten his collar in place, he considered the matter more or less closed.

Not Excited by Embargo Battle

He didn't see much to get excited about in the neutrality fight going on in Congress.

Embargo or cash and carry, he thinks will keep us out of war as long as we "keep straight thinking ahead of emotion."

Having said we had no reason to go to war, he brought out that we might go to war anyway because of our emotions.

"I can't conceive how we will get into war unless we adjourn our intelligence," he said.

Pressed for his opinion on whether America will stay out, this citizen of the Middle West said:

Guesses We'll Keep Out

"If I had to record a guess right now, I'd say we will keep out. But then that may be prompted by my feeling that we must keep out."

Americans, he said, must keep their eyes fixed closely on domestic problems.

Although he is the chief "program planner" of the Republican party, or perhaps because of this, Dr. Frank shied away from politics. "I handle policies and programs, not politics, and there's a difference, you know," he said.

Introducing the GOP Candidates

He didn't have anything to say about President Roosevelt, or a third term. But, after considerable delliberation, he answered a question as to what the Republican candidate for president in 1940 should be.

He said that, aside from the personal qualities that are essential for leadership, the standard bearer of the GOP in 1940 should be:

"First, a man who is able to view the European and world situation rationally instead of emotionally, and

"Second, a man who has not been hypnotized by the ancient delusion that there is some short cut to the well being of the American people, through centralized political power, a man, who, in his bones, actually believes in a system of private enterprise and political liberty."

No Candidate Himself

Dr. Frank, who has been mentioned with mild enthusiasm in some quarters as a potential presidential candidate, said, "I have never been a candidate for office, and I never expect to be."

Dr. Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin, has no desire to go back to the job of running a university again, he said.

He's now in the publishing business, and he likes it. He puts out the magazine "Rural Progress," which he says has a circulation of 2,000,000. He lives in Madison, Wis., and Chicago. He is 52.

Speaks Next in Boston

Dr. Frank arrived here yesterday afternoon by train from Chicago and will catch the midnight sleeper for New York. He will be busy with conferences, business and political, in New York today. Friday he will be in Boston to speak twice before the State Teachers Association. Then he will head back for Chicago, where, he says, practically everyone is against getting into any war.

Dr. Frank said during his interview that the didn't know what he would talk about at the Forum. It depended on what his audience looked like, he said.

Police To Get Two-Way Radio

Expect To Equip Four Mobile Units

Police were jubilant last night over the possibility of having two-way radio outfits installed in police cruisers.

The elation on the part of the officers was the result of the announcement by Commissioner Harry A. Manley and Mayor Harry Irvine that bids and demonstrations would be asked.

In the event the radios are purchased, they will be installed in the two police cruising cars, in the general police car, and the machine of Chief Oscar A. Eyerman.

The mayor and Commissioner Manley estimated that the equipment would cost approximately $4,000. Mayor Irvine said a down payment would probably be made, with arrangements to clear the rest of the debt in twelve or eighteen months.

The central broadcasting station for the system would be the sergeant's desk at headquarters.

WPA's Pre-School Worker Attend Series of Classes

An instruction course for county leaders in the pre-school work being sponsored by the WPA will be concluded this afternoon with a class at the Cresaptown school at 1:30.

Other class sessions, conducted by Miss Edith Ball, state supervisor of recreation for the WPA, were held Tuesday and yesterday.

There are now more than 200 children enrolled in the nine preschool groups sponsored by WPA in the county. These are at Barton, Pekin, Lonaconing, Frostburg, Mt. Savage, Cresaptown, and the Salvation Army citadel and the Keating Memorial Day Nursery in Cumberland.

1,296 Bike Riders Pay $259 for Tags

Bicycle riding kids today were responsible for Cumberland's being $259.20 richer.

This amount yesterday was turned over to City Hall by Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman. It represents the dimes and nickles paid in by youngsters for bicycle licenses.

A total of 1,296 Cumberland kids all bought license tags at twenty cents apiece.

Police said yesterday that the licensing of bicycles had proved a big help in recovering stolen wheels.

Lions 'Repeal' Arms Embargo

Four New Members Are Inducted

Debaters favoring repeal of the arms embargo as more likely to keep America out of war than its retention won out at yesterday's luncheon meeting of the Lions club at the YMCA.

Speakers for repeal of the embargo were C. P. Jolley, Ernest Hutcheson, and Gordon Bowie. On the negative side were J. K. Snyder, James Hill, and Calvin Keiter. A vote of the members judged the affirmative side had won.

The members also took a current events quiz, with the prize winner to be announced next week. The quiz was conducted by Attorney T. L. Richards.

Four new members were inducted. They are Larry Cessna, James Hill, Joseph Trenton, and Frank A. Martin.

P. E. Myers was awarded a key membership for outstanding service to the organization.

Dr. L. E. Daugherty presided at the meeting.

NYA Author To Visit Projects in County

Mrs. Betty Lindley, a member of the Washington staff of the National Youth Administration who, along with her husband, wrote a book called "A New Deal for Youth", will visit NYA projects in Allegany county this afternoon.

Mrs. Lindley expressed the desire "to see what some of the girls are doing."

Sanders To Address Ridgeley P-TA

The Ridgeley High school Parent-Teacher association will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the new high school building.

J. C. Sanders, assistant superintendent to the Mineral county schools, will speak. A musical program will also be presented.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Kyle G. Wilson, of Swanton, announce the birth of a daughter yesterday evening at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. McIntosh, 515 Eastern avenue, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Thomas, of Cresaptown, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

CIO Offensive In Construction Field Opens

Workers Are Called To Meeting Tonight To Ask Charter

An invasion of the American Federation of Labor building and construction field by the Congress of Industrial Organization is developing here.

The first wide-spread attempt to crash into the powerful construction unions is due to be made tonight at 7 o'clock at a meeting at the headquarters of Local 26, United Rubber Workers.

Building and construction workers, laborers, truck drivers and mechanics have been invited to attend the meeting, Harry E. Castle, president of the Western Maryland Industrial Union Council, revealed yesterday.

Quiet activities along this line have been under way in Cumberland for the past six weeks, it was revealed. Main purpose of tonight's meeting will be for the purpose of making formal application for a charter in order to establish a distinct CIO unit here.

Penn Ave. PTA Program Postponed until Nov. 2

The entertainment scheduled by the Parent-Teacher Association of Pennsylvania Avenue school for Friday night has been postponed until Thursday, Nov. 2, Principal Lula M. Blonskey announced last night.

The entertainment will be the first in a series of programs to be put on by the PTA to raise funds for school activities.

The proceeds from the Nov. 2 affair will be given to the free lunch fund.

The public is invited to the program, for which there will be no admission charge. Funds will be raised by sale of refreshments, however.

A diversified and original program is promised.

McNutt-for-President Boomed in Letters

News that a McNutt-for-President boom is proceeding in Cumberland in a quiet way was revealed yesterday by several ex-service men in the community.

Letters bearing the names of ten well-known veterans, along with the life history of the former Indiana governor, have been received by veterans and Legionnaires in this section.

The letter points out significantly that Paul V. McNutt has always been active in behalf of ex-service men, enumerates the offices he has held, and urges that "you join with us in promoting his candidacy."

Mrs. Ann Leasure, of Brookfield avenue, will be confined for two weeks more in St. Agnes hospital, Baltimore, where she is convalescing from a foot operation.

Spaghetti in LaVale

LaVale firemen will dish up spaghetti suppers at the fire house today from 5 to 8 p. m., Chief R. J. Snyder announced. The public is invited.

Citizens Meet To Do Something About Taxes

County Committee To Discuss Problem At "Y" Tonight

Real estate taxes and public expenses are due to get a going over tonight at the Central YMCA, when representatives from every community in Allegany county start discussing what to do about them.

Tonight's round-up of county citizens has been sponsored by the Civic Improvement committee of the Cumberland Chamber of Commerce, which is making an intensive study of the county tax problem.

Citizens who tonight will roll up their sleeves and wade into the tax problem will represent a good cross-section of the county's population. The discussion tonight is expected to fall into two categories.

Seek Tax Relief

Those are:

One—Municipal and county expenses and the possibility of cutting them down.

Two—Real estate tax relief and how to effect it.

The meeting, which is set for 7:30 p. m. has been called by Frank B. Smith, chairman of the Civic Improvement committee. Other members are James Alfred Avirett, Mrs. P. W. Cavanaugh, Webster K. Edwards, William L. Geppert, George P. Hazelwood, Mayor Harry Irvine, Clarence Litzenburg, Edgar Reynolds, F. H. Ankeney, George G. Young, and Mrs. Louisa P. Henderson.

Key Men Named in County

In promoting the program, members of the civic committee went afield in the county to appoint key men in various communities to take up the problems under discussion.

Those appointees are: George Stern and William and George Jenkins, all of Frostburg; John Callan, of Little Orleans; Horace P. Whitworth and John Barnard, both of Westernport; Arthur Hoffa, of Barton; Jesse Athey, of Oldtown; Russell Dolly, of Flintstone; and representatives from the Cumberland Kiwanis, Rotary, Exchange, Lions and Business and Professional Women's Club.

"No Slap at Officials"

The men selected to act as chairmen in their various communities were requested to select capable committee members to assist with the job to be done.

Members of the Civic Improvement committee point out that their contemplated program is not to be construed as a slap at any municipal or county official.

Those connected with the committee's program declare that they are well aware that taxes must be raised and expenses paid.

Tonight's meeting, they aver, is merely an interested effort to determine if costs can be cut and real estate taxes lowered.

Criminal Docket Is Swept Clean

Elderly Man Guilty On Morals Charge

Conviction of elderly Milton Hoff on a serious morals charge yesterday afternoon brought to a close the criminal docket in Circuit court.

Trial of civil cases is set for today, although a check of the criminal docket showed some few cases yet to be disposed of.

A jury deliberated more than three hours before finding Hoff guilty of contributing to the delinquency of a young boy. The case was sent up from Juvenile court when the defendant, represented by Attorney Elmer B. Gower, demanded trial by jury.

Sentence will probably be passed today, it was indicated.

Earlier, an 11-man jury had acquitted Louis Donius of a larceny charge, but Donius went back to the city jail to serve the remainder of a five-day sentence for drunkenness.

Donius, who was defended in Circuit court by Attorney Gower, had been found guilty in Police court Monday of drunkenness and given the 5-day sentence. Then he was haled into Trial Magistrates court to answer a charge of stealing copper from the B. & O. railroad shops. He asked a jury trial and was given quick service yesterday.

The 11-man jury was impanelled by agreement of Gower and State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris.

NLRB Schedules 'Mystery' Hearing

'Hall Is Hired', But for What?

City Hall is scheduled to be the scene of a National Labor Relations Board hearing on Nov. 16-17, W. M. Aicker, regional director, stated yesterday.

The mayor and council Monday granted the board permission to hold a session in the City Hall auditorium in reply to a request from Aicker.

When called by telephone yesterday in his Baltimore office, Aicker stated that he had received his orders to "hire a hall" from the Washington offices of the labor board.

"Although the regular notice of hearing has not as yet been sent out, I am assuming that the Cumberland case is for the purpose of reopening the Celanese representation hearing which was held two years ago.

"You will recall that no decision was handed down by the board at that time and hasn't been since. I believe that the board feels more testimony should be taken before a decision is made."

Mr. Aicker's statement was the only light shed on the situation yesterday. Cumberland labor leaders and attorneys said they didn't know anything about the case, although several speculated as to what it was all about.

Just why the board should now reopen the Celanese case was not known yesterday.

Court Booked Up

Business is humming in Trial Magistrate's Court these brisk October days, it was revealed yesterday. Judge Oliver H. Bruce's court docket yesterday showed that the court is booked up solid all this week and next. Civil cases predominate.

Men Take Spotlight

Tannery Repairs Indicate Plant May Re-Open

Republic Steel Official Here, Too; Doesn't Comment

Rumors that the Union Tanning Co. would shortly resume operations here were still unconfirmed today, although Supervisor W. G. Slough admits receiving orders to start extensive improvements on the plant.

Orders received by Slough from the New York offices of the company were to the effect that necessary improvements be made at once, including painting the exterior of the buildings.

Today a crew of men was busy carrying out the improvements ordered by the company.

"What Do You Think?"

Asked if the general improvement program meant that the tannery was due to reopen, Slough replied evasively, "What do you think?"

Commenting on the improvements being made, Slough stated that the interior of the tannery was generally in shipshape condition.

"We could start operations in four days or so," he said.

The exterior of the plant requires more attention than the interior, he said. Most of the work includes painting and repairs.

Former Workers Expect Call

Quizzed regarding prospects of reopening the plant, Slough said, "Well, the company has assured former workers that they will start up if business conditions warrant it. When the plant was closed down it was solely due to poor business conditions."

A rumor that former tannery workers would be first to be rehired in the event the plant starts up could not be verified yesterday through Slough.

Republic Steel Official Here

Meanwhile, the presence of another industrial leader in Cumberland yesterday caused some speculation downtown. The executive, John Read, Republic Steel official who is at the Fort Cumberland Hotel.

Mr. Read, to date, has advanced no suggestion that would indicate that the idle N. & G. Taylor Tinplate Mill may resume operations.

Mayor Oozes Optimism

Optimism fairly oozed from Cumberland's mayor yesterday when asked if he knew anything concrete about the status of the tannery and the Republic Steel plant.

"Times are getting awful good," the mayor declared. "I imagine we will see a few things happen after Congress gets through with the neutrality bill."

However, the mayor offered no enlightening information that would exactly justify his optimism.

Garage Owner Dies Suddenly

Louis Preaskorn Drops Dead at Work

Louis Preaskorn, 51-year-old mechanic and garage operator, dropped dead at work in Ridgeley yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Preaskorn was well known in this section. He was formerly an engineer on the Western Maryland but was forced to retire from the railroad because of an injury. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Lodcomotive Engineers.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Edenhart Preaskorn; three sons, Charles H., of Cumberland, and William L. and James of Ridgeley, and two brothers and two sisters, Ferdinand W., of Cumberland; Arthur, of Johnstown, Pa.; Mrs. Gertrude, of Cumberland, and Mrs. Clyde Baer, of Cumberland.

Acute Indigestion Hits Man on Street

A Bedford street man who slumped to the street last night in downtown Cumberland was resting comfortably at Allegany hospital at midnight.

Hospital attendants said that Charles E. Ralston Sr., 30, of 15 Bedford street, fell when he had an attack of acute indigestion. The attack occured at the corner of Park and Baltimore streets.

Officers John Powers and H. Kennard took Ralston to the hospital.

Deaths

Woodrow Wilson Null

Woodrow Wilson Null, of Ridgeley, died yesterday at Allegany hospital from blood poisoning brought on by a sinus infection. He was 41.

Mr. Null was an employe of the Celanese Corporation and a member of the Ridgeley Methodist Church.

Surviving him are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Null; widow, Mrs. Mabel Null; five brothers, John, Howard, Kenneth and Wilmer; and five sisters, Mrs. Roy Snyder, Mrs. Herbert Barnett, Mrs. Ray Billmeyer, and Mrs. Henry Huff.

Baby Girl Tumbles out of Car, Slow Driving Saved Her Life

A 22-months-old girl probably owes her life to the fact that her uncle is a slow driver.

Glenda Campbell, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Campbell of 18 Pennsylvania avenue, fell out of Uncle Blair Ullery's moving car early yesterday afternoon, but despite numerous injuries, she is expected to recover.

Allegany hospital attaches said the little girl suffered multiple bruises, a puncture wound in the head, lacerations of the lip in which sutures had to be put, and severe "brush-burns" and bruises about the abdomen.

Her condition, however, was described as "good."

The attendants said they were told that Glenda was riding in the back seat of her uncle's car en route to Romney, W. Va., on West Virginia Route 28 when she somehow fell or pushed against the right rear door.

The door was not tightly closed and flew open.

Baby Glenda tumbled out onto the roadway. Her horrified mother ran back to pick her up, and the car, which had been fortunately moving slowly, speeded up to rush the injured infant to Romney for treatment by a doctor.

Later she was brought back to Cumberland and x-rayed by another physician, who recommended that she be taken to the hospital.

Riding in the car besides Baby Glenda, her mother, and Uncle Blair were the child's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Ullery, of First stree

Forum Audience Gives Big Cheer For Embargo

Dr. Frank Urges U.S. To Tend to Own Problems over Here

The United States should stay out of the war and spend its time in putting its own house in order, Dr. Glenn Frank told an audience of 700 at a Community Forum lecture at Fort Hill high school last night.

His advocacy of retention of the arms embargo and the placing of shipments of all other goods "on an iron-clad unqualified cash-and-carry basis" drew spirited applause from the audience.

Admitting that seeing up such a distinction is "not logical," the former president of the University of Wisconsin, now Republican policy chief, pointed out that wheat, for example, is as important to a belligerent as munitions.

Repeal Would Lengthen War

But drawing such a line is psychologically sound, he continued, stating that repeal of the arms embargo would probably tend to prolong rather than shorten the war.

The speaker was emphatic in his plea for U. S. neutrality. The United States faces two alternatives, he declared:

"The United States must stay out of European wars entirely, or it must stay in European affairs permanently."

Neither the United States nor the rest of the world would derive any real benefit from our entry into the present struggle, Dr. Frankk asserted.

"It would affect only the military outcome, and there would be absolutely no assurance that it would, in the end, result in a settlement any more sound than that which ended the last war. And it probably wouldn't be as sound."

The speaker warned, too, of the grave dangers to America's political and economic systems should it plunge into the European war.

Can Our System Survive War?

"If we enter," he said, "it will be impossible for us to return to normal living for a generation or more. And I am gravely doubtful whether either our form of government or economic system could survice.

"Participation in this war would affect this country far more seriously than did its entrance into the last World War."

Dr. Frank concluded his discussion of the foreign situation as it affects America with a "fervent hope that the American people keep their heads—and use them too."

Then, turning to the domestic situation, he plunged into a discussion of the two schools of economic thought in America today.

Two Schools of Economic Thought

One, he said, holds that the United States has reached the zenith of its economic development and must depend increasingly on the federal government to maintain the national income.

The other, he explained, vigorously contradicts this thesis, believing that American industry and business can and will expand to provide new investment fields and more and more jobs.

He declared that the first theory, expressed by a group of Harvard-Tufts economists in a 20,000-word book entitled "An Economic Program for America," is based on the premises:

Basis for First School

1. That the frontier is gone.
2. That the rate of population growth is slowing down.
3. That our economic plant is already built—if not overbuilt.
4. That there are no new industries in sight to pull the country out its economic bog.

In answer to this, he said, the other school of thought contends:

The Other Side

1. That the passing of our western frontier does not mean an inevitable "shrinking" of private enterprise.
2. That neither does the slowing down of the rate of population growth mean such a shrinkage. Industrial expansion makes for population increase far more than population increase makes for industrial expansion.
3. That it is not true that our economic plant is entirely built—or over-built.
4. That it is absolutely false that there are no new industries in sight to provide industrial expansion. "There are many new industries waiting to be born—waiting for the proper climate," with regard to investment and enterprise opportunities.

Takes Anti-New Deal Stand

Dr. Frank, in his prepared address, did not specifically identify either group as New Deal or anti-New Deal, but in his discussion and particularly in his comments during the forum that followed he made it clear where he stood.

He had prefaced his discussion with the statement that proponents of both groups could be found in both the Democratic and Republican parties.

Despite his promise and apparent effort to keep away from politics, Dr. Frank couldn't resist the oppostunity to get in a dig at Roosevelt in answering a forum questioner.

The question was, "If the Harvard-Tufts view expressed the New Deal philosophy, which you say is pessimistic, how do you account for Roosevelt's optimism?"

Dr. Frank reflected a moment and then began his answer by noting that the book written by the Harvard-Tufts economists was the New Deal's "Mein Kampf."

"Neo-Liberalism"

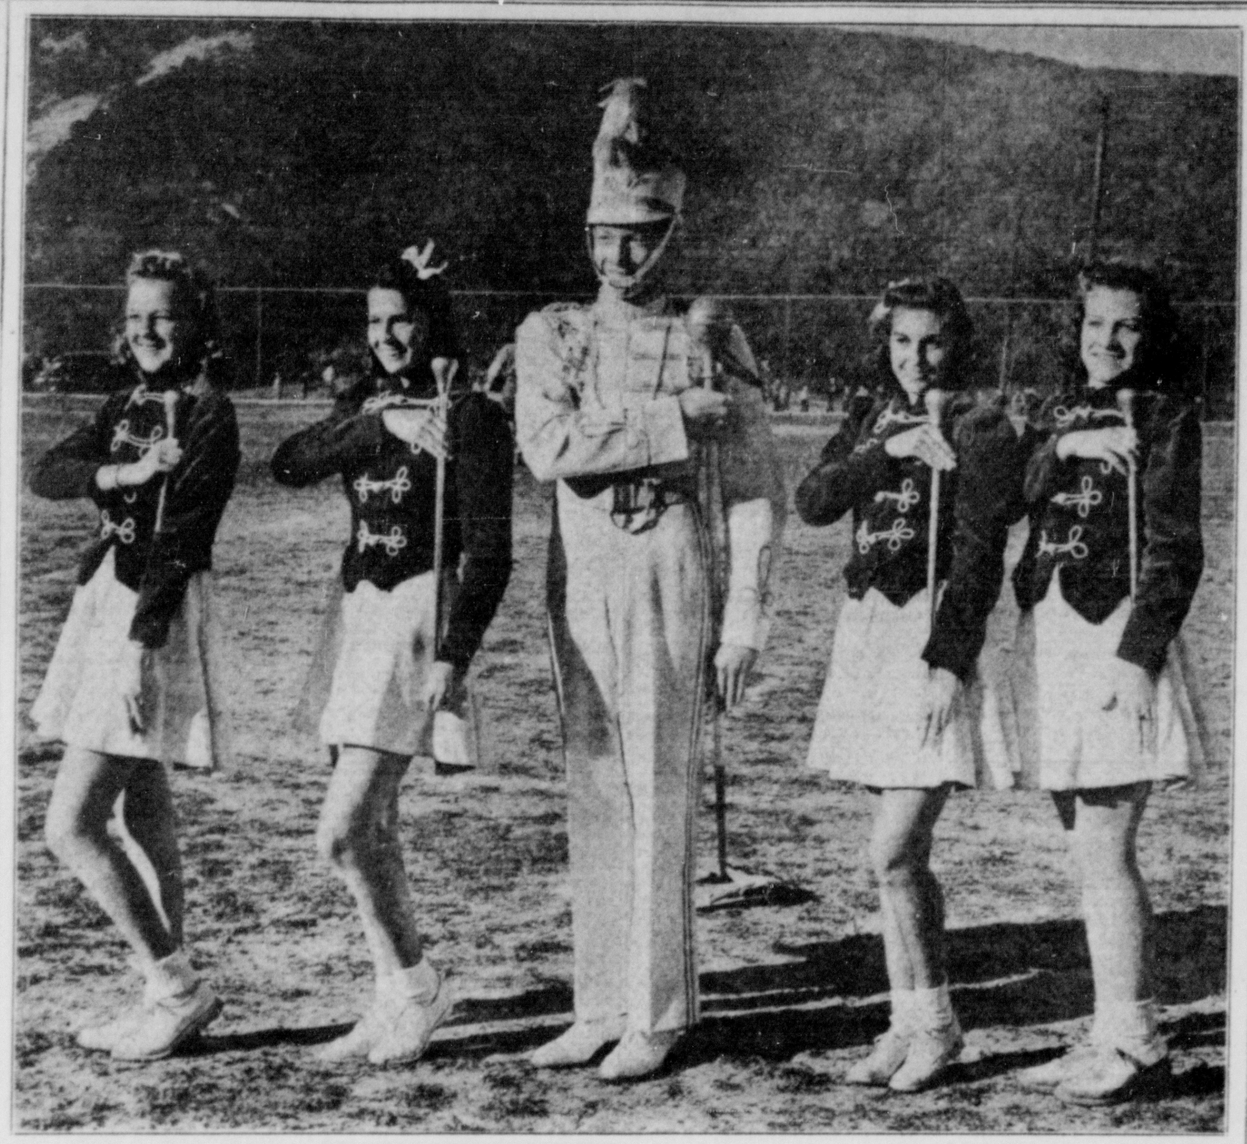

He then went on to explain that this apparent paradox was like the case of "thousands of Americans," who, while loudly proclaiming themselves liberals, embrace the tenets of Mussolini and Hitler, with the exception of their race prejudices and the use of force.

"This is the neo-liberalism," he told the audience.

"And as for accounting for Roosevelt's optimism—well, you can't account for intellectual confusion."

The remark drew laughter from the audience.

Dr. Glenn Frank Tells Reporter What GOP Candidate Should Be

Dr. Glenn Frank, here to open the Community Forum series, donned his tux shirt last night in a most deliberate and methodical manner.

And in a simultaneous interview in his room at the Fort Cumberland hotel, he disposed of the war in Europe in the same deliberate way.

As calmly as he fished for his collar button, he declared that the United States has no conceivable reason for entering the European war, and never will have, as far as he can see.

Having said that, and having gotten his collar in place, he considered the matter more or less closed.

Not Excited by Embargo Battle

He didn't see much to get excited about in the neutrality fight going on in Congress.

Embargo or cash and carry, he thinks will keep us out of war as long as we "keep straight thinking ahead of emotion."

Having said we had no reason to go to war, he brought out that we might go to war anyway because of our emotions.

"I can't conceive how we will get into war unless we adjourn our intelligence," he said.

Pressed for his opinion on whether America will stay out, this citizen of the Middle West said:

Guesses We'll Keep Out

"If I had to record a guess right now, I'd say we will keep out. But then that may be prompted by my feeling that we must keep out."

Americans, he said, must keep their eyes fixed closely on domestic problems.

Although he is the chief "program planner" of the Republican party, or perhaps because of this, Dr. Frank shied away from politics. "I handle policies and programs, not politics, and there's a difference, you know," he said.

Introducing the GOP Candidates

He didn't have anything to say about President Roosevelt, or a third term. But, after considerable delliberation, he answered a question as to what the Republican candidate for president in 1940 should be.

He said that, aside from the personal qualities that are essential for leadership, the standard bearer of the GOP in 1940 should be:

"First, a man who is able to view the European and world situation rationally instead of emotionally, and

"Second, a man who has not been hypnotized by the ancient delusion that there is some short cut to the well being of the American people, through centralized political power, a man, who, in his bones, actually believes in a system of private enterprise and political liberty."

No Candidate Himself

Dr. Frank, who has been mentioned with mild enthusiasm in some quarters as a potential presidential candidate, said, "I have never been a candidate for office, and I never expect to be."

Dr. Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin, has no desire to go back to the job of running a university again, he said.

He's now in the publishing business, and he likes it. He puts out the magazine "Rural Progress," which he says has a circulation of 2,000,000. He lives in Madison, Wis., and Chicago. He is 52.

Speaks Next in Boston

Dr. Frank arrived here yesterday afternoon by train from Chicago and will catch the midnight sleeper for New York. He will be busy with conferences, business and political, in New York today. Friday he will be in Boston to speak twice before the State Teachers Association. Then he will head back for Chicago, where, he says, practically everyone is against getting into any war.

Dr. Frank said during his interview that the didn't know what he would talk about at the Forum. It depended on what his audience looked like, he said.

Police To Get Two-Way Radio

Expect To Equip Four Mobile Units

Police were jubilant last night over the possibility of having two-way radio outfits installed in police cruisers.

The elation on the part of the officers was the result of the announcement by Commissioner Harry A. Manley and Mayor Harry Irvine that bids and demonstrations would be asked.

In the event the radios are purchased, they will be installed in the two police cruising cars, in the general police car, and the machine of Chief Oscar A. Eyerman.

The mayor and Commissioner Manley estimated that the equipment would cost approximately $4,000. Mayor Irvine said a down payment would probably be made, with arrangements to clear the rest of the debt in twelve or eighteen months.

The central broadcasting station for the system would be the sergeant's desk at headquarters.

WPA's Pre-School Worker Attend Series of Classes

An instruction course for county leaders in the pre-school work being sponsored by the WPA will be concluded this afternoon with a class at the Cresaptown school at 1:30.

Other class sessions, conducted by Miss Edith Ball, state supervisor of recreation for the WPA, were held Tuesday and yesterday.

There are now more than 200 children enrolled in the nine preschool groups sponsored by WPA in the county. These are at Barton, Pekin, Lonaconing, Frostburg, Mt. Savage, Cresaptown, and the Salvation Army citadel and the Keating Memorial Day Nursery in Cumberland.

1,296 Bike Riders Pay $259 for Tags

Bicycle riding kids today were responsible for Cumberland's being $259.20 richer.

This amount yesterday was turned over to City Hall by Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman. It represents the dimes and nickles paid in by youngsters for bicycle licenses.

A total of 1,296 Cumberland kids all bought license tags at twenty cents apiece.

Police said yesterday that the licensing of bicycles had proved a big help in recovering stolen wheels.

Lions 'Repeal' Arms Embargo

Four New Members Are Inducted

Debaters favoring repeal of the arms embargo as more likely to keep America out of war than its retention won out at yesterday's luncheon meeting of the Lions club at the YMCA.

Speakers for repeal of the embargo were C. P. Jolley, Ernest Hutcheson, and Gordon Bowie. On the negative side were J. K. Snyder, James Hill, and Calvin Keiter. A vote of the members judged the affirmative side had won.

The members also took a current events quiz, with the prize winner to be announced next week. The quiz was conducted by Attorney T. L. Richards.

Four new members were inducted. They are Larry Cessna, James Hill, Joseph Trenton, and Frank A. Martin.

P. E. Myers was awarded a key membership for outstanding service to the organization.

Dr. L. E. Daugherty presided at the meeting.

NYA Author To Visit Projects in County

Mrs. Betty Lindley, a member of the Washington staff of the National Youth Administration who, along with her husband, wrote a book called "A New Deal for Youth", will visit NYA projects in Allegany county this afternoon.

Mrs. Lindley expressed the desire "to see what some of the girls are doing."

Sanders To Address Ridgeley P-TA

The Ridgeley High school Parent-Teacher association will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the new high school building.

J. C. Sanders, assistant superintendent to the Mineral county schools, will speak. A musical program will also be presented.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Kyle G. Wilson, of Swanton, announce the birth of a daughter yesterday evening at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. McIntosh, 515 Eastern avenue, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Thomas, of Cresaptown, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

CIO Offensive In Construction Field Opens

Workers Are Called To Meeting Tonight To Ask Charter

An invasion of the American Federation of Labor building and construction field by the Congress of Industrial Organization is developing here.

The first wide-spread attempt to crash into the powerful construction unions is due to be made tonight at 7 o'clock at a meeting at the headquarters of Local 26, United Rubber Workers.

Building and construction workers, laborers, truck drivers and mechanics have been invited to attend the meeting, Harry E. Castle, president of the Western Maryland Industrial Union Council, revealed yesterday.

Quiet activities along this line have been under way in Cumberland for the past six weeks, it was revealed. Main purpose of tonight's meeting will be for the purpose of making formal application for a charter in order to establish a distinct CIO unit here.

Men Take Spotlight

Tannery Repairs Indicate Plant May Re-Open

Republic Steel Official Here, Too; Doesn't Comment

Rumors that the Union Tanning Co. would shortly resume operations here were still unconfirmed today, although Supervisor W. O. Slough admits receiving orders to start extensive improvements on the plant.

Orders received by Slough from the New York offices of the company were to the effect that necessary improvements be made at once including painting the exterior of the buildings.

Today a crew of men was busy carrying out the improvements ordered by the company.

"What Do You Think?"

Asked if the general improvement program meant that the tannery was due to reopen, Slough replied evasively, "What do you think?"

Commenting on the improvements being made, Slough stated that the interior of the tannery was generally in shipshape condition.

"We could start operations in four days or so," he said.

The exterior of the plant requires more attention than the interior, he said. Most of the work includes painting and repairs.

Former Workers Expect Call

Quizzed regarding prospects for reopening the plant, Slough said, "Well, the company has assured former workers that they will start up if business conditions warrant it. When the plant was closed down it was solely due to poor business conditions."

A rumor that former tannery workers would be first to be rehired in the event the plant starts could not be verified yesterday through Slough.

Republic Steel Official Here

Meanwhile, the presence of another industrial leader in Cumberland yesterday caused some speculation downtown. The executive is John Read, Republic Steel official who is at the Fort Cumberland Hotel.

Mr. Read, to date, has advanced no suggestion that would indicate that the idle N. & G. Taylor Tinplate Mill may resume operations.

Mayor Oozes Optimism

Optimism fairly oozed from Cumberland's mayor yesterday when asked if he knew anything concrete about the status of the tannery and the Republic Steel plant.

"Times are getting awful good," the mayor declared. "I imagine we will see a few things happen after Congress gets through with the neutrality bill."

However, the mayor offered no enlightening information that would exactly justify his optimism.

Baby Girl Tumbles out of Car, Slow Driving Saved Her Life

Glenda Campbell, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Campbell of 18 Pennsylvania avenue, fell out of Uncle Blair Ullery's moving car early yesterday afternoon, but despite numerous injuries, she is expected to recover.

Allegany hospital attaches said the little girl suffered multiple bruises, a puncture wound in the head, lacerations of the lip in which sutures had to be put, and severe "brush-burns" and bruises about the abdomen.

Her condition, however, was described as "good."

The attendants said they were told that Glenda was riding in the back seat of her uncle's car en route to Romney, W. Va., on West Virginia Route 28 when she somehow fell or pushed against the right rear door.

The door was not tightly closed and flew open.

Baby Glenda tumbled out onto the roadway. Her horrified mother ran back to pick her up, and the car, which had been fortunately moving slowly, speeded up to rush the injured infant to Romney for treatment by a doctor.

Later she was brought back to Cumberland and x-rayed by another physician, who recommended that she be taken to the hospital.

Riding in the car besides Baby Glenda, her mother, and Uncle Blair were the child's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Ullery, of First stree
